WIMBLEDON, July 8.—Mrs. Molla Mallory, American tennis champion and the challenger in the British national championship, today lost, and lost badly to Suzanne Lenglen, the champion, in the presence of the king and queen.

Fighting for her reputation as a sportswoman, the French girl, probably picturing the courts at Forest Hills last summer when she was criticised for retiring in the American championships, went into the game today to prove her courage.

Mlle. Lenglen more than wiped out the remembrance of the last meeting with Mrs. Mallory when, trailing far behind, she had a violent coughing spell and quit the courts in tears, defaulting the match.

Lets Mrs. Mallory Beat Herself.

As the match—the finals in the tournament which it is conceded carries with victory the woman's tennis championship of the world—went on Mrs. Mallory proved her own undoing, but it is doubtful whether, at her best, she would have held her own with Mlle. Lenglen on the form the French ace showed today.

Suzanne's strategy can be summed up in one sentence. Though she showed occasional flashes of real brilliance, she was content, for the most part, to let Molla beat herself. This is a game at which the Frenchwoman excels.

For instance, Suzanne only went to the net two or three times during the whole match. She played the ball back and back again to Molla until at last the American champion hit into the net or out of the court. More frequently it was into the net.

Only when she had taken the game to 40—15 would Suzanne take a chance on really hard hitting and the harder she hit the more Molla liked it; a fact which the French woman was not slow to discover and profit by.

Molla Erratic in Play.

Molla was just annoying at times. She would get back a difficult shot brilliantly and then hit the easiest sort of puffe right into the middle of the net.

When the score was three to one games against her, Mrs. Mallory began to drive as she really can drive to Suzanne's backhand. It was a duel of giants then and Molla won although it was Suzanne's service. Then, for some reason, she abandoned these tactics and lost the next two games.

Feeling safe for the set, Suzanne came to the net, but even then it was Molla's mistakes more than the champion's severity which won the last game and the set.

Two Unfavorable Line Decisions.

Two line decisions, obviously bad ones, were given against Molla in the opening game of the second set. They lost her that game but as she lost the next five as well, there is little more to be said. Mrs. Mallory's long drives were good for they kept Suzanne well back, and her general direction was good except at those inexplicable moments when, for no apparent reason, she hit the easiest balls into the net.

It was not Molla's big day. She didn't reproduce the form she showed against Mrs. Beamish yesterday, except in occasional patches, while the champion was always steady, always sure and at times really brilliant.

CROWD OF 14,000

[Copyright 1922: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, July 8.—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen still is the world's champion woman tennis player. She met Molla Bjurstedt Mallory today at Wimbledon and defeated her by two sets to nothing, the games being 6—2, 6—0. Mrs. Mallory failed to score at all in the first game and from that moment there was very little doubt of the result. Mlle. Lenglen dominated the court in nearly every game, and secured her title in barely 35 minutes play.

There was an enormous crowd to see the match. Every reserved seat had been sold days ago and the crowd began to gather at the gates at 7 o'clock in the morning in the hope of getting at least standing room. It was officially announced that 14,000 persons were spectators. Thousands of others were turned away.

SHOWING THAT OUR CRIMINAL COURT PROCEDURE HAS MUCH TO LEARN FROM THE ENGLISH COURT PROCEDURE

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

A member of Parliament was recently sentenced to seven years' penal servitude. In pronouncing sentence the judge said: "Horatio Bottomley, you have been rightly convicted by the jury of this long series of heartless frauds. These poor people trusted you, and you robbed them of £150,000 in ten months. The crime is aggravated by your high position, by the number and poverty of your victims, by the trust they reposed in you. It is aggravated by the magnitude of your frauds and by the callous effrontery by which your frauds were committed. I see no mitigation whatever. The sentence of the court upon you is that you be kept in penal servitude for seven years."

In this country Justice would have had to fight her way through a terrific barrage before she could land a member of Congress in prison.

3 SAVED FROM UNDERTOW, BUT FOURTH DROWNS

Two girls and a man who were caught in a heavy undertow while swimming in the lake off Keeney street, Evanston, yesterday, were saved by an unidentified man, Arthur J. Rau, 21 years old, 1639 West 31st place, a fourth member of the party, was drowned. His body was recovered by the same unknown swimmer.

Rau, an inspector for the Commonwealth Edison company, was attending a picnic of employés. His companions, Margaret and Elizabeth Grownlow, 5308 Princeton avenue, and K. L. Cushing, 119 Virginia street, Elmhurst, were carried to safety. They lost their footing as a result of the undertow and were swept into dangerous holes near the Keeney street pier.

The rescuer said he was an employé of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, but left without giving his name.

7 PERSONS HURT WHEN SANTA FE TRAIN IS WRECKED

Burrton, Kas., July 8.—Seven persons were seriously injured here late today when Santa Fé passenger train No. 4 crashed into an open switch and into a string of oil cars, which took fire.

GET REPORT OF WRECK.

According to an official report received early in the evening from Burrton, Kas., by Santa Fé officials in Chicago, the train ran through an open switch at high speed. The engine and two cars were reported to have been derailed, and it was added that "some passengers were badly injured."

When the train went off the track, according to the report, it struck with terrific impact a number of freight cars in a transfer train on an adjacent track. Among these were gasoline tank cars, it was stated, which at once caught fire.

British Arrest Cannibals as They Roast Victim

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, July 8.—A Central News dispatch from Nairobi says the British police arrested a dozen African natives caught red handed in the act of preparing a cannibal feast. The victim was already killed and cut up, and the natives were pinning an arm and a leg over a spit to cook them while others stood around awaiting dinner.

McCORMICK AND MATHILDE TO SAIL

Trip to Europe Starts Late This Week.

Harold F. McCormick, now fully recovered from his recent operation, is leaving late this week for New York, when, it is stated, he will sail almost immediately for Europe.

Mr. McCormick, it is said, is going abroad for an extensive vacation. His son, Fowler, and his daughter, Mathilde, will go with him.

Mathilde to See John D.

Fowler McCormick has been in New York for several days—he left Chicago on Thursday of last week. Miss Mathilde on her way east will visit her grandfather, John D. Rockefeller. It is said she will make one more attempt to win his consent to her marriage to Max Oser, Swiss horseman, whose advent as her fiancé caused such a stir in society on both sides of the Atlantic.

Whether she wins Mr. Rockefeller's consent or not, it is generally believed that Miss Mathilde will make no attempt—if she still intends to go through with the marriage—to wed Oser at least until she attains her majority in April next year.

Agreement Made.

This is almost assured since an agreement between Harold McCormick and his former wife, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, in the Probate court recently when Mr. McCormick was appointed Miss Mathilde's guardian on her own petition.

Some time before he leaves Mr. McCormick is expected to file a number of suits for libel against the Chicago newspapers which reported that his famous operation had consisted of the transplantation of a human gland.

This statement particularly incensed Mr. McCormick. He denied the report absolutely.

May Attend Baker Wedding.

His statement was taken to include all the newspapers, and since that he has been much in conference with his attorneys. It is authentically stated that he will go first to England, possibly remaining in London for a time, and attend the much postponed wedding of Mary Landon Baker and Allister McCormick, if it is held. Later, it is stated, he will go to Paris for a period, and possibly with Mathilde to Switzerland.

Real estate news will be found on pages 21 and 22 of the Classified Section.

'L' UNION VOTES TO STAND WITH SURFACE MEN

Demands Lines Pay Old Wage Scale.

Twenty-five hundred elevated railway employés unanimously adopted a resolution last night, demanding that the officials of the "L" lines renew the old wage agreement for one year. The wording of the resolution is such that it pledges the united action of some 5,000 elevated employés with the 13,000 surface lines men in effecting a settlement of the wage and working condition questions.

Should the company refuse to accede to the men's demands, the union officers are authorized to issue a call for a strike vote. Even should the company agree to sign a new contract at the old scale, which is unlikely, the elevated men indicated they will join the street car men should they walk out.

The resolution probably will be presented to the officials of the Chicago Elevated Railways tomorrow and a strike vote is expected before the end of the week. The street car men will vote tomorrow from 6 a. m. until midnight.

Mayor Makes a Move.

The action of the elevated men came after the city had made what was interpreted as the first step in its plan to seize and operate the street cars in event of a strike.

Mayor Thompson, returning from a conference with Gov. Small somewhere down the Illinois river, sent a letter to George B. Arnold, director of the department of labor, asking him to invoke the mediatory powers given him by law. State arbitration, which probably will be spurned by company and employés alike, is believed to have been decided upon by the city hall lawyers as affording the best opportunity for the furtherance of the mayor's plan.

The meeting of the elevated employés in Carmen's hall, Van Buren street and Ashland avenue, lasted barely thirty minutes. The resolution was presented by William Mylan, president of local 308; William S. McClenathan, secretary, and James McArdle, William Brittingham, P. Feeney, L. Tobin, and E. Corrigan, members of the executive board.

Say Their Duty Is Plain.

After reciting in detail the results of the negotiations between the Chicago Surface Lines and the street car men, the resolution continues:

"Our duty is plain and the only proper course we can take for the protection of our wages and working conditions is to follow the past policy in this city by standing united with the members of division 241 in negotiating and effecting a renewal of contract, therefore

"Be it resolved: That we act in unison with the members of 241 and instruct our officers to present a demand to the officials of the Chicago Elevated Railways for a renewal of our expired contract for one year with present wage rates and working conditions, and, in the event of refusal by the company, that we instruct our officers to issue a call for a referendum strike vote of the members of 308."

Basis of Mayor's Action.

The mayor's action in appealing to Director Arnold was claimed to be in compliance with the law creating the old state board of arbitration, the duties of which were passed on to the present department of labor. Mr. Arnold, himself a former motorman and a charter member of the elevated employés' union, was said to be on his way to Chicago.

Offers of the state board to intervene, it is believed, are pretty certain to be rejected by both sides in the wage dispute. However, it was pointed out, the administration will be able to use the move for propaganda purposes by boasting that the city's record is clear.

Would Put It Up to Small.

Then, too, it was said, there is the possibility of friction between the elevated and surface lines men over the rejection of Director Arnold's proffers, which would place the responsibility squarely up to Gov. Small and pave the way for calling out the militia to carry out the seizure program.

That the seizure and operation of the car lines by the city is still being considered was indicated by the mayor as he left the conferences with Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson and his assistants, Chester E. Cleveland, James W. Breen, and Daniel A. Roberts.

"That's all up to the legal department," he said. "They are working

RAIL STRIKE SITUATION ON EIGHTH DAY

Three persons killed in rioting—one at Clinton, Ill., one at Houston, Tex., and one at Cleveland, O. Three injured in Clinton; others in Elkhart, Ind., Pensacola, Fla., Sacramento, Buffalo, and Birmingham.

Two companies of Illinois troops sent to Clinton to quell outbreaks. All quiet there at night after strikers run guards and strikebreakers out of town.

Other companies of state infantry and cavalry mobilized ready for action in eight downstate towns.

Federal Judge Carpenter grants injunction restraining strikers from interference with shop operation at Aurora. Three injunctions at other points preventing interference with mail movements, etc.

Federal officials discuss calling of federal troops to suppress disorder in Chicago district. Several workers beaten; homes are stoned. Extra police on guard duty.

Strike orders to 14,000 signalmen withheld by union heads, pending further negotiations.

All rail traffic on Chicago and Alton lines in and out of Bloomington suspended. Other roads shorten schedules.

National guard in Missouri—4,000 strong—mobilized. United States marshal intervenes at Slater, Mo., shops.

Missouri, Kansas and Texas cuts forty-seven trains from schedule; railroad plants at Slater and Sedalia are abandoned by roads and all trains suspended.

Preparations made to call out state troops, if needed, in Indiana, Kansas, and California.

Officials of railway clerks' union say numerous locals have received strike sanction; maintenance of way men in sporadic walkouts at various places in Illinois.

Boy, 5, Lost in Woods, Dies When Found

Superior, Wis., July 8.—Joe Dodge, 5 year old Brule, Wis., boy, found this afternoon by searchers after wandering about in the thick woods for six days, died as the result of exposure and starvation at the farm home of L. F. Clemens a half hour afterward.

The child had walked a distance of three miles through the underbrush and was within 800 feet of the Clemens farmhouse when discovered concealed under a bush.

A worn path from the spot to a small creek twenty-five feet away was mute testimony of where the child had obtained water. His only clothing, a pair of overalls, was covered with berry stains.

Bandits Get Suit Pressed, Then Rob Tailor of $400

Two armed bandits, posing as customers, relieved Mack Sennian, proprietor of a suit pressing establishment at 435 South Dearborn street, of $400 last night. After having his suit pressed, one of the men proffered Sennian a $20 bill, and when the tailor produced a large roll of currency, both drew revolvers and forced Sennian to surrender the money. Sennian reported his loss to the South Clark street police.

FEDERAL COURT ENJOINS MEN; TRAINS DELAYED

Three Dead in Riots of Workers.

Strike riots and threatening demonstrations in a number of railway shop centers in the Chicago district, downstate, and in various other states yesterday afternoon brought about the mobilization of militia in five states, military occupation of shops at Clinton, Ill., with two companies of Illinois troops on duty, and the broaching of plans for the calling out of federal troops if necessary.

At midnight the total of casualties due to strike violence showed three dead and a dozen injured. Of these, one was killed and three injured when strikers and railway guards clashed in Clinton. The second death was at Houston, Tex. The third was at Cleveland, O. Riots at other points added to the list of injured.

In Chicago the afternoon and evening passed with practically no disorder, the police being on guard.

Troops at Clinton.

Clinton was the only town to see actual troops on duty during the day. Throughout Illinois, however, other companies were mobilized and placed in readiness to entrain for troublesome points. At Springfield, Peoria, Canton, Quincy, Salem, Cairo, and Mount Vernon detachments of the 130th infantry were in uniform.

At Camp Grant there are 1,500 men of the 131st and 132d regiments. But these men were there, not in mobilization, but on annual encampment. The state artillery, encamped at Camp Custer, Mich., was told to be ready to move, if necessity arises.

Ready in Missouri.

In Missouri the whole national guard was mobilized for possible trouble at Sedalia, Slater, St. Louis, and Kansas City, the shop centers of the state. In Indiana, California, and Kansas like measures had been taken.

Possibility of United States troops being called into action in Chicago and vicinity developed in a conference between District Attorney Charles F. Clyne and United States Marshal Robert R. Levy after instructions had been received from Acting United States Attorney General Goff that all measures be taken to prevent interference with mail and interstate shipments.

Strikers Are Enjoined.

Simultaneously with this conference Federal Judge Carpenter, sitting in chambers, granted an injunction in the afternoon restraining the strikers at the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy shops from picketing or interfering with the operation of the rail plants there. Deputy marshals were immediately sent to Aurora to post notices of the restraining order throughout the town.

Rail officials set forth to the court that on Monday morning an attempt was to be made by 1,000 strikers to prevent 250 men employed in the shops from entering the railroad grounds.

Similar injunctions were granted by Judge FitzHenry at Springfield affecting half a dozen state rail centers.

eyal restraining order of similar effect came in the United States District court in Iowa, relating to several important rail shops within the state. Still other state orders were reported in distant localities.

Roads Curtail Trains.

While these events were in progress Chicago and the nation began to feel for the first time the actual effect of the strike when roads began to curtail schedules and in three instances to cease operation altogether.

All trains running in and out of Bloomington on the Chicago and Alton road were suspended. The Alton plants at Sedalia and Slater, Mo., were closed, with a consequent stoppage of service. Forty-seven trains were cut from the schedule of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway, and in Chicago suburban trains on the Chicago and Northwestern were reduced in number. This last, however, was said to be due to a coal shortage, an aftermath of the miners' strike.

Meanwhile roads, labor board, and unions were silent; and apparently were standing pat on their "no compromise" statements of several days ago.

Downstate sporadic strikes of firemen, oilers, maintenance of way employés, and clerks were reported to be occurring. The same was said to be true in other rail centers.

Signalmen Stay on Job.

That the strike will not spread to the 14,000 signalmen on the roads was, however, determined in a conference yesterday afternoon. D. W. Helt, president of the signalmen's union, announced that his strike order had been withheld pending further negotiations with the railway labor board.

In Chicago rioting was sporadic and of small extent. Someone "touched off" a bonfire beneath a freight car standing in the rear of the Harvey, Ill., railway station, destroying the car, a shed and a motor company store next door, but leaving the station uninjured.

One man was stabbed and two others beaten in small affrays near the Burnside shops. There were two reports of strikers surrounding homes of workers and threatening their families. Three saloons were closed following the payday of 760 striking Nickel Plate employés, and one man was arrested while waving a red flag near the Chicago and Northwestern shops.

RIOTING IN ILLINOIS

South Chicago, Bloomington, and Clinton were the centers of Illinois strike riots during the day, the disorder at Clinton being the most serious.

There, during the forenoon, word was passed that several carloads of strike breakers were to arrive on the "daylight special" of the Illinois Central at noon.

When the train arrived several hundred strikers were gathered at the depot. Ten men—all of them said to be railroad guards—alighted. They were met by half as many detectives and went into the railroad company's offices.

Thirty minutes later they walked up the tracks, where pickets and a crowd of strikers had congregated.

Striker Defies Guard; Shot.

One of the guards is said to have ordered the strikers to keep off the right of way, declaring he "would shoot the first man who stepped over the deadline."

James Fitzgerald Sr., a striker, immediately stepped over the line, whipped out a pistol, and invited the guard to begin shooting. The guard did. Fitzgerald was shot through the right foot. His 14 year old son was shot through the heart. Elmer Hankinson, a spectator, was shot in both legs.

The strikers ran for cover; the two wounded men were taken to a hospital.

Mobs Storm Stores for Guns.

An hour later a mob of 200 strikers stormed downtown hardware stores, stripping the shelves of rifles, small arms, and ammunition. They demanded of Sheriff J. W. Parsons and his deputy, Berg Taylor, that the man who did the shooting be arrested.

The crowd then gathered on the right of way near the shops. It gradually grew in numbers. Deputy sheriffs, the mayor, and city police attempted to disperse them, but failed.

Railroad officials, fearing that a general battle would result, with an aftermath similar to the Herrin massacre, backed a trainload of coaches into the shops, loaded on all nonunion employés and took them through the yards and out of town at high speed.

Troops Rushed to Clinton.

Meanwhile the sheriff had gotten in touch with Acting Governor Sterling. Trainloads of troops were sent to Clinton. The first, from Champaign, arrived there shortly after 9 o'clock in the evening and immediately began to patrol the town. The second trainload, from Paxton, came in shortly before midnight.

Following arrival of the troops and the restoration of order, Deputy Sheriff Taylor arrested Wesley Davis, a guard, who is said to have killed the Fitzgerald boy and wounded his father. Davis was taken to Moticello, Ill., and locked up pending investigation. He is a Clinton resident.

At Bloomington a mob of strikers stormed the shops during the day and "persuaded" all the workers handling power there to leave. President W. G. Bierd of the Chicago and Alton immediately called for troops to protect a shipment of 250 strikebreakers said to be on the way from Chicago.

No one was hurt in the original outbreak.

TROUBLE AT BURNSIDE

The vicinity of the Burnside shops of the Illinois Central at 93d street and Cottage Grove avenue, where the first outbreak came Thursday night, was the scene of more trouble early yesterday.

Two employés who had refused to join the strike were beaten and one of them was slashed with a knife by three assailants.

The victims are: Mike Kukynak, 49 years old, 9331 Evans avenue, and Andrew Polish, 58 years old, 631 92d street. Kukynak is a roundhouse helper and Polish, who has been employed in the same shops twenty-four years, as a welder.

Girl, 3, Awes Strikers.

Menacing strikers fell back yesterday morning when a 3 year old girl escorted her father to work at the Burnside shops. All day the youngster played about the shops, leading her father through danger again at night. The father said his children would starve if he joined the walkout.

Last night Tony Sanders, 1231 West Erie, climbed on the Erie street viaduct of the Chicago and Northwestern road and valiantly waved a red signal flag until he was discovered by Sergts. Bergen, Ryan, and Fitzpatrick of the West Chicago avenue station. He was arrested and locked up.

Strikers Hide in Weeds.

Strikers were reported hiding in the weeds back of the home of J. A. Wanpack, foreman of the Nickel Plate road, 9122 Blackstone avenue, during the evening. Police were unable to find them. Neither could a dozen strikers who visited the home of Andrew Malico, also a Nickel Plate foreman, at 9543 Ellis avenue, and threatened his wife, be found.

Homer Sexton, 21 years old, 2211 West 13th street, a striker, attempted to climb on a wagon filled with lumber, driven by Louis Papp, 1113 West 13th street, under the impression that the lumber was being taken to a nearby railroad shop.

Papp struck Sexton on the jaw, knocking him to the street. Sexton was taken to the county hospital, where he is said to be seriously injured.

Fourteen Trains Canceled.

Fourteen suburban trains of the Chicago and Northwestern canceled in Chicago are:

Milwaukee division, between Chicago and Highland Park—North bound, 3:14 a. m. and 10:25 p. m.; south bound [arriving Chicago], 10:42 a. m. and 8:20 p. m.

Previous to the conference the railroad companies had taken drastic action as a result of the strike situation. Forty-seven trains on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad were discontinued because of the strike during the day. Ten of these operated in Missouri, two in Kansas, twenty-three in Texas, and twelve in Oklahoma. At the same time the road announced that it had abandoned its roundhouse at Sedalia, where there had been trouble with the strikers, trains being prevented leaving the city.

The Chicago and Alton railroad announced during the day that it had decided to abandon its terminal at Slater and locate it at Glasgow. In the statement the road said the attitude of the people of Slater was responsible for its decision.

One Killed in Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., July 8.—The first clash here between guards protecting railroad property and striking shopmen came late tonight when a striker was shot and killed in a moonlight gun battle between guards and strikers at the roundhouse of the New York Central at Linndale.

Texas Worker Killed.

Houston, Tex., July 8.—Will McClure, colored, said to be a strikebreaker, was killed by a blow on the head during a fusillade of rocks thrown by persons collected near the H. & T. C. yards here late this afternoon.

Police officers were unable to determine who threw the rock that struck McClure. He was on company property when the blow crushed his head and killed him almost instantly, it was stated.

Six Are Arrested.

Ottawa, Kas., July 8.—[Special.]—Six men were arrested here on charges of picketing in connection with the shop strike.

U. S. Deputies Guard Shops.

Slater, Mo., July 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Deputy United States marshals guarded the Chicago & Alton shops here tonight under command of I. K. Parshall, United States marshal for the Western District of Missouri.

Marshall Parshall explained to city officials and newspaper men that he had come here under telegraphic instructions from the Department of Justice in Washington and that his orders are to prevent infraction of federal laws. Interference with interstate commerce or mails will not be tolerated, Mr. Parshall said.

Indiana May Call Troops.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 8.—Gov. McCray has notified local authorities at division points that they are expected to do their full duty and that the state will back them to the limit. Representatives of the governor are making an investigation as to the advisability of mobilizing the national guard. The only trouble reported in the state was at Elkhart, where one man was wounded and nineteen arrested. Those arrested were later released without prosecution.

California Troops Held.

Sacramento, Cal., July 18.—[Special.]—State Labor Commissioner Mathewson today reported that the appeals made to Gov. Stephens for state troops at Roseville were "uncalled for." The troops are being held in readiness, however. Groups of strike sympathizers dragged men who were taking the places of strikers from street cars and compelled them to stay away from the shops. Two men were mauled, but not severely injured. Police dispersed several mobs.

The governor's office received a protest from the Barstow labor council against employment of Japanese mechanics to replace striking shopmen.

Rail Official Arrested.

Atlanta, Ga., July 8.—W. W. Watts, superintendent of terminals for the Southern railway here, was arrested today charged with shooting at one striking shopman and pointing a pistol at another Shooting in Pensacola.

Pensacola, Fla., July 8.—[Special.]—One Negro is reported dying and two others are suffering from slight injuries as a result of a battle between strikers and men who sought to take their places. Several shots were fired and five arrests made.

Striker Is Shot by Guard.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 8.—[Special.]—State troopers and deputies clashed with a crowd at Sloan. Mike Zalewski, a striker, was shot by a railroad detective and may die. Disorders were reported in the East Buffalo yards. Edward Anderson, a worker at the West Shore roundhouse, was severely beaten.

Crowd Attacks Employé.

Birmingham, Ala., July 8.—The first disorder in the Birmingham district in connection with the shopmen's strike occurred today when a crowd of strikers attacked P. L. Fletcher, an employé of the Frisco road. Fletcher, painfully injured, was removed to a hospital.

Trains Annulled at Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., July 8.—Four passenger trains entering Memphis on the Missouri Pacific railroad were annulled today, and a number of freight trains on other lines will be taken out of service early next week, as the result of the strike of railroad shop crafts here, it was announced by railroad officials.

RED FLAG IN STRIKE

When strikers congregated yesterday at the Chicago and Northwestern yards at Erie street, Tony Sanders mounted a fence and waved a red flag, according to police, endeavoring thus to incite the strikers to violence. Tony and his flag were commandeered by police. The red flag is shown in the hands of one of the arresting officers, while the waver is shown at the right.

4 U. S. JUDGES ISSUE WRITS TO HALT STRIKERS

Marshal Levy Prepares to Swear In Big Force.

Federal recognition of the railroad strike came yesterday when judges of United States court in at least four cities of the middle west issued temporary injunctions prohibiting strikers from resorting to violence. Local authorities received telegrams from Attorney General Harry Daugherty authorizing them to use any force they deemed necessary to prevent any interruption of interstate commerce and movement of the mails.

Federal Judge George Carpenter, summoned from a golf course at Wheaton, at 6 o'clock last night signed a temporary injunction restraining officials of the International Association of Machinists and some 40 other defendants from interfering with operations of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy shops at Aurora, Ill.

Iowa Judge Issues Writ.

Federal Judge M. J. Wade in Council Bluffs, Iowa, issued a similar writ affecting all Burlington points in southern Iowa. Judge Louis Fitz Henry of Springfield, Ill., issued an order restraining strikers at Beardstown and Galesburg from molesting workers. Another writ of the same nature was issued in Burlington, Iowa.

The summoning of Judge Carpenter from Wheaton came at a moment when excitement was running high in the federal building. At the time United States Marshal Robert Levy and District Attorney Charles F. Clyne were conferring on their course should there be a violent outbreak in this district.

Charge Mail Interference.

Bruce Scott, general solicitor for the Burlington railroad, appeared in the building with his petition for an injunction. A telephone call explained the emergency to Judge Carpenter. Two hours later he opened court in his chambers.

Attorney Scott in presenting his plea said:

"Because interstate commerce and the delivery of United States mail has already been interrupted and because we believe that a crisis is at hand and that the situation is exceedingly grave we have prepared a petition asking for an injunction.

"You say commerce and mail service has already been interrupted?" asked the judge.

Wants Men Protected.

"Yes, your honor, workers have been threatened, beaten, and robbed. The president of our company has asked the men to return to work by Monday morning. Their senority rights will be thrown into the discard if they do not return then. About 250 of the men have promised to return if they can be protected. We want that protection.

"We are informed that the strikers plan to throw a cordon of 1,000 men around our shops in Aurora on Monday morning. We believe they mean business and that there is a great danger. Already our men have felt the wrath of the strikers."

"You do not want this injunction as a blanket, a sort of permit to use force yourselves?" asked the judge.

"Not at all—all we want is the protection for men who want to work for a living."

The judge commented on the sweeping character of the order and signed it.

Daugherty Sends Orders.

In the meantime Mr. Levy and Mr. Clyne had received their telegrams from the attorney general. The exact contents of the telegrams were not made known, but it was understood power was given to Mr. Levy to hire all the special deputies he desired and even to call for federal troops if he thought it necessary.

Mr. Levy announced he would have men in Aurora ready to see that the injunction order is enforced and that he has made plans to press into service 1,000 special deputies if necessary.

CHIEFS OF SHOP CRAFTS HELD AS LAW VIOLATORS

Topeka, Kan., July 8.—T. Huntington and Thomas Hillery, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of local No. 11 of the Federated Shop Crafts union, against whom warrants were issued yesterday, appeared with their attorney in the court of Topeka shortly after 10 o'clock this morning. Marshal Tom Murley served the warrants on them. The complaints charge the two with violating the anti-strike provision of the industrial court act.

Huntington and Hillery waived preliminary hearing and were released in bonds of $500 each, to appear Sept. 6, before the Shawnee county district court. They are charged with "calling or fostering" the strike.

Sheriff Robert Miller this afternoon arrested three local striking shopmen charged with violating the anti-picketing provision of the industrial court act.

A Personal Suggestion

Women who love beautiful things sometimes think them beyond their means. Sometimes, too, they underrate the economy of enduring quality or the satisfaction of more lasting shapeliness.

I. Miller therefore suggests that the Midsummer Sale now in progress affords an opportunity for testing the "economy of quality"—at a price even lower than would be paid ordinarily.

Prices at the Sale are $6.85, $8.85 and $10.85—prices which need no comment to establish their remarkable value.

GERMANY ASKS MORATORIUM AS COLLAPSE LOOMS

Look on Morgan as Only Hope for Republic.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, July 8.—There have been serious outbreaks in that portion of Upper Silesia which the league of nations awarded to Poland. There were seven bombs thrown last night, principally against German newspapers and against the homes of German leaders. The Koeonigshutte iron works and the Chorsow electric works have been closed.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, July 8.—J. Pierpont Morgan, as the savior of Germany, again is the nation's hope.

According to reliable information, Dr. Fischer, secretary of state and chairman of the German war debts commission, who is en route to Paris with Herren Bergmann and Schroeder to present the seriousness of the nation's financial situation to the reparations commission, has been telegraphed by the government to arrange a moratorium and to ask for the reconvening of the Morgan bankers' committee for the purpose of arranging a loan, which it is declared is the only salvation for Germany.

Germany approached British diplomats four days ago, and, receiving sympathy, sent a request for a moratorium last night. It also sent feelers to the entente regarding the Morgan committee. This afternoon the government authorized its commission to press both points at Paris.

Seeks Small Weekly Payments.

It is understood that Germany will propose that the payments be reduced to 10,000,000 gold marks ($2,500,000) monthly, and the installments be paid weekly, thereby ending the weekly exchange breaks. It proposes dividing the present stocks and money over five months and continuing the small payments for two years.

The German government, it is semi-officially declared, has enough money to cover the July 15 payment of 50,000,000 gold marks ($12,500,000), but it has no money in sight for the August payment. And the chances for buying foreign money are growing slimmer every day because of the depreciation of the paper mark. This is the reason the government has asked the reparations commission for a moratorium.

The government regards the situation as most serious, some members of the reichstag and certain officials pessimistically predicting that the end is in sight for the republic.

Foreigners Gobble Stocks.

"Germany always has been eighteen months behind the Austrian situation, but now it seems to be catching up," one official said. This, however, does not take into account that German industry is active, while Austria is stagnant. Germany's industrial activity, however, was menaced today when under the panicky conditions the foreign countries continued to gobble up the German stocks.

Two elements are blamed for the terrific decline in the value of the money, the first being the loss of faith in Germany following the assassination of Foreign Minister Rathenau and the discovery of monarchist schemes, and second, the allied guarantee commission's request that the reichsbank cease supporting the mark by throwing dollars and pounds into the market. For a fortnight the mark has been depreciating, and to bring a halt to the drop the government asked the reichsbank for aid. This aid was like a drop of water on a hot stone. It helped nobody and hurt the reparations possibilities.

Fear Complete Collapse.

Today the leading financiers openly declare their fear of a complete collapse of German money.

The monthly payments of 50,000,000 gold marks [$12,500,000], it is figured would amount to 6,000,000,000 marks in paper, which is a half the government's income. One peculiarity of the situation is that the printers' strike has stopped all bank note publication, which a week before it began was averaging 11,000,000,000 marks. However, the reichsbank has begun preparing emergency 500 mark notes, which will be ready for issue in a week.

In the reichstag the financial situation has silenced those followers of the late Dr. Rathenau's policy of fulfillment. It will now be most difficult to find a leader who will promise a continuance of reparations.

The government's request for a moratorium is timed opportunely. The government discussed a moratorium with the guarantee committee, which realizes Germany's dangerous situation and, it is reported, supports the moratorium request. At the same time there is a more agreeable feeling abroad, especially in England and Italy.

TIGHTEN ARMY LINES

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 8. — The allied line along the Rhine, including the American sector, is being tightened up like a violin string to hold back the revolutionary surge from the east. It is moving westward by giant strides toward the dead line between socially fermenting Europe and conservative Europe. It is the solid conviction of the allies that Germany is on the verge of a financial debacle which may lead to social disturbances, and it is the wish of all to localize the disorders as much as possible.

The dead line against revolution has been the western frontier of Russia. Now the safety line has been withdrawn westward until only France remains behind. The smallest gaps from Alsace to Holland are being filled up, and passage across the Rhine is becoming more and more difficult.

During the German crisis the Rhine line is intended as a sanitary cordon to hold back communist propaganda rather than to hold back physical attacks. About 2,500 French and Belgian airplanes on the Rhine make a physical attack impossible. France is remarkably free from communism, but its position might grow dangerous if Germany were to adopt communistic ideas.

SEEKS U. S. HELP

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 8.—The acute menace to Germany resulting from the financial catastrophe which is expected to lead to a diplomatic and financial crisis was called to the attention of the United States government by Prime Minister Lloyd George during a luncheon with Ambassador Harvey.

The British prime minister pointed out to Mr. Harvey that the United States was as much interested as the rest of the powers in the possible bankruptcy, communist revolution or restoration of the monarchy in Germany. He asked the ambassador to attempt to ascertain what the administration at Washington thinks of the situation and what suggestions it cares to make regarding measures to be taken if the present fears are realized.

Mr. Harvey tonight told THE TRIBUNE the British government did not formally ask the United States to intervene in the threatened crisis. Mr. Harvey communicated the pessimistic viewpoint of the British government regarding Germany to the state department, and it is understood he recommended that the United States be represented in any conference which may be called to consider the situation.

Must Lock to France.

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Germany, facing a political and economic situation generally admitted as most serious, must, in the view of American officials as expressed today, look across the Rhine to France for necessary relief.

France, it was stated today by one official in close touch with developments in Europe, must loosen her grip upon the reparations situation to lighten Germany's financial burden or utter collapse of the former strong central power may result and a radical régime arise from the ruins.

All Pawned for Reparations.

Help from the United States, it generally is maintained by officials here, only can be given Germany in the form of loans of private capital and Germany can obtain loans only through the offer of sufficiently protective security to attract investors. Under the present reparations scheme it appears to officials here that all of Germany's resources are bound to the wheel of allied payments and held close by the hand of France so that unless Germany can obtain concessions to permit of the pledging of some of her potential wealth as security all hope of financial assistance from without must be abandoned.

BOY KILLED AND 2 INJURED WHEN TRAIN HITS TRUCK

One Chicago boy was killed, two were injured, one perhaps fatally, and two more escaped unharmed last evening when a light truck in which they were riding was demolished by a Chicago and Northwestern freight train at the Waukegan road crossing a mile west of Lake Bluff.

Lester Calhoun, 17 years old, 4156 North Crawford avenue, was decapitated. James Walsh, 18, of 4201 Crawford avenue, received a possible skull fracture. Daniel O'Rourke, 19, 1673 Hollywood avenue, suffered a compound fracture of the left arm. Russell G. Fair, 4447 North Crawford avenue, driver, and James Nolan, 3852 West Monroe street, were unhurt.

The boys were on their way for a camping trip at Lake Beulah, Wis.

YANKEE'S FIRST DRINK IN LONDON BRINGS ARREST

[Copyright 1922: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, July 8.—"I came from a dry country. I land in England and the first drink I get—and I acted quite innocently, because I know nothing about the dry laws here—I get into this pretty mess."

This was the explanation offered by an American named Roberts when he was charged at the Mansion House today with partaking of intoxicants during the prohibited hours at a Watling street restaurant.

The lord mayor thought probably the American's action was an innocent one and he dismissed the summons, but he fined the licensee for supplying the liquor.

WINNER AND LOSER IN WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP

SUZANNE WINS IN TWO STRAIGHT; BIDES HER TIME

Lets American Girl Defeat Herself.

four, Lord Desborough, and Mrs. and Miss Lloyd George.

Unfortunately rain came in the middle of the afternoon and kept on for an hour and three quarters. It forced G. L. Patterson and J. O. Anderson to suspend their thrilling contest in the semi-finals for the men's singles, and lasted so long that many of the prominent guests gave up and went home.

The Play in Detail.

Mlle. Lenglen won the toss and began the service. After the fierceness to which the Patterson-Anderson match had accustomed the spectators her style seemed curiously mild. Mlle. Lenglen put the ball where Mrs. Mallory had to run to hit it and the American girl drove her return out. Mrs. Mallory also hit out as she took the next service, and then Mlle. Lenglen beat her by a hard ball returned just out of reach on her left hand. Forty-love was the score, and by once more hitting too hard on the return Mrs. Mallory gave away a love game.

The next game, however, was Mrs. Mallory's. She balked Suzanne by putting two drives hard to her left, and then ranging in one on the other side of the court and again by a fine hit to Mlle. Lenglen's left. One of the best rallies of the match followed. For the first time Molla began to move up toward the net. From midcourt she put in, in quick succession, balls to left and right of Suzanne and then, as the French champion tried to retaliate, she struck out. Mlle. Lenglen forced the game, and managed to bring the score to 40—30, but a splendid shot by Mrs. Mallory straight past her opponent's right hand completely beat her and ended the game.

Suzanne's Aim Is Sure.

Mlle. Lenglen captured the third game easily. She had adopted a baseline game and from the extreme ends of her court kept sending over hard shots, which were generally inside the lines only by inches. For a short time, when the score stood 15 love, Mrs. Mallory had the French champion running from side to side of the court, but this did not affect the sureness of Mlle. Lenglen's aim. She kept placing the ball in most difficult positions for Mrs. Mallory, and won the game largely by hustling the American about.

Mrs. Mallory lost the first point of the fourth game by netting Mlle. Lenglen's return of service, but Mlle. Lenglen hit out on the next point. Mrs. Mallory then gave away two points by netting and driving out. It seemed as if she would retrieve her position in the succeeding rally. Mlle. Lenglen tried placing the ball to the right and left of her opponent. Mrs. Mallory replied brilliantly and a series of sharp exchanges ensued, with no marked advantage to either. Then Mrs. Mallory succumbed once more to the fatal attraction of the net. Mlle. Lenglen thus gathered in her third game to Mrs. Mallory's one.

Molla Changes Tactics.

As the next game opened Mrs. Mallory treated Mlle. Lenglen to her own medicine and sent shorts to either side. Mrs. Mallory hit Mlle. Lenglen's next service out, but as a new rally began she made her way to mid-court and sent some long drives to the extreme corners that made Mlle. Lenglen distinctly unhappy. She tried to extricate herself by hitting straight down the lins and went out. A series of rallies followed to Mrs. Mallory's advantage, but by hitting the net again she allowed the score to go to deuce.

As Mlle. Lenglen then drove out of court, Mrs. Mallory should have finished the game at once. She had the chance on Mlle. Lenglen's curiously soft return. Mrs. Mallory smashed at it and hit the net. Mlle. Lenglen, however, was good to her rival, and by netting the next ball and outing another threw away the game.

Long Driving by Both.

Each player hit out of court once as the sixth game started and the points soon went to 30-all. Then came some of the best hitting of the match, both driving diagonally across the full length of the court. Each took her returns squarely, but Mlle. Lenglen's superiority told in the end. She placed one too far over to the right for Mrs. Mallory's comfort. The latter reached it, but landed the ball in the net. Mrs. Mallory tried to regain her lost ground in a keen rally. Mlle. Lenglen moved gradually toward the net and sent over a lofty drop shot. Mrs. Mallory reached it and put it into the net.

The tale of the seventh game is soon told. Mlle. Lenglen served and Mrs. Mallory hit the first and fourth balls out and netted the other two. In the eighth game, Mrs. Mallory pressed Mlle. Lenglen so hard that the French woman had to make one of her marvelous leaps to take a hot cross-court shot just over the net. Mrs. Mallory was fighting hard at this stage and made a splendid volleying rally. She could make no real headway, however, and lost the game and the set at 6—2. The score of the set by points follows:

Lenglen	4	2	5	4	4	4	4	—31
Mallory	0	4	3	1	6	2	2	—20

American Still Full of Fight.

Mlle. Lenglen received evidence of Mrs. Mallory's determination as the second set opened. The American did some fine placing, first to one side and then to the other, and forced her rival to hit out of court. In the next rally only the strength of Mlle. Lenglen's backhand strokes saved her and enabled her in the end to win the game after deuce had been called twice.

The next game was just as keenly contested. Mlle. Lenglen showed less steadiness than at any other period of the match and, by hitting out and netting two or three of Mrs. Mallory's services, nearly threw away her advantage. In one thrilling exchange Mrs. Mallory, at the net, put the ball just over. Mlle. Lenglen just managed to run in and play it, and the rally ended in a series of volleys at short range, in which Mlle. Lenglen was at last victor.

The third game was remarkably even. The points were scored alternately until deuce was reached, and then Mrs. Mallory went to the net and volleyed a swift ball which Mlle. Lenglen barely managed to reach. The French girl drove her return to the base line, however, and won the point.

End Comes Swiftly.

It was a disappointment that this game also went to Mlle. Lenglen, as she had by no means the better of it, and won it merely because Mrs. Mallory neted a ball which Mlle. Lenglen had only just been able to reach and return.

The end of the match now came swiftly. Mrs. Mallory got two points in the fourth game, one of them through Mlle. Lenglen trying a lofty drop shot and hitting out.

But the fifth game went to Mlle. Lenglen as a love game. Mrs. Mallory won a point on service in the last game and then, after one fine rally, lost the game, set and match by netting the ball twice. The score by points, second set, follows:

Lenglen	6	8	6	4	4	4		—33
Mallory	4	6	4	2	2	1		—19

Mrs. Mallory was the first to run up smilingly and shake hands with Mlle. Lenglen and congratulate her upon her victory, and the two stood chatting with the greatest apparent friendliness for a few seconds as they donned their sweaters after the match.

GERARD DODGED GERMANY; FEARED BULLET OF HATE

Former Envoy Sees Hope for Troubled Land.

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—James W. Gerard, former American ambassador to Germany, who arrived today on the Berengaria after a two months' tour of England and France, explained that he did not visit Germany because of unsettled conditions there.

"No doubt they would have taken a shot at me in Germany," he declared. He explained that Germany today was divided into two camps, the liberals on one side and the junkers on the other.

Hopeful of Future.

"I don't believe conditions in Germany are quite as bad as pictured in today's papers," said Mr. Gerard. "I am extremely optimistic of the outcome there. Of course there are extremists on both sides but the government which will survive will not be a parliamentary government. I believe it will be one like our own.

"Germany will not make the same mistake as Russia. The Germans know the bitter lesson the Russians have learned and are unwilling to run into any such chaos.

"Industry in Germany is on a ridiculous basis. Everything is being sacrificed to the smooth running of factories and other industrial plants. As a result the only persons making money are those who are selling their products outside of the country for gold."

Rathenau Victim of Army.

Mr. Gerard expressed the opinion that Dr. Rathenau was murdered indirectly by officers of the old army. He believed that it was their influence that was brought to bear to bring about the former foreign minister's death.

Though he had not been in Germany, Mr. Gerard met business men in France and England who are in close touch with affairs in the new republic.

CHAIN OF PAPERS HEARST PLAN TO WIN PRESIDENCY

Syracuse, N. Y., July 8.—[Special.]—William Randolph Hearst, according to information brought to the convention of upstate Democratic leaders, which repudiated the editor-politician yesterday and indorsed "Al" Smith for governor, is preparing to spend a large part of his vast fortune in an effort to get the Democratic nomination for president in 1924, and failing in that, he would lead a third party and run independently for the presidency.

William J. Conners, the multi-millionaire director of the Hearst machine, has let it be known that as a preliminary to the Hearst drive for the Democratic nomination for president two years hence, Mr. Hearst will establish a newspaper in the principal city of every state where he already does not own a paper.

According to Mr. Conners, the plans for the purchase of these newspapers have been perfected and simultaneously with their appearance as Hearst organs "William R. Hearst associations" will be formed in every state.

POISON PUZZLE

ALICE DANIELS.

Police of Sheffield avenue station are trying to find why Alice Daniels, credited with being Chicago's prettiest artists' model, tipped a bottle of poison to her lips Friday night. They also want to know the names of two young men who rushed her to the American hospital, then took her home to 971 Edgecomb place.

From meager reports Miss Daniels started to drink a bottle of iodine, but changed her mind or was dissuaded after only a drop or two of the poison had burned her lips.

She was a star witness in the divorce suit of Mrs. Helen Hoeck McCallum last April. Search for Miss Daniels last night was futile.

BRITISH GOLD TO U. S. MAY BE FOR DEBT PAYMENTS

New York, July 8.—Definite indications that Great Britain intended to begin service on her war debt in this country this fall was seen by local bankers today in the arrival of gold bars valued at $2,500,000 on the steamship Berengaria for the account of the British treasury and the announcement that another similar shipment is under way.

The gold was consigned to J. P. Morgan & Co., fiscal agents for the British government, who were requested to hold the same "for instructions" later.

It was pointed out the British government had no other commitments in this country so the gold obviously was for war debt liquidation.

Mrs. Durand Has Chauffeur Arrested for Using Car

Mrs. Scott Durand, wife of the president of S. S. Durand and company, sugar brokers, and owner of the Crab Tree Farm at Lake Bluff, last night caused the arrest of her chauffeur, Elmer Sentle, 25 years old, 3574 Armitage avenue, for using her automobile without permission.

Despondent while out of work, Frank Brant, a sailor from Alberta, Canada, attempted to commit suicide last night by cutting his throat.

John D. Rockefeller Golfs, Motors, on 83d Birthday

New York, July 8.—John D. Rockefeller is 83 years old today. A birthday cake, a round of golf in the morning and an automobile ride in the afternoon composed his simple anniversary celebration this year. Owing to the recent death of his brother, William Rockefeller, the occasion will be unusually quiet.

WILLS HIS WIFE TO 'OTHER MAN'; DIES OF POISON

Sacrifices Self for Her Happiness.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 8.—[Special.]—Willing his wife to the "other man," W. W. Green, a wealthy retired orange grower of Pomona, today seated himself in a chair at the home of K. A. Sapp and swallowed a quantity of poison. He died a few moments later.

Green's death was one of the most dramatic to come to the attention of southern California authorities in recent years. In his last moment Green called attention to his farewell note or will. It was addressed to "Mrs. W. W. Green, or Miss Selma Johnson," at Green's home address in Pomona.

As made public by San Bernardino county officials the "last will" read:

Hopes They'll Be Happy.

"I guess you thought I was only fooling, but now you know better. I am leaving you to the other man. If you can be happy with him, go to it and God bless you. Please take care of my poor old body. BILL."

According to information given to the authorities, Green went to Pomona early today. He visited his wife, it is said, and a violent quarrel ensued. Upon leaving Pomona Green returned to the home of Mr. Sapp, where he had been staying for some time.

Going to his room he man wrote his dramatic will and placed it upon a dresser. Then he walked to the rear porch of the house and swallowed the poison. When he suddenly fell forward in his chair, Mrs. Sapp rushed to his aid. "Look on dresser," gasped Green and died.

"Other Man" Is Sought.

As soon as possible Mrs. Sapp followed the instructions of the dying man, finding the note in which Green had willed his wife to another man. The body is being held under charge of the coroner until the mysterious affair can be fully investigated.

The identity of the "other man" in the case has not been established. Neighbors of the Greens declare they never knew that the woman was friendly with other men, but that she and her husband had been estranged for many months.

TROOPS TO MINE IN KENTUCKY AS RIOT THREATENS

Ohio Officials Must Keep Miners in Leash.

Barbourville, Ky., July 8.—Gov. Edwin Morrow today ordered troops to move from Hopkinsville and Livermore to Madisonville, when county authorities at that place advised him the situation at a strip mine there proved threatening and that local authorities might be unable to handle the situation.

The cavalry troop from Hopkinsville will be equipped with machine guns, while the infantry from Livermore will carry its regular field paraphernalia.

Ohio Law in Local Hands.

Columbus, O., July 8.—Law enforcement in Ohio coal mining regions in the event of mine strike trouble was put squarely up to local officials throughout the state today by Federal Judge Sater and Gov. Davis.

Gov. Davis made it plain that while the Ohio militia is in a state of mobilization and will be available instantly for emergency service, it will be called out only when local officials are no longer capable of safeguarding lives and property.

Nine more alleged union miners have been arrested in New Lafferty in connection with the killing of John Majors, mine owner, early this week. The grand jury will investigate the killing on Monday.

May Close Small Mines.

Springfield, Ill., July 8.—Closing of all small mines in Peoria and other counties operated by nonunion miners, was seen here today, as a result of an order by George B. Arnold, director of the state department of labor, directing that all mines comply with the law requiring indemnity insurance for employés.

Soft Coal Output Lower.

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—Bituminous coal production during the fourteenth week of the strike was interrupted by the Independence day holiday. The total output, according to the geological survey, will probably fall between 3,500,000 and 4,000,000 tons, and even the average production per working day will show a decrease. Production of anthracite remains practically zero.

Complete returns for the thirteenth week, June 26-July 1, indicate an output of 5,207,000 tons of bituminous coal and 25,000 tons of anthracite, a total of 5,232,000 tons, of all coal. In the corresponding week of 1921 bituminous mines produced 7,660,000 tons and the anthracite mines 1,870,000 tons, a total of 9,530,000 tons. In 1920, a year of active business, the total coal raised was 12,064,000 tons.

WESTERN POSSES HUNT FOR SON OF CHICAGO DOCTOR

Western posses are searching for Fay B. Oliver, 21 years old, son of a wealthy and prominent Chicago physician, according to messages asking local police to investigate here. The youth, under arrest on a charge of passing worthless checks, leaped from a fast train near Cheyenne, Wyo., en route to Bingham City, Utah.

His bride of a year confessed to complicity in the check passing and was sentenced to four years in the Wyoming state prison, it was said.

Oliver, according to information received by Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes, is the son of Dr. E. W. Oliver of Hyde Park, with offices at 5240 Harper avenue. He left for the west on July 1, it was said.

Sleeping Sickness Traced to Tonsils by Mayo Doctor

Spokane, Wash., July 8.—Statements of Dr. E. C. Rosenow of the Mayo foundation that sleeping sickness and allied disorders had been traced to infected tonsils and throat was the sensation of last night's meeting of the Pacific Northwest Medical association.

Medical men at the meeting asserted that Dr. Rosenow's conclusions opened a new vista of possibilities in treatment of such cases.

BRIDEWELL BABES

There was an exhibition ball game at the Bridewell yesterday afternoon. The House of Correction team came out—pardon, stayed in—in their fine new uniforms and played a civilian outfit.

No. 432 stole a base and the 1,500 hardened rascals in the stands cheered lustily. They boast of No. 432's thievery. No. 1221 made a home run but it didn't get him anywhere toward running home. An opposing pitcher took a quick glance at No. 645, whose peacetime pursuit is expert marksmanship, and gave him a free trip to first base. The Bridewell babies made no errors—bad form in the House of Correction, doncher know!

Supt. Joseph Siman is mighty proud of his boys and declared that the first game they win he'll let them all take a walk—as far as the fence. He can't send the stars up to the majors as reward—most of them have been sent up so often it doesn't mean anything.

Forty City Jobs Open to Qualified Ex-Soldiers

Work on preliminary plans for installation of 54,600 additional street lamps under the recently voted $2,000,000 bond issue for new lights will be begun next week by a staff of forty men, Commissioner of Gas and Electricity Carlson said yesterday. Within six weeks 2,000 men will be employed, Mr. Carlson said.

Forty temporary positions, ranging from clerks to be paid at the rate of $1,400 a year to engineers at $3,600 a year, will be thrown open. These jobs will be given to ex-service men whose experience qualifies them, according to the commissioner, who invites such men to apply to him in writing.

'L' UNION VOTES TO STICK WITH SURFACE MEN

on that. I'll do all I can to protect the people."

"Does that include running the cars?" he was asked.

"That is included under protecting the people," he replied.

Mayor's Letter to Arnold.

In his letter Mayor Thompson calls attention to the fact that it is both his duty and that of the officers of the street car men's union under the act creating the old state board of arbitration to notify that body of "a strike or lockout involving more than twenty-five employés." He also pointed out the section of the law which gives the state body power to conduct an investigation, issue subpoenas, and call witnesses when "the general public shall appear likely to suffer injury or inconvenience with respect to food, fuel, or light, or the means of communication or transportation."

City hall officials admit that the state department of labor has no more physical or legal power to enforce its decisions than has the United States railroad labor board. Its only power is that of public opinion.

Here's the Mayor's Scheme.

How attempted mediation will work out in furtherance of the mayor's scheme was explained by one man in close touch with his policy as follows:

"The city believes that Henry A. Blair and the union officials—Quinlan, Tabor, and Kehoe—are working to call a strike on the opening day of the Pageant of Progress. Arnold will call in Blair and the union heads and offer to arbitrate. They will refuse to come. Then the department of labor can proceed to investigate on its own motion, subpoenas witnesses and dragging in the books.

"It will make findings calling for only a small wage cut, if any, and will make these findings public, sending them to Blair and the unions. In the hope of winning back the street car men's vote for the city hall, a slight wage increase might even be suggested.

Expect Findings to Be Spurned.

"The findings will be spurned by both sides. In the meantime a strike will have been called. Arnold will submit a supplementary report to Gov. Small, probably stating that the 'people's interests' are being jeopardized. With the public howling for street car service the governor, on the recommendation of the department of labor, will be warranted in putting Chicago under martial law, calling out the militia and appointing a provost marshal for Chicago.

"Under these circumstances, it is argued, no injunctions would lie against the taking over of the lines. The governor would order the provost marshal to run the cars and the men would be taken back at the present wages."

Count on the Governor.

"We are counting heavily on the support of the governor," said another city hall cog. "The city has little power to take over the lines. It might make an effort to do so if the cars were not run by going into court and demanding anew the revocation of the franchise ordinances. But the state has plenty of power for the city's purposes. If a strike comes the lines will be taken away from the company with the governor's aid."

The city hall attorneys also called attention to the fact that the union officials have failed to notify the department of labor of an impending strike.

"No strike is impending or threatened until after we have taken a strike vote," said William Quinlan, president of the union. "I probably will have a statement to make on Monday. It seems to me at this particular time, however, that the employés are not seeking any outside interference from any source to settle their wage question with the Chicago Surface Lines.

"Coming as it does from the city hall gang it certainly affords a laugh for the street car men. The city hall officials were the ones who fixed our arbitration on the evidence they submitted to the Illinois commerce commission. We have nothing to do with the state department of labor, and they have nothing to do with us as far as we are aware."

"I do not believe the men would accept state arbitration," said William Tabor, treasurer of the union. "Our dealings are with the company."

Aldermen Cancel Trip.

Ald. U. S. Schwartz, chairman of the council committee on local transportation, yesterday canceled all arrangements for the committee's tour of investigation through eastern cities. He gave as his reason that the members of the committee should be in the city in view of talk by city administration leaders of attempting to seize the car lines in case of a strike. The trip was scheduled to begin July 16.

FREE STATERS TAKE HUNDREDS IN IRISH HILLS

Circle Rebel Forts; Hunt for De Valera.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

DUBLIN, July 8.—The national forces are continuing successfully their operations against the irregulars in the provinces, and it is expected that they will reduce the few remaining strongholds in the north and midlands during the coming week.

There is not much information obtainable here about conditions in the extreme south but it will be only natural if in that region a few organizations furnish a stiff resistance for a short time.

The task of overcoming the armed resistance to the government in Munster has been left to Lieut. Gen. O'Connell. Leinster and Connaught already have been virtually cleared by the eastern command under Chief of Staff Owen Duffy and the western command under Gen. McKeown.

Nationals Capture Hundreds.

Following their failure in Dublin the irregulars sought to cut the communications between the capital and Curragh, where the government is carrying on training and has big military stores. The danger to communications already has been removed by the national encircling movement around Brittas, Blessington, and Kilbride, to which large number of irregulars retired. The nationals have captured hundreds of irregulars, including A. MacDonnell and George Boland, brother of Harry Boland. Others irregulars have been dispersed southward into the mountains.

Blessington, where it was reported Eamon de Valera was staying, was evacuated before the arrival of the nationals. The whereabouts of Mr. de Valera is still a mystery and the whole Free State army is hunting him.

People Welcome Nationals.

Deeper in the country the nationals in various attacks bagged seventy prisoners and killed four and wounded two irregulars with a loss to themselves of two killed and one wounded. According to the best information the nationals are sweeping ahead everywhere with the populations welcoming them after days, and in some places weeks, of domination by irregulars.

Seize Irish Arsenal.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BELFAST, July 8.—A complete war outfit of a secret Irish republican army organization in Belfast was captured by members of the Royal Irish constabulary this morning in a house in Rathbone street. Documents were found showing that the building was the headquarters of the second battalion of the first brigade of the northern division of the Irish republican army.

In the heavy sniping last night, two were wounded.

A group of 200 Free State troops in a battle late last night captured a garrison of sixty irregulars who had seized Skeog house, County Donegal. The irregulars had fortified the house, from which a loyalist had been dispossessed, barricading the windows with bags filled with sugar and flour. Three other fortified houses in the neighborhood also were captured.

The Free Staters encircled the houses and demanded their surrender, to which the irregulars replied: "As soldiers of Ireland and the Irish republic we will defend our cause to the last." After six hours of firing the irregulars hoisted two white flags and marched out, having previously smashed their rifles.

EX-CHICAGOAN SHOT IN ATTACK ON IRISH REBELS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

DUBLIN, July 8.—After their commander, Commandant James Dineen, formerly of Chicago, had been wounded, Irish student officers at the Ballymore-Eustace, County Kildare, training camp stormed the buildings and ousted a band of irregulars who had taken possession. Commandant Dineen led the first attack on the buildings and received a bullet wound in the calf of his leg. The students then rushed the positions, capturing eight men and a quantity of arms and ammunition. A number of irregulars escaped. Commandant Dineen was formerly a major in the 33d division of the United States army.

JAMES DINEEN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Commandant Dineen formerly was a member of the Chicago police force. During the world war he was a major, commanding the 2d battalion, 130th infantry. He is an all around athlete and had a reputation as a crack pistol shot. The commandant is no stranger to bullets, for in December, 1920, when a member of the Hyde Park motorcycle squad, single handed he captured and disarmed three robbers despite the fact that the bandits fired twenty shots at him. For this he was cited for bravery by Capt. James Madden, his commanding officer. A dispatch received from London last March stated that Commandant Dineen had married Miss Rita Burke.

ULSTER PEOPLE FLEE TO U. S. TO ESCAPE TERROR

5,000 Quit North Erin in Six Months.

BY OTIS SWIFT.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

BELFAST, July 8.—The chaos and anarchy resulting from the reign of terror in northern Ireland is causing a constant stream of emigration from the six counties. Many families are giving up their homes of a lifetime and leaving for America. Five thousand Ulsterites have gone to the United States since the beginning of the year.

Refugees from the north and west are arriving in Belfast daily en route to America, England, or Scotland, having been forced out by the burning and bombing of their homes or by the Irish republican army's seizure of their property.

A. W. Hungerford, secretary of the Ulster Unionist council, today told me of the bitter religious feud which is being waged throughout the north where in some districts little pockets of Protestant families are entirely surrounded by Catholics while in other districts Catholic pockets are surrounded by Protestants. The years of strife have embittered both parties until a man living among neighbors of the opposite creed finds life untenable.

Human Life Loses Value.

Seated in his office in the former city hall building, which is guarded by three armed constables to prevent bombing, Mr. Hungerford said:

"Human life has ceased to have any value. Protestant farmers living in Catholic districts along the border are constantly terrorized and are receiving quit their homes by a certain date, otherwise they will be 'plugged' or 'done in.' Unless a man packs up and goes he is constantly sniped at or has his home burned or bombed. In some cases the feudists dig a man's grave in his front yard, telling him he will fill it unless he leaves the village by morning. Terrified, the Protestant families flee from their homes, and flock here."

The Catholic Viewpoint.

I paid a visit to the York street area—a waterfront Catholic district. The houses were bullet chipped, the windows, covered by wire netting, were broken by bullets, and the people kept indoors to avoid snipers. In Pilot street, the center of the fighting zone, was St. Joseph's Catholic church. Here Father Murphy, a tall, young red cheeked man, told me about his dwindling flock.

"It is a war of extermination against us," he said. "A year ago I had 3,000 in my parish, now 1,500 have fled, being terrorized and driven from their homes. About 450 of them were either burned out or bombed out—the rest receiving threatening letters signed with a skull and cross bones or a pictured coffin, or the "Red Hand of Ulster," warning them of death unless they left the neighborhood.

"Forty-two of my parish have been murdered since the beginning of the fighting."

BLAMES U. S. FOR "FOISTING" FREE STATE ON IRELAND

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—Blaming the United States for the foisting of the Irish Free State upon the Irish people, the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic announced today that it would continue to "stand for the recognition of the existing Irish republic unless that republic should be voluntarily disestablished by the Irish people at a fair election."

"The establishment of the so-called Irish Free State," said James E. Murray, president of the association, "is inimical to the proper interests of this country in that the so-called Free State is required to surrender to England the principal Irish ports for use in the event of war between England and any European nation, as naval bases from which to prevent, as England did during the late war, our lawful commerce with neutral countries."

TROTTER WON'T PREACH TODAY AT HIS MISSION

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 8.—[Special.]—The Rev. Melvin Trotter, evangelist and defendant in the sensational separate maintenance suit of his wife, will not deliver a sermon at the City Rescue mission here Sunday evening, as is his usual custom.

"There is only one reason for me not preaching," he said. "There are four eminent preachers visiting me and I thought it best to give the people an opportunity to hear them. I will lead the services.

"The fact that my name has been besmirched from the witness stand has not and will not ever deter me from preaching from the mission. If the court finds I am guilty I may quit."

48 PROBATIONERS PROVE JUDGE'S FAITH IN THEM

Working, Going Straight, They Tell McKinley.

"In these times it is an inspiring thing to receive such a proof of the faith that may be placed in human nature," said Judge Michael L. McKinley yesterday as he looked down into the faces of forty-eight probationers who had gathered in his courtroom at his request for a chance to "talk things over."

Displaying a remarkable memory for names and faces, recalling the details of each man's or woman's case, the judge, chief justice-elect of the Criminal court, called each probationer separately to the bar and asked how he was getting on. In every case the answer was, "I'm doing fine, judge. I'm going straight and going to keep on that way. Thank you for the chance to make good."

Altogether sixty-three letters were sent out under the direction of James B. McLaughlin, probation officer attached to Judge McKinley's court. Forty-eight responded in person, and Mr. McLaughlin said that all the others were accounted for satisfactorily.

Must Make Good.

"Our records show that only about 3 per cent of those put on probation turn out failures," Mr. McLaughlin said. "Today's showing was certainly a vindication of the little underatood and often abused probation law."

Under Judge McKinley's questioning, it appeared that the forty-eight who appeared were entirely supporting or were contributing to the support of 142 dependants. The average weekly wage was $32.

"How's the still going?" the judge asked amiliingly of one colored man.

"It ain't going no more, yer honor," replied the man with a grin. "I'se got me a good job and I ain't a-making any more moonshine. It never did turn out right, anyway. I fixes to make beer and all I gets is corn meal dumpling."

Reports for Her Brother.

A little girl, 14 years old, whose brother had been released on probation to her, reported in his place because he had just landed a job out of town. One boy, a Canadian veteran, couldn't get there on time, but came in late just the same. He was earning $170 a month with board and room working for a railroad, he said.

"You have lived up to the trust I placed in you. You have shown to others who may have been in trouble that a man can come back and make good. I'm proud of you," the judge said in dismissing them.

Chicago's Growth

THE Waves of Chicago's Growth Are Radiating from Certain Fixed Centers Like the Ripples from a Pebble Cast in a Pool.

Fact No. 1

There are certain fixed centers in Chicago from which concentrated communities of new homes are rapidly radiating—centers that offer as great potential possibilities for growth and appreciation in value as did 63rd and Cottage, Wilson and Broadway, Roosevelt Road and Kedzie, Sheridan Road and Howard Avenue—just a few short years ago.

Fact No. 2

There is just one good sized piece of vacant property on the near North Side—bounded by through transportation on three sides—that is still available to homeseekers of the better class as a high grade community site. It is fully improved and restricted, of course, on a main artery of motor traffic—with business frontage at a surface line transfer corner. Naturally, there are schools, boulevards, golf grounds, churches and a shopping district near by.

Fact No. 3

This property will soon be offered to reliable individual buyers on a generous term basis that includes no interest the first year. Sewer, water, gas and sidewalks are now being installed. If the home and investment seekers of Chicago could only be made to understand the wonderful possibilities of this tract, every lot would be sold in 48 hours.

It costs nothing to get the facts. Full information, including the exact location, are YOURS FOR THE ASKING.

ADDRESS T-P 429, TRIBUNE

'DRAG' WON'T GET SOFT BERTHS FOR NEW POLICEMEN

Must Don Uniform, Begin at Bottom, Says Chief.

Chief of Police Fitzmorris gave a surprise party yesterday to the 528 new patrolmen who go into the front line crime trenches on active duty tomorrow.

The party was in the form of a police order which will give some of the new men a rude awakening to the realities of their jobs, and will make them think they are back in the army again. Ninety-five per cent of them are ex-service men.

The general order to commanding officers follows in part:

"Under no circumstances is any of these men to be assigned to any other duty except post duty in uniform, without taking the matter up with me. No violation of this order will be countenanced, no matter what the emergency.

"Men assigned to your command from the school of instruction, who report without uniforms will be dropped by you from the rolls and carried excused without pay until such time as they report for duty in uniform. Report to this office daily the number of men so carried, giving their names."

"Drag" Won't Avail.

The order is the sequel to scores of visits to the chief's office by politicians asking that this or that man be given a job as a chauffeur, a stenographer, a secretary, a machinist, or made a detective in plain clothes.

The chief turned down all these requests, but nearly 200 of the men, "trusting to their drags," and hoping that a chosen few will be allowed to "slip by," have failed to buy uniforms or have purchased or borrowed second hand "roll collar" uniforms of the old style, hoping that their assignment to post duty will be brief.

Other politicians have insisted that certain of the old men be put in plain clothes "now that the department has plenty of new patrolmen." These requests have also been turned down flatly.

Must Begin at Bottom.

"Every one of these men must begin at the bottom of the ladder," the chief said in commenting on the order. "They must serve at least six months on post duty in uniform before any special details will be given them, no matter how meritorious their work is."

The new men, about half of the additional number authorized by the city council a month ago, is expected to make a noticeable "splash of blue" in the residential districts. The Englewood district, one of the largest in the city, leads in the number of new men assigned to post duty, with twenty additional patrolmen.

INJUNCTIONS MAY CLOSE UP POPULAR CAFES

Threats to smother café conviviality in Chicago by Monday night seeped from the United States district attorney's office yesterday. Injunctions against a score of bright light places on evidence of alleged prohibition law infractions will be asked before United States District Judge George T. Page, it was said.

Temporary injunctions pending efforts to secure permanent restraining orders will be asked against the cafés, including Terrace Gardens, Green Mill Gardens, Colosimo's, Friar's Inn, Bella Napoli, Ritz-Carlton, Sunset café, New Roma café, Vusuvio café, The House that Jack Built, and Dell's roadhouse.

Strike Against Paying Tax to Get Better Streets

RECRUIT COPPER WINS HERO'S $100 BY BRAVING FIRE

Hoban, Chateau Thierry Vet, Rescues Woman.

Michael Hoban, a veteran of the Chateau Thierry drive and a member of the police force for only four months, is awarded THE TRIBUNE'S $100 hero prize for June, the thirtieth award for bravery among policemen, firemen and life savers since this newspaper began making such awards Jan. 1, 1920.

Hoban is the first probationary patrolman to win THE TRIBUNE prize.

The act of heroism which brings the $100 prize to Hoban was performed against the advice of a dozen citizens who cautioned him against "getting excited" and advised him to "wait until the firemen come" before attempting to rescue a 75 year old woman from a burning building.

Two Women in Peril.

Hoban, who is assigned to the Sheffield avenue station, was traveling his beat when he saw smoke pouring from the second story windows of a frame building at 3108 Sheffield avenue on the afternoon of June 16. A crowd had gathered. An alarm had been turned in. The fire department was expected momentarily.

"There are two women in the second flat," Hoban was told as he ran toward the building. "One of them is too old to get out, and the other won't leave as long as her mother is up there."

Flames were shooting out of the second story windows as the patrolman seized a piece of building material for use as a battering ram and started to break down the locked door.

Crowd Advises Waiting.

The crowd, which had been urging Mrs. Mary Washlstrom, who was in the upper apartment with her mother, Mrs. Mary Sysblom, 75 years old, and partly an invalid, to flee by a rear stairway, now advised Hoban to wait.

"The firemen with their smoke helmets will soon be here," the patrolman was told as he succeeded in battering in the door.

But Hoban did not wait. Instead he rushed up the stairs and into the smoke filled room. He found Mrs. Sysblom lying on a couch unconscious from smoke and surrounded by flames, according to the official report signed by Capt. James L. Mooney.

Mrs. Washlstrom was at the rear of the flat, where she had been driven by the flames and smoke. She was still refusing to go farther from her mother than was necessary to get sufficient fresh air to breathe.

Hoban picked up Mrs. Sysblom and carried her safely to the street. Mrs. Washlstrom fled to safety through a rear door.

Hoban is married and the father of a 2 year old boy. His home is at 2262 North Robey street. He is a first cousin of Bishop Edward F. Hoban, auxiliary to Archbishop Mundelein.

WOMAN INDICTS CITY FOR LAXITY OVER MATERNITY

Pre-Natal Clinics to Save Lives Urged.

Chicago's need for prenatal clinics where expectant mothers may receive medical treatment and advice is outlined in a survey issued by the Community Trust company and written by Mrs. Kenneth F. Rich, head of the trust company's bureau of surveys, following a survey by Mrs. Rich, Dr. Gertrude E. Sturges, and Miss Ella Allen, director of the social service department of the Chicago Lying-In hospital and dispensary.

Many Needless Deaths.

Chicago, says the report, is careless of its motherhood, with the result that many needless deaths occur each year. Not Chicago alone, but the whole United States is guilty of a too casual treatment of maternity cases. Among the civilized countries, figures of whose maternal mortality rates are published in the survey, the rate of the United States is surpassed only by that of Chile. For every 161 babies born alive in Chicago in 1920 one mother lost her life.

Deaths due to diseases directly connected with childbirth are second in number only to tuberculosis. Yet, says the report, the number of these diseases could be greatly lessened, cut in half at least, by proper prenatal and post-natal care.

Too Few Clinics Here.

Prenatal clinics have demonstrated success to a remarkable degree in cutting down the death rate, both of the mother and the child, in cities and communities in which they have been inaugurated, but Chicago has too few of them and they are not always so located or so conducted as to gain the most efficient results.

In the hospital centers on the west and south sides prenatal clinics are closer together than they should be to serve the needs of the community. They might better be more widely spread to take care of such populations, largely foreign born, and with the customs and inhibitions of the old country, which fill the "back o' the yards" district or the mill districts of South Chicago.

Moreover, all Chicago's prenatal centers are privately conducted. There are no public institutions and as a result only 6,000 or a little more than 10 per cent of the women delivered each year in Chicago receive prenatal care by clinics or similar organizations. The methods of treatment practiced by existing clinics are not standardized nor is their equipment always sufficient.

Urges Education.

As a remedy for present conditions the survey recommends a campaign such as has placed the understanding of tuberculosis within the grasp of the lay mind and its treatment within the reach of all. Many more prenatal centers should be established, chairs of obstetrics endowed in medical schools, and free maternity beds be established.

HER CHARMING "PRINCE" PROVES A FALSE ALARM

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—Helen Ader, pretty 19 year old Pittsburgh waitress, woke up in a Washington rooming house today to find her fairy prince missing and her romance shattered.

Two weeks ago the fairy prince leaped into her life in the person of a prosperous and impressive individual who lunched in the Pittsburgh restaurant where Miss Ader was employed as a waitress. He gave his name as Hayes Walker and modestly intimated that he was a millionaire.

Walker told the girl he had fallen in love with her and wanted her to marry him. He obtained a marriage license and took Miss Ader to Harrisburg, then to Baltimore, and finally to Washington, where they stopped at the Willard hotel. On one pretext and another he had postponed the marriage. On Thursday, Walker took the waitress to a rooming house, and yesterday he disappeared.

Residence Lots $345 up $850 Business Lots

BIG BUSINESS LOTS RIGHT ON THE CAR LINE—WATER AND SIDEWALKS IN AND PAID FOR

LAST Sunday we published a full page general advertisement of our smashing million dollar sale of Chicago Lots—and the response convinces us that shrewd Chicago investors and home-seekers have their eyes wide open for exceptional opportunities in city real estate. Due to the enormous number of lots included in this offer there are still a host of opportunities to wisely invest in property that is becoming more valuable every day. Take Marquette Ridge, for example: There are more than 300 lots in this particular section, with sidewalks and water in and paid for—many houses up NOW—and transportation running right along the property. At prices as low as $345 for a full sized building lot with improvements, located 3 miles inside the city limits—these sites are one of the most attractive purchases on the market today. The big business lots fronting on a cross town car line speak for themselves at the sale prices we are offering. Terms are reasonable: A small amount down and a small amount each month—no interest the first year and the privilege of paying in full at any time. NO CHICAGO INVESTOR CAN AFFORD TO OVERLOOK THIS BARGAIN CHANCE.

Hundreds of Other Bargain Lots $85 up to $50,000 Each

FOR the convenience of our customers we have divided the lots included in this sale into 9 LARGE GROUPS—according to price, location and "kind of lot." You can get specific information in regard to any class of property that interests you by mailing the coupon below for a classification chart of the nine groups.

DEMURRERS OF 6 DEFENDANTS IN EXPERT SUIT UP

Action Is Obtained by Tribune Lawyers.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

THE TRIBUNE filed suit June 24, 1921, to recover more than $1,738,000 paid three city real estate experts. Its lawyers, McCormick, Kirkland, Patterson and Fleming, have obtained an order that the arguments on the demurrers of the defendant shall start tomorrow before Judge Hugo M. Friend.

The bill of complaint charges that the following fees were paid the trio of experts, in accordance with a conspiracy to cheat and defraud the city:

Expert.	Fees.
Ernest H. Lyons	$580,326.41
Edward C. Waller Jr.	580,326.41
Arthur S. Merigold	577,426.43
Total	$1,738,079.25

The defendants, who are made jointly liable for the return of the cash, and their lawyers of record, are as follows:

Mayor William Hale Thompson; lawyers, Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson and Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester E. Cleveland Sr.

George F. Harding, city controller; lawyers, Edward F. Vail and Donald P. Vail.

Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements—lawyer, James V. O'Donnell.

Edward C. Waller Jr., real estate expert—lawyer, John A. Bloomingston.

Arthur S. Merigold, real estate expert—lawyer, John C. Farwell.

Ernest H. Lyons, real estate expert—lawyers, Francis M. Lewee and John H. Bishop.

City Is Nominal Party.

In addition, Albert Fink has appeared for Mr. Lyons, and a city special assessment attorney has appeared for Mr. Faherty in connection with the expert fee cases. Also the city as a municipal corporation is nominally a party to the suit, and its attorneys of record in this case are Corporation Counsel Ettelson and one of his regular assistants, Leon Hornstein.

These ten, or perhaps a dozen, lawyers may desire a week or two to present their arguments, despite the decision of Judge Charles M. Foell in THE TRIBUNE suit to recover $1,065,000 paid two building experts. That suit is much like the suit on real estate expert fees.

For the complainant the lawyers who will probably appear in court are Weymouth Kirkland and Howard Ellis.

Alleges Overpayment.

The bill of complaint alleges that the three real estate experts were paid $1,738,079.25, although the annual appropriation bill appropriated only $325,000 "for the payment of services of any real estate experts in connection with the city beautiful improvements."

The bill asserts that the council authorized the employment of real estate experts on the compensation basis of 1 per cent of the value of the property appraised, but with this string attached: "Before retaining the services of any real estate expert the board of local improvements shall secure the approval of the committee on finance on the sum and rate of compensation to be paid." Then when it did give its sanction it approved of "the employment of Edward C. Waller Jr., Ernest H. Lyons, and Arthur S. Merigold, real estate experts, at $50 per day," and not at 1 per cent of the value of the property appraised.

Another charge reads in part: "The basis of paying for the services of the three real estate experts on 1 per cent of the value of the property appraised was and is grossly and manifestly fraudulent, unlawful and improper, and would and did result in providing payments for the services of the three real estate experts at least forty times more than the fair and reasonable value of their services, and any reputable appraiser or appraisal concern would have performed and would have contracted to perform the same services which the three real estate experts contracted to perform, and which as hereinbefore stated they claim to have performed, for one-fortieth of the compensation provided for by said unlawful and fraudulent contract or arrangement. And it was well known by said William Hale Thompson, George F. Harding, Michael J. Faherty, and the three real estate experts at all times that their services were not worth more than $50 a day, each, for appraising property."

For Machine Purposes.

Another allegation asserts there was a conspiracy among members of the Thompson-Lundin machine "for the purpose of cheating and defrauding the city" and taxpayers thereof of large sums of money" and for the further purpose of "obtaining large sums of money to be distributed amongst persons composing said political machine or amongst persons whose adherence to the persons composing said political machine desired to obtain, whose names are to the complainant unknown."

The demurrers of the defendants assert that this bill does not make out a case and that the bill and proceedings are defective; consequently the suit should be dismissed.

CHILDREN HELP

Two thousand dollars was added yesterday to the fund for improvements at the Alice Home hospital in Lake Forest, from proceeds of a country fair and pet show held in the grounds of the Joseph Cudahy estate in the afternoon and evening.

Lake Forest children organized as a ticket selling brigade and then contributed their beloved dogs, cats, ponies and canaries to the pet show. They also made money by selling pony rides.

Miss Barbara King was one of the girls who helped make the Lake Forest pet show and bazaar a success yesterday. The show netted $2,000 for the Alice Home hospital work. Miss King is showing her dog, Bell.

CITY HALL MAKES NEW EFFORT TO MUZZLE PRESS

Appeals Libel Suit It Lost Against Tribune.

BY PARKE BROWN.

The city hall filed its appeal yesterday from the decision of Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher, which was filed some time ago and which held there was "no cause for action" in the $10,000,000 libel suit against THE TRIBUNE.

The brief and argument were filed with the clerk of the Appellate court in the names of Samuel A. Ettelson, corporation counsel, and Chester E. Cleveland, as "special assistant corporation counsel." The basis of the appeal was that Judge Fisher erred in sustaining demurrers of THE TRIBUNE and in entering judgment "against the plaintiff and for the defendant."

The document numbered forty pages, most of which was taken up with a repetition of arguments advanced last fall by Attorney Cleveland. But the closing pages contained an attack upon THE TRIBUNE, charging that in this suit the newspaper is contending for "liberty to make false and malicious statements."

Club Over Free Speech.

On a basis of common law going back beyond the days of Blackstone, Judge Fisher last October held that to allow a municipality to press a suit similar to the one begun by the Thompson administration would be to create a "weapon to be held over the head of every one who dares print or speak unfavorably of the men in power."

Concluding his opinion, the court at that time said:

"This action is not in harmony with the genius, spirit, and objects of our institutions. It does not belong to our day. It fits in rather with the genius of the rulers who conceived law, not in the purity of love for justice, but in the lustful passion for undisturbed power."

Judge Fisher later gave the corporation counsel's office all the time it asked for amending its declaration in preparation for an appeal, and the amendments were overruled several months ago. The next step was the present appeal.

City Hall's Contention.

The printed argument presented by the city hall lawyers began as follows:

"The question in this case is plain and simple. It is whether THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has the right to publish false statements of and concerning the city of Chicago, wickedly and maliciously, with bad motives and for unjustifiable ends, with respect to the financial standing and credit of the city."

The published statement referred to charged that the city was "broke" or "bankrupt."

The closing part of the Ettelson-Cleveland printed argument was based on the theory that THE TRIBUNE, by filing its demurrers and thereby legally admitting the charges against it "for purpose of argument," as the lawyers say, had confessed that the published statements were maliciously false.

An excerpt of this part of the document follows:

"Now, for the first time in history, THE TRIBUNE is asking for liberty to publish lies with bad motives and for unjustifiable ends. It claims that it needs such liberty in order to enable it, in its way, to protect the people against bad municipal government.

"It cannot with impunity lie about public officials because, under the law, it would be liable for doing so. Hence, to serve its purpose, it must have the liberty to lie about the city.

"Why should any newspaper ask for such liberty? The people are entitled to the truth about their city government. Falsehoods can have no tendency to correct abuses in such government. If there are bad and unfaithful public officials, the remedy is to tell the truth about them. But if the officials are good and faithful, only harm can result from publishing lies that will make the people believe that such officials are bad and unfaithful.

"The people by their constitution and laws have not given this liberty to lie, and they never will. It is essential to our liberties and to the existence of government of the people, for the people, and by the people, that newspapers should not have this liberty to lie for which THE TRIBUNE is asking in this case."

Counsel for THE TRIBUNE have thirty days in which to file their brief and argument. The case has been assigned to the second branch of the Appellate court, consisting of Judges Taylor, Thomson, and O'Connor.

Mail Order Advertising Man

A large, high-grade institution requires the services of a thoroughly competent, experienced advertising man; one who has earned $5,000 a year or more—one who can fill a real big job!

We want a producer; a man who knows the mail order business; a man who can produce effective, sales-getting mail order literature.

This man must know printing, engraving, paper, etc., thoroughly. Above all, he must have a merchandising sense, and be able to write real mail order copy.

This is a genuine opportunity and is not to be overlooked by any man who values the association and future that this position offers.

Please state FULL particulars in first letter.

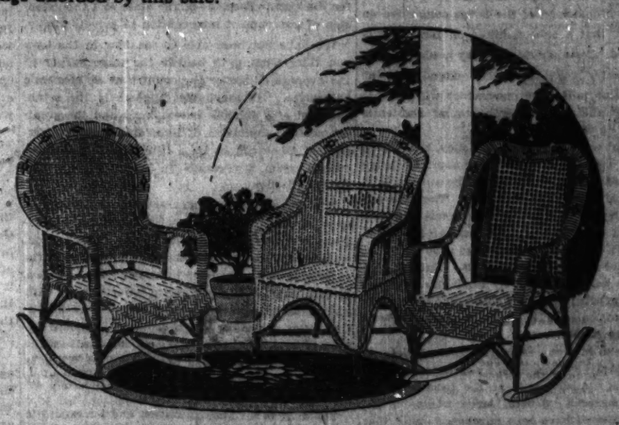
Porch, garden furniture reduced

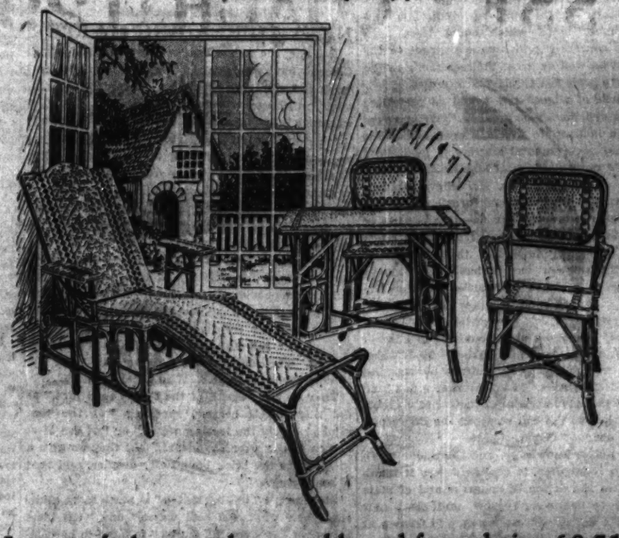
---a remarkable July clearing

The broad choice—the splendid qualities—enhance the importance of the weighty reductions. Chicago visitors particularly are invited to take this opportunity to acquaint themselves with our summer furniture floor—one of the largest and finest in America—and to take liberal advantage of the important savings afforded by this sale.



Imported chairs and rockers at 9.75

Light and airy furniture for sun room, porch or summer cottage; imported peel cane and sea grass chairs and rockers, built on bamboo frames with hand woven seats and backs of flexible material. The three styles illustrated above specially priced at 9.75 each.

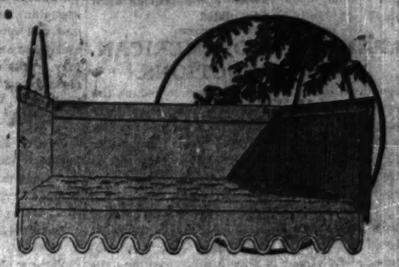


Imported, decorated cane table and four chairs, 68.75

High grade peel cane furniture, imported direct from Belgium, about 40 per cent lower than what it is being sold for elsewhere. The table, with 2 arm chairs and 2 side chairs, makes an excellent set for breakfast room, sun room or porch; the 5 pieces for 68.75. In addition you can also obtain settee to match at 28.50, and comfortable chaise longue at 25.50.

Rustic hickory rocker at 5.25

Made of tough hickory in rugged rustic design with comfortable shaped back and solidly woven seat of hickory splints. The frame is nicely sanded down so as not to injure the finest garments. Style as pictured at 5.25. Arm chair to match at 4.50.



Mandel special hammock at 7.75

Only fifty of these specially made hammocks left to be closed out at this decidedly low price; made of heavy, dark brown duck, with cotton pad on comfortable spring bottom, and with 6-foot chains securely fastened to spring bottom.

Limited quantity precludes our filling telephone or mail orders for the above.

Two carloads of high grade fiber furniture one-third to one-half below regular

A thoroughly fortunate purchase of maker's surplus stock at a noteworthy price concession has just been received, but too late to be pictured here. Samples of each of the numbers will be on our floor Monday morning. Included are complete sun room suites as well as odd tables, chairs and rockers in practically every desirable finish. Seventh floor.

A NATIONAL FORESTRY POLICY.

Formation of a sound national policy on forestry is being advocated by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. Some promise of its formation and adoption is seen in the announcement by Representative Haugen of Iowa, chairman of the house committee on agriculture, that a subcommittee on forestry has been formed. Certainly this country needs a clearly defined forestry policy which shall extend from one administration to the next, and which will serve to systematize and advance both federal and state legislation on forestry.

In general we have a forestry policy, but it is so general in scope that there is constant bickering and delay of important legislation because of local or individual differences of opinion. The necessity of drastic action to conserve our forests was first pointed out emphatically by President Roosevelt. The country has been more or less aroused to the situation for nearly twenty years. But still the forests are being depleted by lumbermen and by fire, and comparatively little constructive work has been done to conserve the timber we still possess or to grow new timber.

The Weeks bill, passed in the Taft administration, provided for government purchase and conservation of timber lands at the headwaters of navigable streams. Several large tracts on the Atlantic seaboard have been purchased under that law, and scientific cutting under government direction is now returning dividends of about 6 per cent upon the investment, and at the same time conserving the forests. The law has worked well, but in a limited way. Local and political differences of opinion have prevented appropriation of funds needed to carry out the purposes of the law, and valuable timber lands which could have been bought and conserved with financial profit to the government as well as great indirect profit to the country have been lost to private interests.

That failure of a good law would be prevented if we had a definite forestry policy. Our congress is too much inclined to overlook such sound but unsensational governmental matters in its periods of heat over current political and legislative subjects. The American public, we believe, realizes the necessity of conserving our forests and planting new ones. It knows that scientific cutting of timber can bring a regular profit from forest lands without in any way impairing their value. It knows that European forests have been giving annual crops of lumber for centuries and that the forests are in better condition now than ever before. It knows that forest devastation in this country is not only bringing about changes in climate in some sections, but is causing floods and much indirect damage to agriculture by washing away rich surface soils. It knows that much land now worthless could be made productive of valuable timber. It knows the sad story of the floods and famines of denuded China.

But this public knowledge, and the public sentiment which it inspires, is useless unless it manifests itself in the action of congress and of state legislatures to conserve, regrow, and plant new forests. If a definite forestry policy is formed at Washington, it will give public opinion something definite to grasp and support. It will be a basis for constructive and continuing legislative action. That is what we need. Most of the forestry bills which come up are good, but they lack united interest and support. A sound policy upon which public opinion could center would provide such support. It should be formulated.

JAPANESE AND AMERICAN ARMY REDUCTIONS.

The Japanese war office proposes to reduce the army by 56,000 enlisted men. The Japan Year Book places the present army at a total of 272,000. The reduction would therefore bring the total to about 220,000. Our congress reduces our army to 135,000.

The comparison is interesting, but the arithmetical statement does not represent the real ratio of strength which will be established. The Japanese reduction is chiefly a reduction in size. The total number of divisions will remain unchanged, but the number of companies, squadrons, and batteries will be decreased. Thus the larger framework of the army and higher organization will remain. At the same time reorganization of equipment will take place, and changes in arms, such as the increasing of artillery and employment of greater numbers of machine guns. The net result, despite reduction of enlisted personnel, may be an increase of efficiency with decrease of expenditure.

The more drastic reduction decreed by our congress goes much farther than a decrease in personnel. It means also a change in system and organization. It prevents the national defense policy from being realized even on the basis of a minimum. Expert study, carefully reviewed, places the minimum required in order that the army may perform its functions of defense and civilian instruction at 150,000. The cutting off of 25,000 men means, therefore, not merely a reduction of 25,000 men but a demoralization of the carefully considered system required for the defense of the nation.

We suppose protest is now too late, as it has been ineffectual up to this time. It is poor consolation that we have made it, but that consolation is about all we have. For years THE TRIBUNE preached certain truths of national military experience and gave warning of what was to come. Its principles and predictions were demonstrated in wasted lives and wasted billions in 1917 and 1918. It is now 1922, and four years have been enough to wipe the lessons out. Victory has hidden the moral of the tale, as in times past. Defeat, bloody and shameful, may be the only teacher we shall heed.

BUREAUCRACY IN AMERICA.

A special policy committee of the American Federation of Labor suggests that "political bureaucracy" finds too much favor in the White House. We do not know what distinction is intended by the term "political bureaucracy." Any bureaucracy that is established under American conditions must be "political." We have no czar or imperial autocrat to impose a bureaucracy upon us. If we get one we, a sovereign people, will have to fasten it on ourselves through political action and it will become a part of our political machinery.

But we hope organized labor has begun to think about bureaucracy and its possibilities and realizes that it has had a hand in a good deal of legislation which is setting up bureaucracy in this country. It is not very consistent to urge public control of every other activity than those of organized labor and at the same time protest against bureaucracy when it is headed its way.

As a matter of fact, labor has been foremost in demanding regulation of industry—of railroads and industrial corporations—which means in each case the setting up of a bureaucracy of regulation. With other leaders of self-styled reform, labor has perpetually urged government intervention and control. It favors government ownership and operation of railroads and of all public utilities, of stockyards and coal mines and tenements. It favors a national minimum wage and local minimum rent laws. It has worked pretty persistently for the aggrandisement of the state and the extension of government intervention in private affairs.

We have not been able to see how in the long run this is going to benefit the wage earner or the average citizen or the country as an economic enterprise. Its inevitable outcome is the establishment of a gigantic bureaucracy and the greatest possible limitation of individual freedom. Organized labor cannot hope to escape bureaucratic control while it succeeds in extending it to all other activities.

Perhaps a modern democracy cannot exist on a consistent individualistic basis. Perhaps regulations are necessary on the theory that groups, classes, and special interests have to be kept within bounds in the general interest. This means a certain amount of government intervention, with its necessary agency of bureaucratic administration. But any class which demands complete immunity and unchecked freedom for itself while constantly urging checks upon other activities is not likely to impress its fellow citizens with its appeals.

The drift toward centralization and bureaucratic supervision in this country calls for intelligent study, at least, and, we think, it calls for vigorous resistance. We think the American wage earner, who has so much to lose through this development, would do well to think the situation out to its logical conclusions.

NEXT TO READING MATTER.

Reading the news that one million residents of Chicago have abandoned their city for a day or a week and of rest, recreation, and change of scene over the Fourth of July holiday, we get a thrill of vicarious entertainment. Watching the heavily laden excursion steamers pull out of the river, we are touched by a projection of the holiday spirit. But best of all is a full page of summer resort advertisements. They never pall. We read them, line by line. High hopes and adventure come within the grasp of our imagination, bowed down by tariffs, politics, and civic problems.

They talk a deal of "bathing, boating, fishing, dancing, golf, tennis, hot and cold water, electric lights, home cooking," etc., but even such details of entertainment and comfort, coming from the pen of the summer resort advertiser, inspire. Their writers are full of their subject. Their space is limited. They suggest "The Compleat Angler" in the one word "fishing." Who could do more?

They do not "speak of the things they love," as did Stevenson's beggar, speaking "of the tent pitched beside the talking water," or "of the blest return of day over the moors," but they do give a message to the brick bound city dweller, and that is something.

Stevenson's "talking water" is much more alluring than "hot and cold water," and "the blest return of day over the moors" is more to be commended than "electric lights." But even so, we are thrilled by a page of invitations to a week or a month of life in the out of doors. Hot water and electric lights cannot pursue one beyond the bedroom or the hotel veranda. Every person of the thousands who accept these invitations will find something of which we of the city know too little and will return to the pavements and the offices and shops and factories better equipped for another fifty weeks of labor. That thought alone is sufficient to inspire the thrill.

"A VICIOUS POLICY."

Senator Borah of Idaho is now attacking the proposed ship subsidy for the upbuilding of an American merchant marine as "a perfectly vicious policy of relieving a certain class from taxation." Mr. Borah probably is not overlooking the fact that his state is a considerable distance from salt water or probable connection therewith, but he is overlooking such sound American doctrine as that uttered by President Harding last week to the effect that this country has reached a stage in its national life where anything that is overwhelmingly of interest to one group cannot help being beneficial to all.

The attack upon the proposed subsidy on the ground that it taxes part of the country for the benefit of the rest evidently ignores that theory. It is also at variance with Mr. Borah's expressions of opinion on national defense at the time of the arms limitation conference. He overlooks the fact that unless this policy of relieving ship owners and operators from taxation is adopted there will soon be no such class to relieve, and there will be no possible auxiliary service for our limited navy in an emergency.

The merchant marine cannot be built up without a subsidy. That is a fact generally admitted. Neither England, France, Germany, nor Japan can keep up their merchant marines without a subsidy, and the chances of the United States doing so, especially with the higher wages paid by this country on the sea, are nil. When Borah attacks the subsidy, therefore, he is decrying and opposing the effort of the government to build and operate a merchant marine. He wants England and Japan to carry our goods, charge us what they will for the service, handicap our foreign trade as compared with theirs, and incidentally increase their wealth and sea power at our expense.

The taxation arrangement which he decries he does not explain. He implies that money thus saved will go into the pockets of the shipping men. It will not do so. That feature of the proposed bill merely provides that shipping interests shall be excused from a tax on their earnings only if they shall set aside a sum equal to such tax for construction and equipment of American vessels. And even that arrangement is fixed for only ten years. Borah's statement that such a provision is a "perfectly vicious policy" can be properly weighed only when we remember that it comes from the senator from Idaho.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Hollyhocks bloom against the wall which the rambler roses have climbed, and there are red and white. Larkspur is still blue against the hawthorn, but the white phlox drops its petals and the wild sunflower's yellow head tops the thicket.

Hollyhocks are for permanence. They mean the walls and fences of Nantucket. The iris is now only blades of green at the foot of the pine, which has a half foot of new green to show its growth. Nicotiana has opened tubes of the orient to scent the night when a south wind blows and when fireflies light fairy lights in the cool dark of the cedars.

Another ticket is fresh in the calendar of the year, but maple seed pods fall to the ground. The young white oak is above the ground from last fall's acorn, just covered by the soil, and white elder blossoms stand above the green of the wild grapes. July is young, and the year is bold, and the ticket of the half way month is barely touched, but the sun is traveling south.

The wood thrush still sings, but early goldenrod is ripening to bloom as the last red bud of the wild rose opens to unfold petals which then fall to the ground. White moths flutter in the white sunlight. Antares is an old sun, and shines at night in the south. The chipping squirrel stores its grain for the winter, which is an act of hope; and a weasel gets him, which is destiny. But the white moths waver in the white sunlight, and the fireflies speck the cool dark of the cedars, and these ephemeralities are visible, and destiny is hidden as the weasel. The July ticket is barely nicked.

SHALL WE FORGET THE HERRIN MURDERS?

A meeting called by the Rev. H. A. Johnston in the Fine Arts building adopted resolutions asking Gov. Small to appoint an impartial committee to investigate the Williamson county labor massacre of June 22 and make the facts public. The purpose is "that the state of Illinois may be recognized in the eyes of the nation as purposing to administer thoroughgoing justice on the basis of the facts revealed."

That is a harmless resolution. It will do no damage. If acted upon favorably, it may do some good. But there are plenty of facts already available, without any investigation whatever, to warrant action.

We know there was a massacre growing out of labor troubles. We have the verdict of a coroner's jury as evidence that two union miners and nineteen nonunion men were murdered. We know that not one arrest on a murder charge has been made, or one indictment for murder returned. We know that as long as twenty-one murders can be accomplished in one small community in one day, and not one step taken to find or punish the guilty, the reputation not only of that community but of the state which contains it, and does nothing to clean it up, is blackened.

Those are facts beyond dispute. They require no investigation. They do require action, of the most drastic sort.

ELEMENTARY PRINCIPLES OF BUSINESS AND THE RIGHT TO WORK.

(Wyoming Tribune-Leader.)

Almost without exception the press of the country, regardless of politics, has condemned the brutal murders in Williamson county, Illinois.

Almost without exception newspapers, ministers, representatives of other professions, and business men generally condemn violence resulting directly or indirectly from strikes.

Because of this fact it is not unusual for radical leaders to criticise the press and others similarly situated and charge them with being partisans of capital or of employers. Of course that is an unfair criticism.

The position of the newspaper, for instance, is a very natural one, and it is in harmony with the position of most law abiding citizens or institutions. The man who owns or manages a newspaper learns that there is no compulsion about his business. If the individual is dissatisfied or can do better elsewhere he quits work and goes there. The publisher knows that he cannot compel people to subscribe for or read his paper. He knows that he cannot compel advertisers to use his columns. He understands thoroughly that if the pay roll is not forthcoming the employés will not work. He knows that up to a certain point, if his credit is good, he may be able to borrow money at the bank or purchase material on time, but he knows also that if he does not eventually pay his notes with interest or meet his current bills he cannot get money at the bank or material from manufacturers or others.

He knows that he cannot combine with other newspapers and force people to work for him if they do not want to, nor can he find any organization that is able to compel people to read his paper, bankers to loan him money, or supply houses to furnish material if he does not pay.

In short, he finds that he must observe certain rules, certain ethics, and certain laws which govern individuals and firms in their relation to one another and the public. These are well established and are in harmony with natural laws that he expects nothing else.

Knowing that he cannot through persuasion or argument or intimidation make his business succeed if the elements of success are not in it, or if he is not willing to work or willing to pay he knows further that he cannot take a club or a gun and force some one to work for him or to read his paper or to advertise in his columns, and he knows that the same general rule applies to the merchant, who has no method of compelling people to buy his goods to the exclusion of the goods of some one else.

Therefore, it is the most natural thing in the world when labor, organized or unorganized, seeks to do things outside the laws of society or nature, or says the labor of this man shall be employed to the exclusion of any other man, that such action should be criticised.

The business man may believe in organized labor; he may be an employer of unorganized labor, but he knows that the union must play the game according to rules. If it cannot win by the justice of its cause, the worthiness of its efforts, the correctness of its intentions, the quickness of its wits, and its general resourcefulness, founded in right and justice, it simply is in the same position as an employer who has failed.

That is all there is to the unanimity with which the newspaper or professional or business man condemns outbreaks such as that which occurred at Herrin, Illinois, or may occur in any prolonged strike in which large numbers of men are involved. The Tribune-Leader would like to hear from others on this subject.

BABIES WHO HESITATE.

To come or not to come. That is the question.

Whether to bide a wee and add another pound or so.

Or, to launch oneself into a life one knows not of.

This is supposed to be the soliloquy of a baby at about the two hundred and sixty-eighth day of life, and on the verge of entering the world, about to begin the fight of an independent existence.

Some babies dread the step and put it off until the morrow.

Dr. Charles B. Reed says the mañana habit—the put-off-strik responsibility habit, dread-to-take-the-step habit—is as harmful to babies as it is to grown folks. His statement is that more babies are sacrificed to post-maturity than to prematurity.

Here goes the iconoclast "let loose."

Women brag about their 10 pound babies. Hark ye all such!

The proper weight of a baby at birth is 6 to 9 pounds. The proper length is 19 to 21½ inches, and the proper measurements of the head are 4 to 4.5 inches from before back and 3.4 to 4 inches from side to side.

If a baby exceeds these measurements he has delayed being born beyond the normal time. It does not mean that nature intended him for a Hercules at 21 years of age.

While there are exceptions Winckel says the above statement holds true three times out of four, or, in 75 per cent of the cases. It is, therefore, the rule.

Does the 10 pound baby have any advantage over the 7 pounder? No. Dr. Reed says the 10 pound baby is expected to lose from one to three pounds within the first three days of life, whereas the normal loss of a normal baby is only nine to fourteen ounces.

The big baby is big because his tissues are full of fat and water, and this is promptly burned or squeezed out.

Reed tells us that, when in a fair growing way, the unborn child increases its length about one-third of an inch, and its weight about about three-fourths of a pound a week. Therefore, only a fairly brief postponement may bring a 9 pound baby up to a 10 pounder, and a week's postponement is not a matter to be bragged about. There are no gains for the child or the mother. The dangers to, as well as the discomforts of, the mother are increased.

Likewise, the danger to the baby.

And since life is being made so safe, so far as diarrhea in the last nine months of the first year is concerned, the accidents to the baby at birth, causing deaths during the first three months of life, are becoming of relatively greater importance.

In fact, the infant welfare workers are agreed that the next effort must be to make the life of babies safer in that first three months.

If we will quit bragging about 10 pound babies the start will have been made.

Therefore, the advice to the soliloquizing baby is to "Come on in, the water's fine."

FOOD FOR 7 MONTHS CHILD.

E. M. P. writes: "Our baby boy is 7 months old, weighing 15 pounds, and has been fed on malted milk since he was 3 months old. In addition to the malted milk, he has had some orange juice for the last 2 months. We are now starting to feed him a little graham crackers and some cream of wheat. We are not intending to wean him until next fall, when it becomes cool again.

"The questions I would like to ask you are as follows:

"1. Is malted milk a complete food for a baby until he is weaned, or should we start to replace it with cow's milk at this time?

"2. If we should use cow's milk it will be necessary for us to pasteurize it, and I would like to know the length of time and temperature to heat it for best results."

REPLY.

1. A child 7 months old, fed malted milk, needs fruit juice, puree, and finely mashed vegetables. Since there is considerable carbohydrate in malted milk, but little outside cereal is needed. Let him gnaw on hard crackers and meat bones.

2. I can see no special reason for giving milk. If you give any boil it or heat it until it simmers.

FINICKY FROM TONSILS!

A sympathetic mother writes: "Your article, written for the mother of what you called the 'Prima Donna Baby' interested me greatly because of the similarity of her case and mine.

"My boy of 4 years had lost weight for six months, was always ready and anxious to eat candy and cake; but in spite of the fact, I kept them from him. He would not eat enough at meals to keep a bird alive.

"Finally, we were told by a throat specialist that he had a case of chronic tonsilitis.

"His tonsils were removed last August and in a few weeks he began to gain in every way, and, at the present date, I am unable to fill him up at meals. He has gained seven pounds.

"The mother whose case interested me mentioned the fact that her child had tonsilitis. Do you not think it possible that her baby is getting absorption from that source?"

DO NOT OVERFEED BABY.

Mrs. A. L. C. writes: "Want to know what to do with a baby with an acid stomach. She is 5 months old, weighed 8 pounds when born, doesn't gain, had to take her off breast, as the milk seemed to be too acid for her.

"Am feeding Mellin's food now, every two hours, but she spits so much of it up. Her little stomach seems so weak."

REPLY.

You probably made a mistake in taking her off the breast, but now that you have done so you must go on.

A baby 5 months old should not be fed oftener than one every four hours between 6 in the morning and 10 at night. Feeding after 10 o'clock at night should not be done.

In addition to milk or food made from milk, such babies need fruit juice, tomato juice, cereal and water.

If you will feed her at longer intervals, give her stomach some rest spells and do not overfeed, she should get all right.

WOULD BE AN ATTORNEY.

Chicago, July 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A man has been graduated as an attorney at law and has a diploma as such, but has not passed the Illinois state bar examination and consequently is not yet practicing.

1. Has he any right to issue printed cards to his friends with his name and address on which he is styled "attorney at law"?

2. Has he any right to be receiving letters from any one with the envelope marked "attorney at law"? F. T.

1. No.

2. Yes, but his conduct which has caused them to be so addressed may be punishable.

BE ON THE SAFE SIDE.

Chicago, July 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A young woman I know is a notary and her commission does not expire for another year. She is soon to be married. After her marriage can she continue to use her maiden name for the remaining year of the term of the commission? Or will she have to get a new commission? K.

We would say that she could continue to conduct the notarial business under her maiden name, but since it is important to the third parties not only that their testimony be correct, but that it be so generally accepted that no serious question will be likely to be raised, we suggest that she take up the matter with the secretary of state at Springfield, Ill. MAKE YOUR OWN TERMS.

Chicago, July 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I rented a store to a man for one year. He sold his business to another man, with my consent, and I agreed to give the new owner a two year lease. The lease was made out in regular form, and I signed it and handed it to him to sign. At the time I delivered the lease he said he was too busy to take care of them then but would do so and return them to me. He stalled me along for a couple of months and then returned one copy with his signature, but he had added clauses to it and scratched others out. Has he the right to do this over my signature without my consent? How can I nullify the lease? J. L.

Notify him that his terms are not acceptable to you and that you will regard him as a tenant by the month.

OUSTED.

Mobile, Ala., July 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—At the time of my mother's death my sister and I were in business together in the building owned by my mother. She left a bill of sale to my sister, in which she conveyed to her the building in which we were doing business, but, to make it safe for me, she had a clause in mine which read, "Also the right and privilege of together using with my sister the storehouse and lot as long as we both lived." My mother was not dead a year when sister made it so unpleasant for me I had to get out. What would you advise? M. H.

If the bills of sale were not delivered with intent that they be effective before your mother's death, they are probably invalid, so that the property descended to her heirs. Employ an attorney and go over the facts with him.

MEMORY TESTS Can You Answer These?

Answers to these questions will be published tomorrow.

1. Where was the "Spanish Main"?
2. What was the picture made from a story by Rex Beach, produced when pictures were young, in which a big fight occurred?
3. Give five synonyms for sagacious.
4. What language is the one most spoken in Barcelona, Spain, and in the surrounding region?
5. What is a patent?
6. Who was "Juno's watchman of a hundred eyes"?
7. Who was Elizabeth Barry?
8. What American city was known forty years ago as "The Future Great"?
9. Where and in what year was the Panama-Pacific International exposition held?
10. What battle was fought on American soil after peace had been declared with the country with which we had been at war?

Answers to Yesterday's Questions.

1. Who in Greek mythology guarded the golden apples of the sunset? Hesperides.
2. What is Alexander Melville Bell's "visible speech"? A phonetic system of writing all languages with scientific accuracy, the characters being made up of lines, curves, points, and angles symbolizing the nature and articulation of each sound.
3. Did Gaby Deslys ever work for the screen? If so, what was her principal picture? Yes. "Infatuation," for Pathe.
4. Who was the American general who carried war into foreign territory without a declaration of war, whom congress attempted to censure, but was supported by the President and gained a popularity that sent him to the White House? Gen. Andrew Jackson. He was ordered by President Monroe to end the Seminole war in 1818. He pursued the Indians into Florida, a possession of Spain. He executed the leaders and forced Spanish officials to comply with treaties. The next year Spain sold Florida to the United States for $5,000,000. West Florida extended to the Louisiana boundary at the time.
5. Is there oil in Alaska? A recent report of the secretary of the interior estimates the Alaskan oil supply at 35,000,000 barrels.
6. What animal has been made the national emblem of Canada? The beaver.
7. Who was Amelia Barr? An Anglo-American novelist, author of "Romance and Reality," "Bow of Orange Ribbon," and "Friend Olivia." Born at Ulverston, Lancashire, England, March 29, 1831.
8. What are five synonyms for the word ablution? Washing, purification, cleansing, abstersion, and defecation.
9. Who wrote the "Epolst"? George Meredith.
10. In what year was the Ottoman empire established? In 1338.

TO BE TAKEN WITH A GRAIN OF SALT.

Wheaton, Ill., July 1.—I note in this morning's issue the wail of the poor downtrodden railroad officials. They sure do have their troubles.

Having had a great deal of experience with railroad officials, extending over a period of thirty years, I have learned to take any statement made by one of them with a grain of salt.

I am wondering how long President Byram of the St. Paul is going to get along, or President Findley of the Northwestern if they have their wages cut. How can they get along on anything less than $80,000 a year? The situation as I view it is this, a conspiracy on the part of the party in power, interstate commerce commission, railroad labor board, and railroad officials, exists, to reduce wages below that on which one can live decently and save a little for a rainy day.

T. Dewitt Cuyler, chairman of the executives' committee, makes the statement the unions will be fighting the government. Who fights the government? The railroads, to be sure. They maintain a staff of high salaried lawyers whose sole business it is to pick flaws or technicalities in every law relating to the regulating of the railroads that is placed on the statute books, federal or state.

The public receives no consideration from these railroad officials, only when they want something and are being squeezed. Then they cry for help and sympathy, enlist the government on one side, public sympathy on the other, then their press agents proceed to flood the country with literature that is a pack of lies and misrepresentation of facts. "GOOD OLD BOB LA FOLLETTE."

La Crosse, Wis., June 28.—A Mr. John Rogers, Chicago, in yesterday's "Voice" suggests that the people of Wisconsin retire "Bob" La Follette, and makes it known that "all he knows" about La Follette is that he "seems to be against about everything American."

For Mr. Rogers' edification we will say that if Americanism means government loans of millions to the railroads while the returned soldiers are denied a bonus—then Bob La Follette is against it.

If Mr. Rogers believes those who fought and suffered as a result of the war should bear the expense instead of the profiteers who reaped millions off of it—then Bob is against that brand of Americanism.

If he is an ardent "dry," a firm believer in Volsteadism and one of those blue noses who would live his neighbor's life for him—then "Bob" is un-American.

But if Mr. Rogers has been misinformed as to the true definition of Americanism and if, at heart, he really believes in equal justice for all—be they high, low, rich, or poor—then he should move into Wisconsin and join the ever increasing army that is this fall going to return good old Bob La Follette to the United States senate by the biggest vote ever piled up for a Republican in the state's history. JOS. KAMINSKY.

P. S.—Incidentally we may have La Follette, but we have no Small-Brundage scandals or Williamson county atrocities.

CHILD LABOR.

Dubuque, Ia., June 28.—I should like to know what percentage of the youth of this country would benefit by the "child labor law."

I am 14 years old. My brother, 14 months younger. Father and I work a 210 acre farm. We get up at 5 a. m. My brother fetches the cows from the pasture. I tend to the hogs. Father tends to the horses and cleans out the stable. If I and my brother are not done milking he turns in and helps us finish and separate the milk with the hand separator. Then we eat breakfast and get to work in the field about 7 to 7:30. We quit work so as to eat supper at 6 p. m., and we are not through with the chore work till about 7:30.

This is about the usual hours for work here among the farmers. And from what I have been able to learn the farmers all over the corn belt work about fourteen hours a day.

With long hours and all of us working we barely kept even the past two years. Father's books show that after taking out interest on the investment that we worked for board and clothes. We will have a hired hand helper during October and November and we kids can go to school till about April 15, when we will have to quit school to work. If pa don't conclude he can afford to hire a man to let us finish in school.

Our county farm agent says union labor and the eight hour day is mostly the cause of idleness and low prices.

I have it figured out that if all the farmers would work only eight hours a day they would get about twice as much for what they produced, as they would produce about 40 per cent less and their expenses would be lots smaller for horse feed, wear and tear, wages, etc.

I don't see why Chinese can't be used to mine coal and build roads here, as they work for little or nothing and it would make things better for everybody in the country.

THE TRIBUNE and other papers and writers don't seem to have much concern if the farm boys have the life dragged out of them with long hours and hard work. It is the city and town boys that they think would be better running the streets and alleys than working. If this drag continues I will be glad if another war or something starts up.

JACK MCDERMUTT.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

How dear to this heart are the scenes of my childhood.

How dear to this heart are the scenes of my childhood,
When fond recollection presents them to view!
The orchard, the meadow, the deep-tangled wildwood,
And every loved spot which my infancy knew;
The wide-spreading pond, and the mill which stood by it,
The bridge, and the rock where the cataract fell;
The cot of my father, the dairy-house nigh it,
And e'en the rude bucket which hung in the well—
The old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket,
The moss-covered bucket which hung in the well.

That moss-covered vessel I hail as a treasure;
For often, at noon, when returned from the field,
I found it the source of an exquisite pleasure,
The purest and sweetest that nature can yield.
How ardent I seized it, with hands that were glowing!
And quick to the white-pebbled bottom it fell;
Then soon, with the emblem of truth overflowing,
And dripping with coolness, it rose from the well—
The old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket,
The moss-covered bucket arose from the well.

How sweet from the green, mossy brim to receive it,
As, poised on the curb, it inclined to my lips!
Not a full blushing goblet could tempt me to leave it,
Though filled with the nectar that Jupiter sips.
And, now far removed from that loved situation,
The tear of regret will intrusively swell,
As fancy reverts to my father's plantation,
And sighs for the bucket which hangs in the well—
The old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket,
The moss-covered bucket which hangs in the well.

MRS. J. A. PATTEN SELLS GOATS FOR TISSUE BUILDER

Medical Concern Buys 'Em for Lymph Purposes.

Mrs. James A. Patten, wife of the former wheat king, having gained a reputation as the cultivator and raiser of blooded goats for milch purposes—a business out of which it is said she has been able to gain an independent income—has branched out, it was learned yesterday, into more extensive lines in the goat business.

MRS. JAMES A. PATTEN.

Mrs. Patten recently has sold eight goats of an extremely tender age to the Animal Therapy company, 7 West Madison street, makers of powerful lymph compounds for the treatment of certain chronic disorders and the general building up of wasting tissues.

This was learned from W. P. Hendry, expert caretaker and herder of goats for Mrs. Patten, who has charge of the animals, both at the Evanston hospital, where a number are kept for their milk, and at Mrs. Patten's farm on Dempster road.

Put One Over on Hendry.

In order to obtain the information, the reporter had to "put one over on" Mr. Hendry. He told Mr. Hendry he represented persons interested in buying young goats for their glands and other matter. And the goat expert, being—as bucolic persons are like to be—without guile, believed him and talked freely.

"O, yes," he said, "we'll have some of those young goats for sale right along. We recently sold eight of them to a man down Dempster road here a piece. He represented a doctor in room 701, 7 West Madison street."

Then he went more into detail: "Of course," he asserted, "we don't sell the really high valued breeding goats. These we sell are what we call graded goats; but they are of excellent stock, and, according to the doctors, exactly suited to their purpose."

Dr. Hawley Silent.

The doctor at 7 West Madison street proved to be Dr. Joseph R. Hawley, formerly professor of the practice of medicine at the Chicago Clinical school, now head of the Animal Therapy company.

Dr. Hawley refused to discuss his business, stating that it would be highly unethical for him to do so.

Only goats of the common short haired variety are used. The goats are anesthetized and the substances used for the compounds taken from them.

Mrs. Patten apparently is much pleased over her departure in the goat business, for recently, while discussing it with friends in Evanston, she is said to have remarked, laughingly:

"I am making some extra money out of that branch of the business now."

MARY KENNICOTT, CENTENARIAN, TO BE BURIED TODAY

Funeral services for "Grandma" Mary Kennicott, Arlington centenarian, who died Friday evening, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from the Arlington Heights Methodist church.

Mrs. Kennicott would have celebrated her 101st birthday on Aug. 2. She was born in New Hampshire, the daughter of a Methodist minister. A daughter, Mrs. Eva Williams, and three grandchildren survive.

BOY KILLED BY AUTO.

Victor Korvan, 5 years old, 545 Delaware street, Gary, Ind., was struck by an automobile last night as he jumped from an ice wagon on which he was riding. He died two hours after the accident at Mercy hospital. Homer Gelerstirk, city fireman, driver of the automobile, was not held.

WOMAN THIEF IN AUTO LOOTS 3 APARTMENTS

Works Single Handed in Argyle Street.

Police of Summerdale station are perturbed over a series of burglaries on the north side early last night which are said to have been committed by a lone woman robber. Entering the first floor apartment of Mrs. E. H. Dahman, 1354 Argyle street, by means of skeleton keys, she carried away clothing and jewelry valued at $887.

In the apartment of Agnes McDonald, at the same address, articles of jewelry and wearing apparel valued at $500 were taken. Dr. O. L. Olson, residing on the third floor at 1354 Argyle street, suffered a loss of $1,800. It is believed this same woman recently entered the home of Paul Morton, 1875 Winnemac avenue, where $1,875 was taken.

Loot Carried to Car.

The mysterious woman burglar was seen by a number of persons as she carried armloads of clothing to a large car parked at the curb near the looted apartment building, but no one suspected her, so confident and open were her operations. Capt. Martin O'Malley of the Summerdale station, however, got an accurate description of the burglar.

The woman is described as about 35 years old, with attractive features and clothes. Her hair is dark and nose inclined to prominence. She wore a tan coat and lavender hat. Her movements were entirely feminine, the police are informed, destroying the theory that it might be a man in disguise.

Seen on North Side.

A woman answering this description was seen several times on the north side last week, usually in the vicinity of large apartment houses. It is believed that she visits a vestibule, makes sure the family is absent by repeated ringing of the call bell, and later drives up in her car. In using an automobile to carry away her loot, her operations resemble those of Mrs. Etta Heil, the burglar maid now under detention in California. It is thought that she works entirely by herself.

Capt. O'Malley, in addition to sending out a warning to all patrolmen, is considering the use of a squad of policewomen in anticipation of a possible return of the woman thief.

Urges Fine for Doctors Failing to Report T. B.

A campaign to enforce the ordinance providing a $200 fine for doctors failing to report cases of tuberculosis to the health department was announced yesterday by First Assistant State's Attorney Edgar A. Jonas, who was recently elected president of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium. Mild cases will be isolated in their homes, under supervision of city health inspectors. Severe cases will be treated at the sanitarium.

SEEKS $50,000

Disfigured as a result of an automobile accident, Mrs. E. T. Heister of the Parkway hotel, commercial artist's model known as Helen Hunter, will appear before a jury in Judge Francis S. Wilson's court tomorrow seeking $50,000 damages from J. E. Murphy Sr. and J. E. Murphy Jr., 3204 Sheridan road.

Mrs. Heister declares that on Nov. 25, 1919, while examining a tire on her car at Hollywood avenue and Sheridan road, she was struck by the Murphy car.

The Murphy car, she asserts, was being driven at a reckless and high rate of speed.

Pioneer Doctor Is Dead; in Lake View Many Years

Dr. Charles Ludwig, 726 Bertsau avenue, one of Chicago's oldest practicing physicians, died on Friday at his home, aged 73 years. His funeral will be held from the residence at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Dr. Ludwig was graduated from the Chicago Hahnemann college and after a short period of practice in Michigan and Indiana returned to Chicago. Here he opened an office at 2667 Lincoln avenue, in the Lake View district, when that section was still a series of market gardens and truck farms among which he plied his practice like a country doctor, driving his horse and buggy for miles to visit his patients. He maintained this Lincoln avenue office for more than forty years.

Dr. Ludwig for many years was a lecturer at the Hahnemann college. His later years were given over to being a consulting specialist. He is survived by three sons and three daughters.

Yaquis Agree to Peace; Yanks Flock to Sonora

HERMOSILLO, Sonora, Mexico, July 8.—The Yaquis, having been brought to peace by successful negotiations on the part of the government, preparations are under way for putting under cultivation large tracts of idle fertile lands in this state. A number of Americans have crossed from Arizona during the last few days en route to the Yaqui valley region, where already numbers of Americans are raising rice and garavances.

First Discovered by the American Boy and Then Adopted by the Whole Family

BOYS have always insisted on comfort, especially for their active feet. That's why for years every boy either went barefoot or wore "sneakers or "tennis shoes" in the summer, which gave him coolness, lightness, foot-freedom.

And everybody envied the boy.

Then Keds appeared, with a complete line of canvas rubber-soled shoes. They made it possible for the whole family to enjoy the boy's summer "luxury." They have become the national summer shoe of America.

Light, cool, easy-fitting, Keds let the feet cramped by months of stiff shoes return to their natural form and breathe. And then Keds have a snap in their lines and finish which makes them popular even on the verandas of exclusive clubs.

The Parade strap pump; white canvas; rubber soled; women's sizes, 2 to 8, 2.95

The Champion tennis bal; white or black duck; rubber sole. Children's, women's and men's, at 1.25 to 1.69

RUSSIA INSISTS ON CASH FOR ALL SEIZED PLANTS

Small Owners Find Little Hope in Hague Offer.

BY EDWIN HULLINGER.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

THE HAGUE, July 8.—After several clashes over their diverging principles as to national economy, the Russian and allied experts have swung around in a circle ending virtually where they began on the question of the restitution of property.

From Maxim Litvinoff's seemingly categorical rejection of the principle of restitution and Leonid Krassin's "correction" that "in actual practice many properties might be restored if the conference agreed," only one definite fact stands out. The Russians are still using their properties as pawns to obtain concessions. This was their position at Genoa, and having thus far failed to obtain what they want, they are still holding on to their pawns.

Follows Policy of Opportunism.

The word tilts which culminated in a stormy meeting yesterday have left the situation exactly where it was when the Russian delegation left Moscow on April 10. Then the Russians went to Genoa with the determination to use confiscated property as expediency required. They proposed to make returns when they could see an immediate and direct gain for themselves, otherwise they would retain the properties until they could hand them over to some one who could help them.

Discarding all questions of principle the Kremlin dictated itself to its present policy of opportunism, hoping to find enough business men willing to come in on that basis.

The Russian standpoint has certain defensible features, among them the government's contention that it cannot allow the factories to remain idle when the original owners are not able to resume. This is undoubtedly dictated by national necessity for Russia's emergency is such that every wheel must turn, even if they must be operated by new hands, if the country is to be restored.

No Hope Offered Bankrupts.

But this does not justify ignoring the rights of the original owners who are bankrupt, owing to the effects of the revolution, and thus lack capital to get their factories running. Nothing in the proposals thus far holds out any hope of compensation for them, despite the fact that they have already expended much in establishing Russian industry.

This failure is not due to the soviets' inability to find other means to indemnify them. The government has large areas of timberland, mineral fields, and other properties formerly belonging to the czar's government or the states, and it could use parts of these in satisfying the claims of the factory owners who are threatened with loss of their plants.

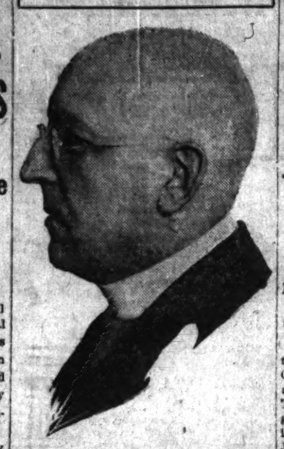
Vast Sums Needed.

That large sums must be sunk by every concessionnaire before operations can even be begun was the unanimous opinion of all the industrial experts and former manufacturers with whom I talked before I left Moscow. A majority of the factories are in a deplorable condition, the bulk of the machinery must be renovated if not replaced, and the buildings are in shabby condition.

Vast outlays must be made before a penny of profit is produced.

Owing to the fact that many of the foreigners operating in Russia before the war were members of big firms, it is probable that a majority will have the funds to meet these demands, but the smaller operators will be left stranded.

Priest-Chancellor



The Rev. Ignace Seipel, recently chosen chancellor of Austria, who is attempting to put the bankrupt country back on its feet. He has combined politics as leader of the Catholic or Christian Socialist party with his duties as a priest for many years.

Any One Ready to Give Blood to Save This Boy?

Urgent appeals for volunteers to offer their blood to save the life of George Slapicka, 15 years old, 2400 South Central Park avenue, were issued last night by officials of St. Anthony's hospital at West 19th street and Marshall boulevard. The boy was riding a bicycle yesterday and crashed through a plate glass window to avoid a collision with an automobile. Physicians say he will die from loss of blood unless transfusion is accomplished before 10 o'clock this morning.

JAPANESE PRESS CHINA TO HALT BANDIT RAIDS

Tokio Fears Army Must Enter Manchuria.

BY RODERICK O. MATHESON.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TOKIO, July 8.—The Chientao district on the Manchurian side of the Corean border—the Mexico of Japan—again is in a most disturbed state. Ten bands of mounted bandits, aggregating several thousands, are invading the section in which live 1,000 Japanese and 300,000 Coreans and creating a reign of terror.

The Japanese authorities presaged the dispatch of Japanese troops across the border in protests filed with Peking on June 28, saying in part:

"Since conditions may possibly take such a turn as to compel the Japanese to adopt suitable defensive measures, the Japanese hope the Chinese will immediately instruct the Chinese authorities to take steps promptly which will render it unnecessary for Japan to resort to such measures and thus insure adequate protection for Japanese residents."

Send Second Note.

Another note on July 5 reviewed the border situation, stating that Japan regretted the notes to China had failed and that China had not carried out its repeated assurances that it would fulfill its duty by protecting foreign residents. Concluding it said:

"Should the Chinese continue to fail to fulfill their bounden duty the necessity of protecting Japanese residents might compel the reluctant Japanese government to dispatch troops again, and it is hoped, therefore, that the Chinese will fully realize their responsibility and take such effective measures as will relieve the threatened situation."

Japanese Press Urges Action.

The Japanese newspapers express exasperation over the new complication which is developing on the eve of the troop withdrawal from China and Siberia. A section of the press is urging a revival of pressure on Peking to secure an agreement regarding the Corean border similar to the Chinese-French agreement on the Annam border whereby the police of each country are free to act on either side of the line, transferring prisoners irrespective of their nationalities.

FEEBLE WOMAN, UNABLE TO STOP GAS FLOW, DIES

Mrs. Anna Suhr, 70 years old, 403 West 60th street, a pioneer resident of Englewood, was found dead of gas asphyxiation in her basement apartment yesterday. She had opened a gas jet with a pair of pliers. Unable to shut off the flow, and too feeble to escape from the room, she was overcome. Neighbors, attracted by the odor of the escaping gas, discovered her too late. The body was taken to Hornung's morgue, 6323 Wentworth avenue.

URGE SENATE TO PASS CHINA ACT TO SAVE TRADE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SHANGHAI, July 8.—The American chamber of commerce cabled chamber of commerce and trade bodies in the United States today, urging them to work for the immediate ratification of the China trade act measure pending in the senate. The message states:

"The American business situation in China is growing desperate and demands immediate action on the China trade bill. Many American firms are withdrawing and America is rapidly losing a foothold in the face of the aggressive trade policy in China by Japan and European nations."

The China trade act provides for the federal incorporation of American firms doing business in China. It has been pending in congress for two years.

American Oil Company Official Slain in Mexico

San Antonio, Tex., July 8.—Warren Dwight Harvey, paymaster for the New England Fuel Oil company, was murdered near Panuco, Tampico, on June 17, according to word received here by Mrs. A. T. Housden, an aunt, today. At the time of his murder Harvey was carrying a 10,000 pesos payroll to an oil camp. When his body was found he was sitting erect behind the steering wheel of his auto. There were two bullet wounds in the head and one in the chest.

SHANTUNG DEAL MAY BRING NEW CHINA BOYCOTT

BY J. B. POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, July 8.—The Shantung Chinese assured THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent today that a renewal of the Japanese boycott is certain unless the negotiations in Peking over the Shantung question result favorably for China. The Japanese merchants in Shantung are urging their government to be liberal in its terms, as the present movement is endangering their business.

The Japanese are confident they can dominate the commerce in the province irrespective of political changes if friendly feeling is promoted. They urge that Japan invest millions in Chinese good will, saying the grave and costly mistakes formerly made should not be repeated.

Americans See Little Hope.

The Germans are making little effort to regain their business in the territory, saying they will wait to see if they are to get an even chance. Americans generally do not express much hope, declaring the Japanese have everything pretty well sewed up commercially, particularly when China is rent by multitudinous political, financial, and military troubles.

In some parts of China charges are being circulated that the Chinese delegates at the Shantung conference are pro-Japanese, but these accusations generally are discredited.

Plead for Open Door.

American and British commercial interests in Tsingtao have sent a memorial to the Japanese delegation advocating: first, that Tsingtao harbor be controlled by Chinese maritime customs officials; second, that the wharves and their approaches be controlled by the municipality or an organization having occidental representation; third, that the harbor free zone be continued; fourth, that the occidental representation in the Tsingtao government shall not be on a property owning basis; fifth, that all public works shall be municipally controlled; sixth, that the Tsingtao municipality shall receive a part of the customs income; seventh, that the Tsingtao municipality shall receive the rents, taxes, and proceeds from the sale of public lands; eighth, that Shantung railway shipments shall be exempted from certain taxes.

These points, are principally a plea in behalf of other nationals for equal opportunities for commerce in Shantung with the Japanese and that the open door policy be truly applied.

Girl with Bullet in Brain Is Dying with Meningitis

Bayshore, N. Y., July 8.—Two year old Virginia Brown, whose brain was deeply pierced by a rifle bullet last Tuesday, approached death from meningitis today, while doctors would not operate for the bullet, saying it would mean sure death.

COUNTY MOVE TO GET $2,000,000 SEARS TAX FAILS

Efforts of County Treasurer Patrick J. Carr to force payment by judgment of nearly $2,000,000 personal taxes assessed against the estate of the late Richard Sears, founder of the Sears, Roebuck company, were frustrated yesterday when Judge Claire Edwards in the Lake County Circuit court enjoined Cook county officials from selling Loop real estate, pending the disposition of a civil suit soon to be heard by him.

Taxes from 1907 to 1913, inclusive, have been ignored by the estate, now in the hands of Mr. Sears' widow, Mrs. Anna L. Sears, who contended their assessment was illegal on the grounds that she was a non-resident. Mrs. Sears lives at Grays Lake, in Lake county.

Local county officials planned to procure judgment against certain loop real estate tomorrow, and satisfy the tax claims by immediate sale.

Here is a peculiar thing about the Royal Automatic Storage Gas Water Heater: while it gives service far superior to any other heater, its initial cost is not greater—but less.

THE Royal automatic Storage Gas Water Heater

The reason is that the Royal is designed to heat water by an entirely new method which lends itself to simple construction, easy installation and low cost of operation. Its performance is a revelation to those who are not familiar with the excellent service it gives. By all means investigate it. You can see one demonstrated in actual operation at our showroom.

The Most Talked Of Barber Shop In Chicago

Presents an

Editorial on Hair-Cuts

Why Is The Crystal "Different"?

Because—

A boiling geyser of water sterilizes every razor before it touches your face.

You get an individual lather brush, comb, hair brush, etc.

Individual towels — of course.

Shaving soap in tubes—no unsanitary mugs. All other soap piped from sanitary, hidden reservoirs — it can't be used twice!

No soiled towels, paper, etc., in sight—it disappears into a trapdoor after use.

This is the most unique shop — even in specially constructed, electrical, sanitary units — in America. The owner invites your inspection.

Expert Manicurists on Duty

Stage Stars

Our assertions are verified by the patronage of many of the stars and celebrities of current Chicago plays. Leading men must look right — dressy — well groomed—so they patronize the "CRYSTAL" when they need a haircut. We'll be glad to demonstrate the reason why.

DO you realize how much your appearance depends upon the way your hair is cut? Your hair, don't forget, is one of the biggest factors in your appearance—and, incidentally, the way it's cut means much to the particular man. An expert barber can always keep you looking at your best.

An expert barber takes into consideration the shape of your head as well as your wishes, and cuts your hair to order —that's the way it's done at the "CRYSTAL." There are many shops where a haircut is still a "ready made" proposition, and the same one is given to every customer—with no regard for the fitness of things. You've been in some of those shops—you swore you'd never go back again.

Consider "CRYSTAL" super-service!

Here you get as much of an individual haircut as everything else in the shop is individual; your hair is carefully trimmed, expertly, symmetrically aligned, and when you're through you have—

That well-groomed, dressy appearance.

You've seen it on particular men everywhere—in hotel lobbies, on the stage, on trains, etc.

But not every barber can accomplish it—it takes an expert.

There are 20 at your service at the "CRYSTAL," under the constant supervision of the owner, Mr. Cominos. After you once experience a "CRYSTAL" haircut you won't ever be satisfied again with less.

These hot days you'll enjoy it, too, for the "CRYSTAL" shop is snow-white throughout and as cool as a grotto. You'll walk out feeling a new man and able to take up business again with the snap and vigor of early morning.

Real comfort can be obtained by asking one of our experts to give you one of our famous shampoos. Not only are they hair and scalp health for you, but they are invigorating. Our process is exclusive and will be a positive delight and surprise to you. We ask a fair investigation.

As for a shave!

Our shaves are really massages—they include a witch-hazel steam, plenty of hot and cold towels, a cold cream massage, etc.; and the price is the same that you pay anywhere else for less.

By the way—

ALL OUR PRICES ARE THE SAME AS THOSE THAT PREVAIL IN ANY OTHER LOOP SHOP.

100 MILE RAPIDS TO OVERCOME IN WATERWAY PLAN

Means Immense Hydro-Electric Power.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Cornwall, Ontario, July 8.—[Special.]—As the Rapids Prince shot the stretches of turbulent white water today, the Illinois waterway comissioner, under tutelage of W. A. Bowden, Canada's representative on the joint international engineering board, began to visualize the St. Lawrence seaway project.

The rapids barrier to commerce extends over a distance of about 100 miles between Prescott and Montreal, with an aggregate fall of about 220 feet. For years Canada has had canals around the rapids, which are in three groups, but although they have been twice rebuilt they are still too small for modern ship traffic, for the locks will not take boats exceeding 14 feet draft and 260 feet length.

The plan submitted a year ago by the engineers of the two governments proposes to drown out some of the rapids by building dams, and to get around the others by short canal links with lift locks as large as those in the new Welland ship canal.

Thirty Miles of Canal Channel.

All told there would be thirty-three miles of canal channel and seven lift locks; for the rest of the way from Niagara and the Welland canal to the sea ships would have open sailing on the river.

In addition to the making of an outlet from lake ports to salt water, the greatest hydroelectric power on earth would be developed, eventually over 4,000,000 horse power. Of this about 40 per cent is in the international portion of the St. Lawrence; the rest lies below the point where the river ceases to be the boundary. The project contemplates for the present the development only of the power in the international reaches of the stream. It is figured at 1,500,000 electrical horse power delivered on the distribution switchboards, or twice as much as is now developed at Niagara Falls.

The cost of proving navigation to give a deep channel all the way from Lake Ontario to Montreal and of building the power plant is estimated at $252,000,000. This would give a minimum dept of twenty-five feet. To make it thirty feet would cost $17,900,000 additional. The experts figure that the electrical power will pay the cost of the improvement.

Work Divided Into Two Sections.

The proposed work is divided into two main sections, the international from Lake Ontario to Cornwall, and the all-Canadian from Cornwell to Montreal.

In the international section are the upper rapids, over which the Illinoisans traveled this morning. They are to be drowned out by a series of dams near Cornwall running from shore line to various islands, and they will give clear sailing from the long Sault Rapids to Lake Ontario. The white water around which boats are now taken in the three Williamsburg canals will be obliterated and 1,500,000 horse power will be developed.

This section runs a distance of about forty-five miles, Prescott to Cornwall, and the fall in the river amounts to ninety-one feet.

There will be a dam twenty miles upstream at Ogden island which will control the Lake Ontario level and dikes will be built at various points. It is estimated that 4,780 acres will be flooded on the Canadian side and 6,780 acres on the American side. On the Canadian side the flooding involves the protection of several small towns and the inundation of several villages and a number of cemeteries that have been in existence for a century. The engineers have found that the most economical location for the power houses in the international section is on Barnhart island, which is entirely on the American side of the boundary.

River Drops 134 Feet.

In the national section of the river below this city between Cornwall and Montreal, some 72 miles, of which 52 miles is through open lake, the river drops 134 feet. It is overcome at present by the Soulanges and Lachine canals. The Soulanges canal goes around three rapids, the Coteau, Cedars, and Cascades. The plan is to build a fifteen mile canal between Lake St. Francis and Lake St. Louis, with two pairs of flight locks each with a lift of about forty feet.

The present Lachine canal, eight miles long, overcomes two rapids, the Sault Normand, just below the Victoria bridge at Montreal, with a drop of ten feet, and the Lachine rapids, which early explorers found such a gurgle of swirl and swiftness that they said led straight down to China, hence its name, so one tradition goes. The Lachine has a drop of thirty-two feet. The project is to surmount both the Lachine rapids and the Sault Normand by a canal eight miles long.

According to the engineers, about 2,360,000 horse power could be developed on the all-Canadian sector of the river, when it is desirable in the future, at a cost of $220,000,000.

BANDITS GET $1,620 PAY ROLL.

New York, July 8.—Three bandits held up the paymaster of the Phillips Printing company in Lafayette street today, pressed a pistol into his side and escaped with a bag containing $1,620. The holdup was witnessed by scores of pedestrians.

UNDERTOW DRAGS CHICAGO YOUTH TO DEATH IN INDIANA

Roland Hendrickson, 16 years old, 4328 Ashland avenue, Chicago, drowned Friday when swimming in the lake at Waverly beach, near Valparaiso, Ind. His strength failed, it is believed, when he tried to struggle ashore against a heavy undertow. Other bathers went to Hendrickson's rescue, but he sank before they were able to reach him. The body was recovered and artificial respiration was resorted to for more than an hour. The body was shipped to Chicago yesterday.

FORM AUXILIARY TO BOOST LAKES TO ST. LAWRENCE

The Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Auxiliary association, formed to promote the St. Lawrence seaway to the great lakes, announced yesterday that incorporation papers had been forwarded to the secretary of state. In addition to a board of directors an Illinois state committee has been named and similar organizations are planned in each large region state, it was announced.

"This auxiliary association is the west's answer to the challenge of the opponents of the St. Lawrence project, who recently announced the raising of a $150,000 fund to defeat any plan tending to destroy New York's international trade throttling monopoly," Horace C. Gardner, president of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association, said.

PARENTS VISIT CAMP ROOSEVELT FIRST WEEK-END

Laporte, Ind., July 8.—The first week-end at Camp Roosevelt is being celebrated by the arrival of about 100 parents of boys.

Three baseball games were staged by the "Y" in order to sift out the good players for a first team. Later in the season the Roosevelters will challenge neighboring teams.

Tomorrow morning Rev. W. F. Bostick of the First Baptist church of Laporte, will speak. Boys of other denominations will go to Laporte to church if they desire. Sunday school services will be held in the camp for those boys who remain.

Boy, 11, Reprimanded, Quits Home; Mother Frantic

Thomas Izzi, 11 years old, was reprimanded by his mother, Mrs. Annie Izzi, 1106 South Morgan street, a week ago, because she heard he had stolen some money. Three days ago she sent him to a store to make a purchase. He didn't return. The mother appealed to the United Charities and the Maxwell street police to find him. For, she declared, "I will die without him."

FEARS PACIFISTS SEEK TO RUIN ARMY AND NAVY

Wainwright Denounces Propagandists.

Leesburg, Va., July 8.—[Special.]—Pacifists are seeking to destroy the army and navy and make the United States a weakling among nations and insiduous propaganda is being directed against all the fundamentals of American government, Acting Secretary of War Wainwright declared here today at the dedication of a memorial to the world war dead of Loudoun county.

The secretary asserted the present reconstruction period demands the best efforts of every citizen, the times being in some ways as critical for the future of the republic as those of 1917 and 1918.

Officials Are Alarmed.

The address is understood to be the opening gun in a campaign for Americanism which the war department is undertaking. Secretary of War Weeks, Gen. Pershing, and other high officials have become alarmed at the activities of certain individuals and organizations which appear to be seeking to reduce the army and navy to helplessness.

"Since the war," said Mr. Wainwright, "innumerable 'isms' have sprung up whose objective is to destroy Americanism. Groups of peoples and classes are organizing for every kind of a purpose except a patriotic and national one. Insidious propaganda is being directed against all of the fundamentals of our government.

"The most pernicious of all are those who are striving to substitute internationalism for nationalism. They would destroy from within what no enemy has ever been able to destroy from without—our ideals of government, constitution, institutions, liberties, and leadership in the world.

Would Destroy Defense.

"The pacifists would destroy our instruments of defense, the army and navy, and render us a weakling among the nations without influence or prestige in the world's affairs. These internationalists and pacifists are even trying to induce our youths to foreswear allegiance to our flag and refuse to defend it. 'If such are not enemies, then who is?'

If the United States is to have an influence for peace among the nations of the world, she must retain her strength and individuality as a nation, the war secretary declared.

"The road to peace is the same one we have always followed. America, by her power for good and for right, will lead the world to peace by her example, her cooperation and, if need be, her strength."

BEG YOUR PARDON

Jacob Frank, 501 North Clark street, is not the Jacob Frank whose saloon was held up by F. C. Burnhauser, slain robber, as stated in yesterday morning's TRIBUNE.

THE TRIBUNE Thursday published a statement that Malcolm Holman, sent to the penitentiary for robbery, was a graduate of Culver Military academy. This is untrue, Culver officials reported yesterday.

BLACKMAIL GANG OF 7 CAUGHT IN ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City, N. J., July 8.—[Special.]—As a result of the complaint of a wealthy Philadelphia visitor, whose identity the authorities conceal, the police have rounded up seven men who, they say, are members of a blackmailing and crooked gambling gang that came here to prey on summer visitors. The men are wanted in many large cities of the east.

Detectives, descended on the hotel and arrested five men last night. Two others were picked up today. Packs of marked cards, crooked dice, revolvers, handcuffs, and detective badges were found in their possession. The men were well dressed and carried large sums of money.

G. O. P. SENATOR WANTS FORD TO GET SHOALS BID

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Unconditional acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for purchase and lease of the Muscle Shoals projects, including the government's interest in the steam power plants at Gorgas, would be provided under a bill introduced in the seante today by Senator Ladd, Republican, North Dakota. Senator Ladd said his measure had the approval of several members of the senate agriculture committee.

The bill was identical with that introduced in the house by Representative Wright, Democrat (Ga.).

Senator Ladd, in presenting the bill, called attention to the expenditures made by American farmers for nitrate importations from Chile, and asked the senate if "the farmers should continue to pay more than $3,000,000 annually, when Mr. Ford offers to relieve them of these burdens."

Pope Hopes to Gain Rule of Jerusalem Holy Spots

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, July 8.—The audience granted Sir Herbert Samuel, British commissioner to Palestine, by Pope Pius, showed renewed hope in Vatican circles today that the pope's desire to obtain control of the holy places in Jerusalem will be granted when the mandate is discussed at the next meeting of the league of nations at Geneva.

HER CASH GONE, HUSBAND QUITS FRENCH BRIDE

Tiring of "his French baby" when her money was exhausted, Edward Janssens, a civil engineer of New York, thought seriously of "giving her the air," but instead fled to South America, according to the story told Judge Thomas Lynch by Mrs. Marvella Armond Janssens, who was granted a divorce yesterday.

Mrs. Janssens, who lives at the Great Northern hotel, said she arrived in New York from France in 1917, and after a whirlwind courtship of six weeks, married the engineer.

"He was not working then," testified Mrs. Janssens, "but we were happy, until money matters interfered. He wanted me to give him money, and when I refused, he threatened to take my jewelry."

"Less than six weeks after our marriage," continued the witness, "he left me, and the last I heard from him was a note written on a postal card from South America."

Stop Sunday Funerals in Sioux City After July 15

LEGION NOTES

Declaring that there are no needy ex-service men in the Logan Square district, the Soldiers' and Sailors' Welfare association of exemption district 78 closed yesterday, after five years of welfare and relief work. J. Frank Pickering, head of the association, said that all officials had resigned and $3,000 in the treasury was disbursed to worthy causes.

Plans for permanent headquarters in the loop district for the American Legion will be discussed next Wednesday night at a meeting in the Army and Navy club, 1010 Lake Shore drive. City officials, business men, and heads of local patriotic and civic organizations will attend.

Count Ledochowski Fights Wife's Suit for Divorce

Baltimore, Md., July 8.—[Special.]—Count Vladimir Ledochowski of Warsaw, Poland, whose wife, formerly Louise Warfield, daughter of ex-Gov. Warfield of Maryland, is suing him for divorce, will contest the suit, according to Attorney George W. Stwinski.

Countess Ledochowski charged abanment and infidelity and asked the custody of their three children and allmony. The answer will maintain Countess Ledochowski is a citizen of Poland, having married a Polish citizen.

CHARGES TURKS SECRETLY KILL MANY YANKEES

LONDON, July 8. [By the Associated Press.]—Americans are being secretly murdered by the Turks in Asia Minor and reports then circulated that they died of typhus and other diseases, according to J. Herbert Knapp, civil engineer of Los Angeles, who has arrived from Constantinople after three years in the Turkish interior.

Mr. Knapp went to Turkey principally to investigate the death at Diarbekir of his brother, the late George K. Knapp, who the Turks reported had died suddenly of typhus. He declared that his own investigation, supported by affidavits on file with the American consul at Bagdad, convinced him that his brother was executed by shooting.

"The Turks hated my brother," said Mr. Knapp, "because he knew too much about the massacre of Christians which was then in progress.

"I believe also that Miss Annie Allen of Auburndale, Mass., Miss Charlotte Ely, of Elmira, N. Y., and other Americans who died in Turkey recently met their deaths at the hands of the Turks, although in each case it was made to appear that death was due to natural causes."

HOOVER GRILLS STATES LAX ON CHILD LABOR

Says Stand Perils Local Government.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—A warning of the national peril involved in the increasing tendency to "let Uncle Sam do it" instead of the states that ought to do it was uttered today by Secretary of Commerce Hoover in the course of an interview on the subject of child labor.

Unless this tendency to substitute national for local self-government is checked, the sense of local responsibility will be destroyed and the foundation of social progress undermined, in the opinion of Mr. Hoover.

Yet he favors a constitutional amendment to eradicate completely the evil of child labor in those backward states in which about 300,000 children are employed, if there appears to be no other means of accomplishing the purpose. This would be the case, he holds, of the choice of the lesser of two evils.

Mr. Hoover's Views.

I asked the secretary what remedy he would propose for the child labor evil, now that the Supreme court has held unconstitutional the two laws passed to end the employment of children.

"Every well wisher of children must feel deeply the failure of the last effort in national prevention of child labor," said Mr. Hoover.

"A study of the situation as it stands will show that a majority of states have forward looking and effective laws for child protection; that some others have enacted legislation that at least goes part way. But there is a minority that are still in the middle ages in their attitude to childhood.

"Child labor in these backward states is competitively unfair to industry in the states that have responded to the moral and social ideals of our people. But far beyond this, the moral and economic results of deformed, illiterate, and untrained manhood and womanhood that must spring from these cesspools where child labor is encouraged and is legitimate, injure the entire nation.

Federal Action As Last Resort.

"All of us would agree in the wish that the sense of local government and local responsibility in our counties were such that each and every state would advance itself to the forefront of progress in this, so vital a question. It would be far better for the future of the republic if this were true. With the growing population and growing complexity of our industrial and social life, the constant resort to federal control for solution of difficulties will yet undermine the very basis of social progress by the destruction of sense of local responsibility.

"However, if it is impossible to secure this necessary safeguard to our people by local government, I am one of those who consider the losses in the sense of local responsibility are less than the losses to the nation as a whole, and if all else fails I stand for amendment to the federal constitution that will give the necessary power and authority to compel action in those states which are negligent of their responsibilities.

Child Waste Worse than War.

"Clearly, if economic waste is reprehensible, waste of child life, whether viewed economically or in terms of human and universal betterment, is a blight that in its measure is more deplorable than war.

"It may be worth recounting that our system of individualism can only succeed if we can make effective the success ideal of America. This ideal is that there shall be an equality of opportunity for every citizen to reach that position in the community to which his intelligence, abilities, character, and ambition entitle him. I am a firm believer in this progressive individualism as the only road to economic, social, and spiritual safety and to human progress. Without this tempering, ideal that America has evolved, individualism will not stand.

"There is no equality of opportunity where children are allowed by law and compelled by parents to labor during the years they should receive instruction; there is no equality of opportunity unless this instruction is made compulsory by the state.

"There is no equality of opportunity for children whose parents are not restrained by law from exploiting them, and compelled to give them participation in the beneficent privileges that the state provides for them.

300,000 Children Need Aid.

"Lest some would think because of the deep feeling of many of us upon this subject that these statements can be recited as evidence of the failure of America, let me also add: Out of some 26,000,000 children between 5 and 16 years of age in America, the use of child labor so far as it retards proper development and education of children, probably affects less than 300,000 children. This number is 300,000 below the ideals of America, but no other nation can show so small a proportion."

GIRLS FORM ANTI-HOLDUP CLUB

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

They'll Carry Pistols

Three girls have organized a club to be known as the "Knock 'um Dead" club, the purpose of which is to hand a number of girls together and to apply to Chief of Police Fitzmorris for permits to carry guns to protect themselves from holdup men and morons.

The three girls in the picture are, from left to right: Miss Pearl Schlosser and Miss Rosalie B. Griffith of the Y. W. C. A., 830 South Michigan avenue, and Miss Nancy Fogg, a nurse, who was educated in England and who served with the British Red Cross in the trenches during the war.

The Misses Schlosser and Griffith were walking down Michigan avenue the other night when two thieves held them up. Miss Griffith lost her purse and a diamond ring, while both girls were badly beaten by the highwaymen. As a result they have decided to apply for permits to carry weapons.

American Loses 80,000,000 Kronen; Sounds Awful Big

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VIENNA, July 8.—Julius Steger, an American, lost a platinum watch with forty diamonds, other jewels and money with a total value of 80,000,000 kronen when a thief entered his room while he was asleep. He offered 1,000,000 kronen reward for the return of his jewels. [Kronen are worth about 10,000 for $1.]

Soldier Is Buried Alive When Gravel Bank Caves In

Lawton, Okla., July 8.—Private Louis C. Maresch, Moulton, Texas, was buried alive and three other soldiers were seriously injured when a gravel bank caved in on them at Fort Sill today.

SHOW YOUR EARS, GIRLS; IRENE HAS THE PARIS DOPE

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—Ears! Waist lines! Ankles! O, Irene Castle Tremain, the dancer, was abubble with Parisian fashion chatter when she returned today on the liner Berengaria. Irene had her ears covered up, 'tis true, but she said she's going to be the Joan of Arc of the new ear-revealing craze.

"The Americans who rushed over to Paris with knee length frocks looked out of place. The skirts are long—to the ankles. And waist lines are coming up. Short gloves and short sleeves are back. The prevailing colors? Lavender and yellow."

Box Reveals Pauper, Once Opera Singer, Left $13,000

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—The opening of a strong box by court order in search for a few mementos left an old woman, for many years dependent upon charity, revealed that she had bank deposits, diamonds and jewelry worth $13,000.

Years ago Sidonia Vicat was an opera singer. She had sung with Lillie Lehmann and Mme. Schumann-Heink. She claimed to have married a direct descendant of James Fenimore Cooper."

In September Mme. Vicat was removed to the New York state hospital and June 11 last she died. A niece and nephew survive.

DRY LEAGUE IS BEHIND LAW FOR 18 MILE LIMIT

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—The Anti-saloon league, it was disclosed today, is behind the legislation proposed by Senator Sterling (S. Dak.) to extend the prohibition enforcement jurisdiction to eighteen miles beyond the coast of the United States. This represents the league's latest proposal for the interception of liquor smugglers.

Under the proposed law, prohibition enforcement officers would be authorized to hail, stop, and board and vessel within eighteen miles of the coast and to search the vessel for liquor and evidence of the intention of smuggling.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the league, in explaining and defending the proposed legislation today, said that it merely extends the powers conferred upon federal officers by the "hovering statutes of 1799," by which certain control in customs matters was extended to four leagues from the shore in order to prevent fraud upon the revenue."

U. S. EXPLAINS WHY CHEMICAL SUIT WAS BEGUN

Washington, D. C., July 8.—The determination of the government to proceed against the Chemical Foundation, Inc., was declared by the department of justice in a statement tonight to be an endeavor "to adjudicate the whole question in the most practical and expeditious manner possible and save to the government and the litigants a great deal of unnecessary expense."

The department's statement, issued partially as a reply to the statement made in New York yesterday by Francis P. Garvan, former alien property custodian and now head of the chemical foundation, set forth for the first time the motive impelling the government to make the demand on the foundation for return of all patents, copyrights, and other property transferred to it.

Denies Garvan's Assertion.

The statement also referred to Mr. Garvan's assertion that a delegation of Germans conferred with justice department officials shortly before the government announced its action, declaring that the German delegation "had absolutely nothing to do with any action of the department against the chemical foundation."

The statement called attention that the chemical foundation had brought sixty-seven suits against the United States treasurer to collect royalties.

Considers Case Anew.

It being incumbent on the justice department to defend these suits, the government, it was added, decided that the best procedure required "the original conveyance as well as every incidental step therein should be set aside and the matter considered anew."

LINCOLN PARK TO HAVE AQUARIUM IN SIX MONTHS

An aquarium and a hatchery with a capacity for turning out 10,000,000 fish a year will be opened in Lincoln park within six months, it was announced yesterday. Bids were opened Friday and final action will be taken next week.

The aquarium will be 159 feet long and 60 feet wide and will have a center rectangular space around which will be fifty-nine tanks, with glass sides, facing inward. The tanks will contain two general classes:

Native fish, which includes all species of game fish to be found in American waters—trout, bass, pike, muskie and others.

Fresh water fish from tropical waters, including strange fish found in South America, Hawaii and China. There will be no sea fish.

The total cost will be $143,308.

Mislaid Keys Cost Man Life in Fall from Roof

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—James Horan paid with his life today for forgetting his keys. He returned home and discovered his keys had been mislaid. So he made his way to the roof of the six story apartment house and attempted to lower himself to a window of his apartment by a clothesline attached to a chimney.

The clothesline parted and he plunged seventy feet to the pavement. Neighbors found him unconscious. He died several hours later.

Malt Extract Is Only As Rich As The Malt

A SUIT of clothes is only as good as the cloth that goes into it. If the wool isn't there, the cloth isn't there. The cloth depends upon the wool and the tailor depends upon the cloth.

A Malt extract is only as rich as the malt that goes into it. And the malt is only as rich as the barley it is made out of. If the barley isn't there, the malt isn't there. The malt depends upon the barley and the maker depends upon the malt.

No tailor would put a lot of work on a poor piece of cloth because the result wouldn't be worth the effort.

Neither can you afford to put a lot of work on a poor malt extract because the result won't be worth the effort.

Puritan Malt Extract is the richest malt extract made anywhere in the world. This is so because it is made out of the choicest barley grown anywhere in the world. It is absolutely pure because it is not filled with moisture nor adulterated with cheap corn.

In buying malt extract, it actually doesn't pay in either time or labor to use any but the best. So ask for and demand.

FLAPPER PRAISED BY PREACHER AT CAMP MEETING

Just Like Old Girls, Methodists Told.

Mr. Lugubrius Blue received a black eye yesterday at the Des Plaines campmeeting and Mr. Smiley Gladd come into his own. At the same time the flapper and short shirt wearer were given a bill of health and told they are just as good as their ancestors of the crinoline and pantelet days. Instead of the world going to the dogs, it was said, the world has already been to the dogs, and is now on its way out.

She's as Good as Any.

"The modern flapper is as good as the girl of any previous day," said the Rev. Fred D. Stone, district superintendent of the Chicago western district, who gave an address especially to young people. It was young people's day at the campmeeting.

"It makes me tired to see old ministers and old women talk of the immorality of the younger generation. Silk stockings, short skirts and galoshes are all right. We wore galoshes thirty years ago. The only difference is we buttoned them up."

"The world was never older than it is today," said the Rev. Fred Ingvoldstadt, pastor of the Desplaines Methodist Episcopal church.

"So if there are any good old days the days in which we live are the ones. The spirit of pessimism periodically sweeps the world and is the result of the process of the idealization by which our standards are being continually raised."

Thousands Expected Today.

Simultaneous with the meetings in the main tabernacle meetings will be held throughout the campmeeting in the Swedish and Norwegian-Danish tabernacles.

Today it is expected several thousands will be on the grounds. The Rev. F. F. Farmiloe will lead a meeting at 9:30. Bishop Thomas Nicholson will preach at 10:30 and at 2:30 Bishop W. O. Shepard of Portland, Oregon, will preach. Prof. E. D. Soper of Northwestern university will speak at 7:30. The Swedish preachers will be the Rev. A. N. Sorlin and the Rev. A. E. J. Elison. The Norwegian-Danish preacher will be the Rev. H. J. Ofstie, Racine, Wis.

The hours announced are daylight saving time, one hour faster than railroad time.

NOW SHE MAY WED

MARILYNN MILLER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 8.—"I think Marilynn Miller is making the greatest mistake of her life in marrying Jack Pickford, but I have finally assented," Florenz Ziegfeld told THE TRIBUNE today on his arrival here from Aix les Bains. "When a woman decides to marry, the devil cannot stop her.

"Miss Miller is the most successful actress on the American stage and has been earning $3,500 a week. She has brilliant prospects which will not be improved by marrying Pickford. She needs every ounce of her vitality for her work and chiefly for this reason I opposed her marriage. I have a five year contract stipulating that she was not to marry for five years which has three years to run, and my consent was necessary. Marilynn has sent twenty cables to Paris pleading for consent and I finally gave in. I wish Marilynn happiness, but she is taking an awful chance."

Justice and Mrs. Taft Leave England for Home

Liverpool, July 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Chief Justice Taft and Mrs. Taft sailed for the United States today on the steamer Canopic. They occupied the bridal suite, which was elaborately decorated with flowers. Mr. Taft told interviewers that his visit to London was "one of the most delightful episodes of my life."

Two American Priests Made Bishops by Pope

ROME, July 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Pope Pius today appointed the Rev. Michael Keyes as Marist bishop of Savannah. He also appointed the Rev. Francis Gilfillan, at present rector of St. Louis cathedral, as coadjutor bishop of St. Joseph, with the honorary title of bishop of Spigaz.

MARIO, GENTLE, CHAMLEE, DIDUR SING "MARTHA"

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Ravinia's routine reached "Martha" last night, a survival from a past era, but none the less welcome on that account. A quaint relic, this, though of a group, perhaps, instead of a "school." There is no other work in the operatic form exactly like it, although up to a decade or so ago we were in the habit of bracketing it with Balfe's "Bohemian Girl" and "The Rose of Castile," with Wallace's "Maritana," with Planquette's "Chimes of Normandy," with Benedict's "Lily of Killarney," and two or three others, including Auber's "Fra Diavolo" and Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment," all constituting a special repertoire whose items, in fact, possessed no common divisor. They were catalogued as "ballad operas," though only the Celtic pieces (Balfe, Benedict, and Wallace classified as Irishmen) were properly so described.

"Martha" Holds Its Own.

"Martha" has held its own, not only at Ravinia, but in the Metropolitan, at Covent Garden, and in nearly all of the European capitals, because of an easy, self-contained vitality rather than of virility. In this respect it is in line with the Mozart operas: if not given, all right; if given, we do not quarrel about them, merely reserving the right to insist upon good singers.

Four of Ravinia's post-graduate singers took the parts of the four lovers last evening: Queena Mario, in the title rôle; Alice Gentle, as Nancy, "her friend"; Mario Chamlee, who sings Lionel's not so easy music as well as Orville Harrold used to do—which is high praise; and Adamo Didur, who, with a histrionic flair quite in keeping with his vocal gifts, made of Plunkett something more than an amiable basso who comes in on cues.

Well Sung and Directed.

Naïve though it may seem to an operagoer fed full with Wagner, with such disciples of Wagner as Puccini and Massenet, with Moussorgsky, and other workers in the leit-motif and the modern idiom, the gracious, clement tunes of "Martha" were written for skilled singers, and insist on the musicianship of those who undertake them. They had skilled singers and a good conductor last night; Mr. Hasselmans held the baton.

Lady Harriet (Martha) has a tradition at Ravinia of good singing—Edith Mason's is to go no further—so that Miss Mario had a test to face. She came through with honors. As to Miss Gentle, there has been no other Nancy so good within memory.

MAJESTIC LEAVES 60 PASSENGERS ON PIER; SOME THREATEN SUIT

New York, July 8.—More than sixty second cabin passengers of the giant liner Majestic were left behind when she sailed an hour ahead of schedule today to take advantage of the high tide.

The advanced sailing had been widely advertised, but many of her passengers apparently did not read the ads. Those left behind were taken by the steamer Zeeland, which will arrive three or four days later. Thirty-six refused to sail on the smaller boat, and declared they would sue the White Star line.

The Majestic carried 2,038 passengers. About 5,000 persons sailed on other ships leaving today.

Several left behind denied statements of White Star officials that they had been late in reaching the pier. Ship's officers, they declared, were so slow taking up tickets and letting them on board that a long line was left standing when the gangplanks were pulled up.

DEMOCRATS JOIN IN BOOSTING OF RATES ON RICE

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—Eight Democrats joined with the Republicans in the senate today to double the finance committee duty on rice, one of the few farm products which was not given as great protection in the McCumber bill as requested by agricultural interests.

The house bill duties as approved today by the senate are 1c per pound on paddy or rough rice, 1¼c per pound on brown rice, 2c per pound on milled rice, and ½c per pound on rice meal, flour, polish, and bran.

Don't Need Protection.

Senator Ransdell made the chief argument in favor of greater protection for the rice growers. Senator Walsh [Mass.], Democrat, declared that exports of rice are so great as to indicate that the rice growers do not need protection.

Senator Gooding [Idaho], head of the western agricultural tariff bloc, in a speech assailed William Goldman, clothing manufacturer of New York City, for the dissemination of propaganda in opposition to duties on wool. Senator Gooding quoted from a letter from Mr. Goldman in which it was declared that the McCumber bill duties on wool would increase the retail cost of a suit of clothes by $4 and the cost of an overcoat by $7.50.

Criticizes William Goldman.

Senator Gooding said that the total cost of the wool in a suit of clothes at prices prevailing under the present emergency tariff with wool duties which, he insisted, are higher than those in the pending bill, is from $2.34 to $4.26 according to the grade of wool.

Senator Gooding declared that if it is true that retail prices will be increased, as claimed, those charging them are "crooks" and if not then any one making such statements is a "criminal" for sending such matter through the mails.

STEAMER LEAVES BOSTON ON FIRST TRIP TO CHICAGO

Boston, Mass., July 8.—[Special.]—Departure of the steamship Brandon, Capt. Fred Loveless, for Chicago from South Boston today inaugurated the first direct service between this port and the great lakes.

The Brandon is routed through the St. Lawrence river, the Canadian locks, and the great lakes to Chicago.

The route is about 3,090 miles, and Capt. Loveless expects to make the passage in about fourteen days. Two other steamships, the Bennington and Burlington, are to be placed in the same service and will sail in about two weeks.

CHILD JUMPS FROM CANOE, DROWNS.

Muscatine, Ia., July 8.—Wilford Hurd, 8, panic stricken in a canoe as it floated down the Mississippi river, jumped into the water and was drowned. The lad saw the canoe on the beach and stepped into it. The craft was unfastened and drifted into the open.

WE ESTIMATE THAT

Half a million people ate Broiled Halibut here the past year

Comfortably Cool

Every 3 minutes a fresh supply of air, cooled—not chilled—to a comfortable 70 degrees, is brought into the restaurant by our complete ventilating system. Here you breathe fresh, pure, dry air—not cold, clammy "tunnel air" or ice cold air.

Recently we told you that 328,000 people ate Fried Chicken at the North American Restaurant in one year. That is more people than many dining places serve all told in a year's time. It might sound as though fried chicken was the only thing eaten here. Yet here are even more astounding figures.

During the past year we bought and cooked and sold more than a quarter of a million pounds of Halibut. As close as we can estimate it this means that a half million people ate Halibut here in the year just past—an average of 1370 daily.

Our portion of Halibut with Peas is a great summer dish—so good that patrons often comment upon it as the finest fish obtainable in Chicago. It comes hot from the kitchen every five minutes of the entire day—we don't cook it at eleven and serve it to you at one. It is fresh and juicy and "tasty"—not dry and tasteless as fish so often is. Over it we put a generous helping of pure creamery butter, and include with it a big portion of peas. The portion is so generous that often two people share it. And it costs only 35 cents.

Think of it! In one year nearly a million people ate Halibut and Fried Chicken here. And Halibut and Chicken are only two of the delicious things to eat which are always ready for you here at a low price. Don't you agree it is worth while to serve yourself here, at the North American?

WILL YOU SHARE YOUR VACATION WITH THE POOR?

Algonquin and Ice Funds Need Help.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Share your vacation joys.

Many are adopting this recipe for real joy in connection with Camp Algonquin. A host more people are needed to enlist in the army of real joy riders if the Algonquin fund reaches its required goal.

Here is a letter from a woman who requests that her name be withheld, but whose example ought not to be hid. The letter reads:

"I will enjoy my own summer outing better if I know I have helped some poor tired mother and children to enjoy the country. Enclosed find check for $10.00. In memory of Laurie."

Just Out of Hospital.

A letter from a woman just discharged from the county hospital and who needs building up, said:

"I wish a little information in regards to who has charge of the charity outings and who shall I write to. I just came from the county hospital and would like to go the country awhile."

A mother with eight children wants to go to Algonquin. Perhaps they will have to be taken in installments, but don't you think the mother and two or three of the smaller children ought to go?

Cool Days Don't Matter.

Don't be mislead into thinking that the cool days we have been experiencing lessen the demand or the need. The faucet has been opened and the stream must flow now with a steady current until summer closes.

If the new dining room proposed by the Chicago Board of Trade is erected at Camp Algonquin, making accommodations for 1,200 more, even then Chicago's need will not be fully met, but you will at least have the consciousness of having done your bit. The receipts yesterday to the Camp Algonquin and Free Ice fund follow:

CRACKSMEN BIND WATCHMAN, GET $5,500 IN CASH

Police were hot on the trail yesterday of six genial cracksmen who in the early morning hours, after securely trussing a watchman with wire, blew two safes of the Automatic Electric company, 659 West Van Buren street, and escaped with $5,500 in cash.

Olaf Bergstrom, 6148 Wentworth avenue, the watchman, was released after questioning by Des Plaines street police. Supt. E. O. Eggert of the electric company vouched for the watchman's honesty.

The intruders lay in wait in a dark basement for Bergstrom, overpowering him as he passed on his rounds. Proceeding to the offices of the firm on the fifth floor of the plant, they carefully swathed the two safes there with rugs saturated in water. The safes were then shattered with charges of nitroglycerin.

From the company's safe a sum of $5,000 was taken. An additional $500 was secured from the other safe used as a depository for employes' funds.

BAKING BEAUTY

ISADORE BECK.

Isadore Beck yesterday became a baker in the Bridewell. For a year—heaven forfend, he hopes—he'll pound the dough for his fellow prisoners.

"It's certainly embarrassing," Isadore said yesterday, as he watched the Bridewell ball team play the Stockyards Booster club. "I'm sure my wife loves me and will get me released."

In winning him the twelve months' bakership, for nonsupport, Mrs. Beck testified that Beck is "the most beautiful man in the world," so fascinating that many women tagged his heels.

His Still Blows Up, Cops Blow In, Man Blows Out

Too much gas flame under a still in which he was alleged to have been concocting cherry liquor caused a small blaze in James Xilias' room at 1561 Clybourn avenue yesterday. Hudson avenue police charged him with violating the state prohibition law.

HE'S DEAD, BUT IF SHE REWEDS AND HE COMES BACK—

Yet She Can't Divorce Her "Dead" Husband!

Because Edward Kendig left his wife, Elizabeth Kendig, 735 Bickerdike street, thirteen years ago and has never been heard from since he is legally dead.

Being dead Mrs. Kendig cannot divorce him.

And although she cannot be divorced from the "dead" man she can remarry because he's legally dead.

Then if Edward does an Enoch Arden and returns to place the thumb of his right hand pointedly against his nasal organ and face in the direction of the law that declares him dead, there may be some live doings in our town.

All this being development in Mrs. Kendig's divorce hearing yesterday before Judge Joseph B. David.

The judge gave Attorney Clarence Hansen another chance to file proof that Kendig isn't dead, with legal precedents allowing him to divorce Mrs. Kendig from the dead man if he isn't a dead man.

The decree will be allowed if Hansen's contention that "presumption of death" is good law until it runs up against a divorce tangle appeals to Judge David.

ANGERED HIM BY PROTESTING ON WOMEN, SHE SAYS

Infuriated because she refused to passively submit to his affairs with other women, James H. Hollen, former secretary of the Lincoln Park Yacht club, and more recently a resident of the Chicago Yacht club, abandoned his home, according to the story told by Mrs. Albertina Hollen to Judge Thomas Lynch, who granted her a divorce yesterday.

"He always treated me kindly," declared Mrs. Hollen, who lives at 802 Windsor avenue, "but he was interested in other women. If I remonstrated with him, he grew angry."

Runaway Horse in Noon Crowd Hurts Two Men

A horse hitched to a South End Express company wagon caused panic in noon day crowds at West Harrison and South Clark streets yesterday and injured two men before it was stopped by Sergt. M. J. Burke of the traffic detail and Patrolman John Hayes of the South Clark street station.

John Emisel, 235 West 26th street, the driver, and Patrick Murray, 309 East Schiller street, received a dislocated right shoulder and internal injuries respectively.

DEYO NOW SAYS HE'S INNOCENT; PUZZLES COURT

Judge Orders Sifting of Evidence.

The state's attorney's office is mystified by the string of confessions and repudiations which have been made by Harry Deyo, alias Wilson, a drug addict, recently sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Michael L. McKinley following a confession to the police and a plea of guilty to the murder of his former employer, Harry J. Wemett, manager of the R. and J. Dick company, 63 West Lake street.

Makes New Denial.

Following the sentence Deyo denied his guilt, and Judge McKinley entered a motion to vacate the sentence. Yesterday Deyo once more denied any part in Wemett's death, but told an entirely new story. On the judge's order Assistant State's Attorney John Sbarbaro and Thomas Reilly will attempt to sift the false from the true. Hearing on the motion to vacate was continued until Saturday.

Feared Old Charge.

Deyo contended he confessed rather than be brought up on a charge of rape which is also pending against him. Certain physical aspects of the case, the course of the bullet, the height of the cot on which Wemett was lying when shot, the fact that no finger prints of Deyo were found on the gun, tend to prove a case of suicide.

In support of the murder theory, however, are the facts that Wemett's left hand in which the gun was found was partly paralyzed, and that Deyo that morning found the keys to the office in which Wemett was slain.

BOOZE RAIDERS NAB EX-HEAD OF DRUGGIST ASSN.

Two cases of whisky, a gallon each of gin and brandy, and ten gallons of alcohol, were taken by federal prohibition agents Friday night from the pharmacy of George V. Haering, 570 West Madison street.

The proprietor is former president of the Chicago Retail Druggists' association. His clerk was taken to the South Clark street station and released on $1,500 bail pending arraignment before United States Commissioners Lewis F. Mason and James R. Glass.

The agents later apprehended Dr. Arnold B. Kauffman, 30 North Michigan avenue, wanted on a warrant charging him with conspiracy to violate the Volstead act.

The evidence against Dr. Kauffman, the agents said, consists of ten prescriptions found in raids of Irwin Britton's pharmacy at 933 Grace street on June 26 and June 29. A signature verified as Dr. Kauffman's was found on the prescriptions.

SOMNAMBULIST FRACTURES SKULL.

Sleep walking proved fatal yesterday morning to Mrs. Katherine Nebert, a widow, of 863 Newport avenue. She fractured her skull when she stumbled on the front steps of her home.

NAMING GIBBONS TO PARKER PLACE STIRS G. O. P. IRE

'Done with Coalition,' Republican Leader Says.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

War was declared yesterday by Republican organization leaders against any further nonpartisan election of judges in Cook county. The strictly partisan lineup by which the Democratic judges elected Criminal Court Clerk John P. Gibbons as successor to the late William R. Parker is responsible for the situation.

"We entered the coalition movement in good faith and carried out our part of the obligation," was the statement of one of the recognized Republican managers in Cook county. "At the first opportunity, the Democrats who went on the bench under the coalition program, were lined up under the whip of the political Democratic machinery.

Democrats Gain All Along Line.

"The Democrats had profited at every stage of the proceedings from a political standpoint. At the first chance, however, these same Democrats have bowled over the nonpartisan idea and refused to permit a Republican vacancy to be filled by a Republican. Instead they seized the office and have gone the limit in choosing the Democratic primary nominee for the Parker vacancy. That will be about all for coalition for the present, so far as the Republicans are concerned."

This authority, high in party councils, pointed out that the Democrats had named ten Circuit judges, five Superior court judges, and incidentally a south park commissioner, as well as Democratic successors to County Treasurer Gibbons and President of the County Board Reinberg.

Fill Ticket Vacancy This Week.

The Republican county committee is to be called into session early this week to name a successor to Mr. Parker as Republican nominee for clerk of the Criminal courts. All hands agreed yesterday, including the Deneen, Brundage, and Crowe elements, that the selection may be made by the south side Republication organization, now controlled by United States Marshal Robert R. Levy.

"We have reached no decision as to the candidate we wish to recommend to the county committee," Marshal Levy said last night. "We expect to make a selection within forty-eight hours, however."

Date of the Republican convention to fill the vacancy is to be announced tomorrow, it is understood. The position that will be taken by the city hall organization is not announced.

New Constitution Involved.

The threatened trouble over further efforts at coalition involves the possibility of defeat of the new constitution that goes to a special election on Dec. 12. If the constitution is adopted, there will be nine judges of the unified Circuit court of Cook county to elect next June.

In event the constitution is defeated these judges of the Superior court come along for election in June, 1923: Albert C. Barnes, Charles M. Foell, Marcus Kavanagh, William H. McSurely and Oscar Hebel, Republicans; and Joseph H. Fitch, M. L. McKinley, Hugo Pam, Joseph B. David, John M. O'Connor and Jacob H. Hopkins, Democrats. The new constitution provides that judges assigned to the Appellate court shall serve until 1929.

MYSTERY CAR KILLS FARMER.

Galena, Ill., July 8.—[Special.]—Gilbert Manley, 18, a farmer, struck by an unidentified motor car and dragged a mile, died today of his injuries.

VANISHING ISLE OF THE PACIFIC

SYDNEY, N. S. W., June 8.—[By Mail.]—A description of what is believed to be one of the most peculiar islands in the world and one of the loneliest spots in the Pacific, Walpole island, which has been submerged by the ocean at least six times from all indication, is given by A. C. Mackay, F. R. G. S., representative of the Austral Guano company on the island.

Walpole is about 150 miles east by south of Noumea and contains great deposits of guano. With Surprise island and the Chesterfield group, it is leased by the Austral concern. It is a limestone table, 230 feet from the ocean, accessible at only one spot, at a break in the cliffs where steps have been cut.

Mackay said there were remarkably clear indications on the cliffs of successive water levels, and that pumice, coral and other shells on this curiously raised platform showed that at least six timas it must have been at or under sea level.

Many traces of ancient human habitation were found in the form of walls, obviously built by man, columns of coral eight and nine feet high, large tombs and clamshell bladed instruments, several specimens of which Mackay has presented to the Australian museum.

Fresh water supplies were discovered in two caves. Mackay expressed the opinion that formerly there was a much greater land surface than at present.

"I found undoubted signs of prehistoric habitation," he said. "I also found in places, where the guano cements on to the coral, the remains of the horned turtle, which I am informed have been found nowhere else except in South America and Lord Howe island."

Mackay said that probably the former inhabitants had escaped in boats when the ocean rose and submerged the island, or that they had been drowned in the rising tide. The present population of the island consists of six white men, thirty Japanese and about 100 Loyalty islanders. Poultry and goats are raised for food, while vegetables and fruits grow luxuriantly, tomatoes growing as large as 2½ pounds in weight. Cricket and fishing are the main diversions of the residents.

On Sunday the Loyalty islanders hold two church services, which the whole population attends, he said.

CARTER URGED TO HEAD CON CON VOTE CAMPAIGN

Chairmanship of the general campaign committee in behalf of ratification of the new Illinois constitution that is to be submitted to the state on Dec. 12 has been tendered to Justice Orrin N. Carter of the Illinois Supreme court.

Justice Carter, it is understood, has signified his willingness to accept, and indications yesterday were that definite announcement of his selection by the committee on submission of the constitutional convention will be announced during the week.

Tentative arrangements for the campaign for ratification include the formation of a downstate committee with headquarters at Springfield and of a Chicago committee that will handle the situation in Cook county.

Justice Carter acted as chairman of the general committee that conducted the campaign of education that was effective in securing the affirmative majority that authorized the constitutional convention that sat in Springfield in January, 1920.

Golfer Fined for Trampling Flowers in Hunting Ball

"It was the last golf ball I had and I wanted to finish the game," was the excuse of J. K. Hughes of Wilmette when arraigned in the Evanston court yesterday on a charge of trampling a florist's premises in search of the pellet. Police Magistrate J. F. Boyer fined him $10 and costs. R. N. Gloede, 1405 Central street, Evanston, lodged the complaint.

SPURGIN BANK RECEIVER PAYS 10% DIVIDEND

Payment of a 10 per cent dividend, aggregating $850,000, to creditors and depositors of the now defunct Michigan Avenue Trust company, was authorized yesterday by Judge Oscar M. Torrison. This payment is the second since the appointment of John W. O'Leary as receiver.

According to the petition for authorization filed by Attorney Matthew Mills, counsel for the receiver, the present assets of the company are shown to be $1,180,882.30. Liberty bonds, war savings stamps, and other "quick" assets amounting to $813,068.05 are included in the total.

Claims to the amount of $3,500,000 have been filed by creditors and depositors against the bank, whose former president, Warren C. Spurgin, fled to Mexico just before the crash.

Loans and discounts made by Spurgin totaling $104,702.80 are considered to be doubtful in value, while $661,867.08 is scheduled as "almost certainly bad."

CHILE WILLING TO LET U. S. SMOOTH OUT TACNA-ARICA

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Chile has accepted the Peruvian proposal that in case no plebiscite is held in Tacna-Arica and Chile and Peru cannot decide the sovereignty of the province by direct negotiation, both countries will request an exercise of the "good offices" of the United States, it was stated tonight upon receipt of the Chilean reply from Santiago.

"BIG 3" WILL ASK TRIAL DELAY; SAY PUBLIC IS ANGRY

Belief that the "inflamed condition of the public mind" is adding to the difficulties encountered in the selection of jurors to try Fred ["Frenchy"] Mader, "Big Tim" Murphy, Cornelius Shea, and others for conspiracy in connection with the recent labor terrorism and the death of Policeman Terrence Lyons, has caused attorneys for the defense to consider entering a plea for a continuance until the fall term.

Motion Comes Tomorrow.

Following the dismissal yesterday of the last of 765 veniremen examined since the examination began three weeks ago, it was learned that the defense counsel probably will present a motion for a continuance on Monday morning.

Two of the four jurors accepted for service and sworn in were excused yesterday—George Halloran on the strength of a doctor's certificate that he suffered from heart disease and Guilford Falcon, because of a peremptory challenge exercised by Special Prosecutor Elwood Godman.

It was pointed out during the discussion of the possibility of a continuance, that if the results of the last three weeks are used as a criterion it will be necessary to call nearly 5,000 talesmen to discover twelve acceptable jurors.

Would Take Four Months.

Examination of this number of veniremen would exhaust over four months, based on the progress made recently, so that under no circumstances could the actual trial begin before the middle of October.

It is expected that the motion for the continuance will be predicated on the belief that if sufficient time is allowed to elapse veniremen called for examination will have forgotten the events which led to the indictment of the "Big Three" and will have lost their prejudicial opinions of the case.

ACCUSED IN VAN MURDER, ADMITS IT; GIVEN LIFE

His case almost ready to go into the hands of the jury, Russell Mosby, colored janitor, yesterday broke down in his steadfast denial of complicity, and following the example of his co-defendant Thomas Roach, pleaded guilty to the murder last April of Mrs. Anna Colwell, whose nude body was discovered by police in an empty moving van.

Mosby's breakdown came while Assistant State's Attorney Joseph Savage was making the opening argument for the state. The trial was halted and when the state agreed to waive the death penalty Mosby was sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary. Roach will receive a similar sentence tomorrow.

SMALL'S HEALTH IS IMPROVING, MAYOR REPORTS

Mayor Thompson returned to Chicago yesterday after two days spent with Gov. Len Small on a boat on the Illinois river. The governor's health is improving, the mayor said. His appetite is returning and he sleeps well, but shows the strain of his trial and of the death and burial of his wife. The governor inspected the Alton state hospital on Friday.

The mayor spent a few hours in his office yesterday, and then left for a week-end in the country. He said he was taking a copy of the proposed new state constitution with him and that he intended to study it over Sunday.

WOMAN, 63, FALLS DEAD.

Miss Christina Mayer, 63 years old, of Louisville, Ky., in Chicago visiting her brother, John H. Mayer, 2023 North Racine avenue, fell dead after greeting the family yesterday at breakfast. Heart disease is believed to have been the cause of her death.

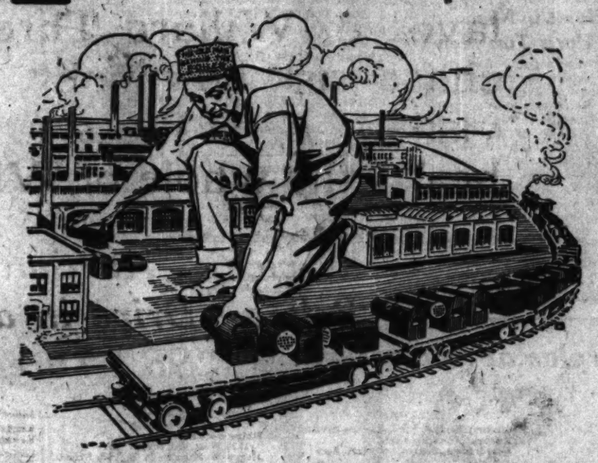
KEWANEE



Shipped in One Piece

An apple may look healthy on the surface but sometimes when you cut it open you find a busy worm in the center. So, too, with your new building. You might make it look like a wing of Buckingham Palace, but if you put an indifferent heating boiler in it, it's an apple with a worm in it.

We often wonder what people are thinking of when they spend thousands of dollars on new buildings and treat the subject of the boiler as if it were a mere incident instead of what it is—the heart of the building.

Why not quit fooling—why not stop taking chances—why not eliminate false economy—and install Kewanee All Steel Boilers, which will last as long as the building, add to its renting and sales-value and insure the comfort of the people in it.

Kewanee All Steel Boilers are riveted together in one piece at the factory, doing away with any chance for leaky joints such as occur in any boiler assembled on the job.

The Old Man Behind the Boiler will give you figures on costs and savings that will open your eyes. Write to him for an eye-opener.

New Prices!

This is important! We are now able to deliver genuine Willard THREADED RUBBER Batteries for $26.60 and up!

Threaded Rubber Batteries always have cost less "per month" and "per mile". Now they actually cost less in DOLLARS AND CENTS.

The how and why of these remarkable prices make a wonderful story of manufacturing achievement. Just as the standard over-size Willard "SJ" Threaded Rubber Battery was and still is a marvel of value, so the new full-size Willard "SR" Threaded Rubber Battery proves to be an eye-opener of quality at the price!

First cost as well as ultimate cost now argues in favor of Willard Threaded Rubber. Make no purchase, risk no money, on any battery until you have visited one of the service stations named below and heard the whole of Willard's astonishing price story.

FIRE ON LINER DELAYS TRIP OF 700 PASSENGERS

Many Are Overcome in Hold of Steamship.

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—One hundred firemen and members of the crew of the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam of the Holland-America line, were overcome by smoke and fumes from caustic soda when for five hours today they fought a fire in the after hold of the vessel, which lay in its berth at 5th street, Hoboken.

Among the firemen who collapsed and were rescued with ropes tied about them by volunteers were Chief Andrew Keller of the Hoboken department, Rudolph Van Erb, chief officer of the Nieuw Amsterdam, and many of the crew of the fireboat James Duane of this city.

Was Ready to Sail.

The fire was discovered by Van Erb at 10 o'clock in the morning, two hours before the Nieuw Amsterdam was to start for Plymouth, Cherbourg and Rotterdam, with about 700 passengers, the line's largest sailing list for the season. Erb and the steamer's fire brigade fought the flames with fire extinguishers for more than an hour. Then Capt. Peter Van den Huevel, commander of the Nieuw Amsterdam, called for assistance from the Hoboken fire department.

When Chief Keller arrived several members of the crew were carrying Van Erb to a temporary hospital established on the rear of the main deck. Physicians who attended him said his condition was serious.

Passengers Ordered to Pier.

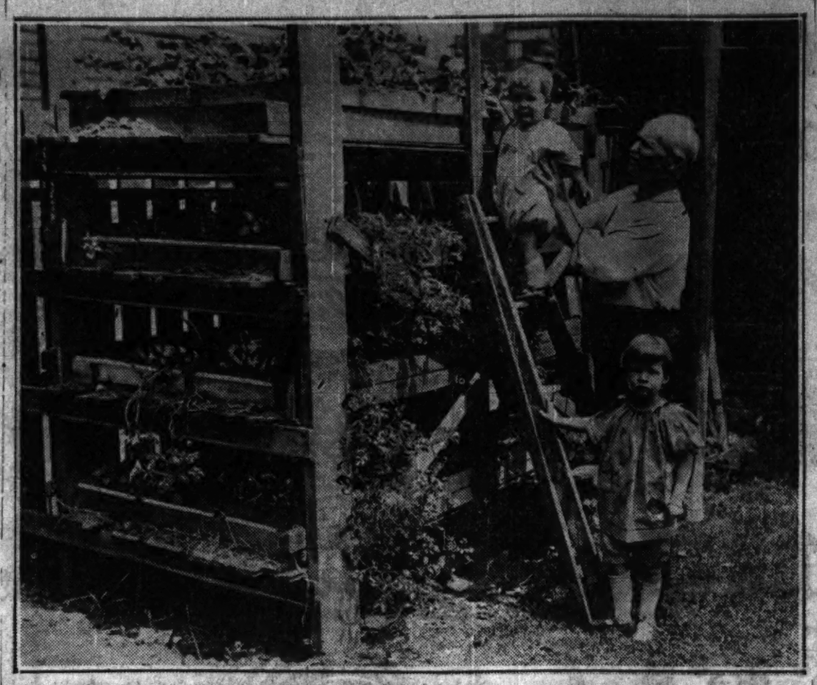
Dense fume laden smoke was pouring from the after hold and into the second class passengers' quarters below the main deck when the Hoboken firemen reached the scene, and Capt. Van den Huevel ordered all passengers to the pier.

Chief Keller at 1 o'clock in the afternoon called on the New York fire department for a fireboat. By that time forty of his firemen and members of the crew had been hauled up to the main deck for treatment by ambulance surgeons.

The fireboat James Duane was sent across the river. Soon all of its crew had collapsed from their efforts in the hold. The fireboat New Yorker was employed as a rescue ship for their comrades and to man the hose on the Duane.

At 3:30 p. m. the blaze had been extinguished, but the main decks were strewn with firemen who had been overcome. Capt. Van den Huevel estimated the property damage at $100,000. Officials of the line said that the Nieuw Amsterdam would not sail until Tuesday, after a careful survey had been made of the vessel.

THEY DO IT IN THE MOVIES—HERE, TOO



Albert Boydell, 5719 Indiana avenue, got an inspiration from the movies, and as a result he has a tabloid garden in his yard. It consists of a series of trays, one over the other. The lower ones are planted in potatoes and the upper ones in cucumbers. He says the plants all are thriving. In the picture Mr. Boydell, his garden, and his two granddaughters, Charlotte and Jane Bossi, are shown. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

CHINA HINTS JAP PLOT IN THREAT TO SEND TROOPS

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—Chinese officials here fear the Japanese government is trying to prepare public opinion throughout the world for an early occupation of Manchurian territory on the pretext that it is necessary for the protection of Japanese residents.

Such is the Chinese interpretation of the statement issued by the Japanese embassy here last night that the foreign office of Japan has warned China that if further bandit raids occur along the Corean-Manchurian frontier, Japan will send troops into Chinese territory.

Chinese officials point out that the first bandit raid of which Japan complains occurred in September of 1920, and the second one a month later. Nothing further of the sort took place until June 28.

If Japan is trying to prepare the way for the occupation of Manchuria she has failed to make out much of a case for herself, in the opinion of the Chinese official interviewed. The specific incident of which complaint has been made is of minor importance, he declared, and even several such incidents cannot in any way justify the occupation of Manchurian territory or the garrisoning of Japanese troops there.

Denby Party Ends Round of Official Jap Parties

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, July 8.—Following a rapid succession of functions, Secretary of the Navy Denby's party ceased to be the official guests of the Japanese government at noon today. The party is temporarily breaking up, but will reunite on Monday when the members will be the guests of the American Association of Yokohama. The Americans will leave at noon Tuesday for Nagasaki.

Herrin Massacre Probe May Start on Wednesday

Marion, Ill., July 8.—The special grand jury to investigate the Herrin massacre, in which more than a score of nonunion men were slaughtered by striking union miners, scheduled to be impaneled Monday, probably will not get under way before Wednesday. The regular July term of court opens Monday, but as this term has no grand jury Circuit Judge Hartwell explained it probably would be several days before the special panel was sworn in.

BRITTEN MAY ASK PROBE OF DELAY AT QUARANTINE

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—Declaring the steamer George Washington of the United States lines, on which he returned today from a three months sojourn in Europe, was subjected to unnecessary delay in quarantine, Congressman F. A. Britten of Chicago threatened to start a congressional investigation into the quarantine methods.

Congressman Britten said quarantine officers did not get into the George Washington until about 7 o'clock today, although the boat had stopped at quarantine at 9:43 o'clock Friday night.

Every effort is being made in England and France to hamper American ships, although Germany is aiding American efforts, he declared. The political situation in Europe, he said, will not materially change until France changes her attitude and gives Germany a square deal.

The congressman declared himself in favor of selling liquor on American ships beyond the three mile limit.

CROKER'S WILL LEAVES ESTATE TO HIS WIDOW

Daughter Florence Gets £10,000.

West Palm Beach, Fla., July 8.—[Specia.]—In a will of less than 100 words, the late Richard Croker, former Tammany leader, leaves all of his property to his wife, Bula Edmondson Croker and appoints her as sole executrix.

In a brief codicil, written about a month after the original will, he asked Mrs. Croker to give his daughter, Florence, £10,000, saying that "She is the only one of my surviving children that has ever shown any gratitude to me."

Drawn in Ireland.

The document was offered for probate in the Palm Beach County court today. It was drawn at Glencairn castle, Ireland, on Oct. 12, 1919. The codicil is dated Nov. 15, 1919. The will is written on a sheet of Mr. Croker's engraved stationery.

It is considerably marked up with corrections, apparently directed by Mr. Crocker. The text of the will is in the hands of Joe J. McDonald, Dublin attorney. He had apparently written Mrs. Crocker's name only with the initials, which were crossed out, and her first name, Bula, written above.

That there will be a contest was indicated by J. T. G. Crawford of Jacksonville, attorney for Richard Croker Jr., who appeared in County court when the document was presented. On what grounds action will be based, he would not say.

Text of the Will.

The text of the will is as follows:

"I, Richard Croker, of Glencairn, Sandyford, Co. Dublin, declare this to be my last will. I hereby revoke all previous wills made by me. I hereby bequeath and devise to my dear wife, Bula R. C. Croker, all the property, real and personal, which I may die possessed of or over which I may have any power of appointment absolutely. I hereby appoint my wife, Bula R. C. Croker, to be the sole executrix of this, my will. In witness whereof I have hereunto signed my name this twelfth day of October, 1919. RICHARD CROKER."

The text of the codicil follows:

"My Dear Bula—I'm writing this note for you to keep, and in case you should survive me I wish you would give my daughter Florence, £10,000. She is the only one of my surviving children that has ever shown any gratitude to me."

KILLS A MAN TAKING HIS DOG TO THE POUND

Houston, Tex., July 8.—Philip Eisbelberger, 14 years old, today shot and killed C. L. Razor, to protect the life of his dog.

Razor, city dog catcher at Goose Creek, near here, was taking Philip's dog to the municipal pound when the boy fired the fatal shot, according to reports here.

After Razor had captured the dog and started off toward the municipal pound, Philip's father reproached him and a fight started, officials here were advised. The boy ran out of the house with a shotgun in his hands and fired two charges into Razor's body killing him instantly.

Both Philip and his father were taken into custody.

June Postal Receipts Here Made Gain Over Last Year

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—Further compilation of June postal receipts statistics shows that the New York postoffice had a greater income than any city in the country with $4,626,168 during the month, an increase of $241,874 over June, 1921. Chicago, with a total of receipts of $3,741,057 in June, made a gain, however, of $442,119 over June of last year. Total postal receipts of the fifty largest cities in June were $22,168,830, an increase of $2,417,139 over June, 1921.

Jewett high-pressure oiling system insures double average motor life

High pressure—20 lbs. oil pressure at 20 miles an hour—40 lbs. at 40 miles—that is what is behind the High-pressure System of the Jewett Six. Three gallons of oil per minute are forced through all main and connecting-rod bearings — and pressure-sprayed to the entire internal mechanism.

Jewett bearings cannot run metal to metal, and heat up from friction; there is always a good thick film of oil in every bearing—under pressure, constantly flowing, continually renewed. This is the system employed on the world's finest cars, but the Jewett is the only car in the $1,000 class which offers it to you.

If you have ever driven a car long enough to get a "bearing knock," you know the expense of renewing bearings. You realize, too, how smoothly this Jewett will continue to run—how much more you will enjoy every mile you drive it. Eighteen thousand miles on a test car have not worn Jewett bearings sufficiently to require even adjustment.

This high-pressure, hollow crank-shaft oiling system of the Jewett Six puts it far ahead of its class in ultimate economy. The trouble heretofore with cars of this price has been that they wear out so quickly. Now Jewett gives you not only the economy of first cost and operation which go with this moderate-sized car. Jewett gives you the certainty of a smooth, quiet motor throughout its long life—at a low upkeep expense destined to be a world's record.

We have on exhibition a Jewett Chassis and a Jewett Motor, arranged so you can see the operation of the oiling system and many other mechanical features. Do not confuse this complete high-pressure, hollow chrank-shaft oiling system with those which employ the "splash" method. Jewett connecting-rods do not touch the oil in the reservoir. All lubrication is by pressure. It alone is sure. Come and see it work.

The Chicago Tribune will give one of these genuine Eastman cameras FREE to any boy, girl, man or woman who will secure 10 six months' subscriptions to The Chicago Daily Tribune.

You pay no money. You collect no money! Simply obtain the signatures of ten persons who wish to take The Chicago Daily Tribune at their homes.

Subscription book and other particulars will be furnished to any applicant at Room 502 Tribune Building, corner Dearborn and Madison Streets.

All subscriptions must be from residents of Chicago or suburbs who are not already receiving The Chicago Daily Tribune at their homes.

As soon as the subscriptions you turn in are verified, the camera will be given you FREE.

Why We Make This Offer

The Chicago Tribune makes this offer to increase the circulation of the DAILY Tribune to that of the SUNDAY Tribune. The average net paid circulation of The Chicago Tribune in the city and suburbs for the month of June was:

Sunday Tribune 462,435
Daily Tribune - 374,333

From the above figures you will note that there are 88,102 people in Chicago and suburbs who take the SUNDAY Tribune but do not take the DAILY Tribune. This indicates how easy it should be to obtain ten subscriptions.

The subscription price of The Chicago Daily Tribune is 65c per month. This is collected at the end of each month by the carrier who delivers the paper.

There are thousands of people who want the DAILY Tribune at their homes regularly. It is only necessary to secure their signatures to six-months' subscriptions. Subscriptions may be taken to start immediately—and should be turned in as soon as obtained.

To Get One of These Cameras You Must Act at Once!

There are a great many boys, girls, men and women who will want one of these Eastman Cameras FREE. This is an unusual offer! Never before has such a fine instrument been offered for such a small task. Necessarily this offer must be limited. It closes October 1st, 1922.

Come to Room 502 Tribune Building, southeast corner Dearborn and Madison streets. Get your subscription book at once. Then get ten signatures for six months' subscriptions to The Daily Tribune, turn them in and as soon as they are verified the large size, genuine Eastman Camera, exactly as illustrated, will be given you FREE.

For the convenience of those who wish to apply for subscription books early or late, the Subscription Office, Room 502 Tribune Building, will be open from 8:30 A. M. to 5:30 P. M.

WORLD'S STAR GOLFERS CAMP AT SKOKIE

TRIBUNE TO HOLD AQUATIC MEET AT LINCOLN PARK

SWIMMING, CREW, AND CANOE RACES AMONG FEATURES

Lively Program of Events Is Scheduled.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Appreciating the vast interest being taken by the general public in aquatic sports, crew, and canoe races particularly, not to mention swimming, THE TRIBUNE will stage a mammoth water carnival in the Lincoln park lagoon on the afternoon of July 23.

EUGENE R. PIKE.

The average followers of outdoor sports have innumerable opportunities to read about the intercollegiate rowing regattas held on the Hudson river off Poughkeepsie, they followed with interest the victory of Walter M. Hoover of Duluth in the diamond sculls, held yesterday at Henley on the Thames, England, and they have heard and read about the great achievements of Johnny Weismuller and Miss Sybil Bauer of the Illinois A. C., but only a few have seen these stars in their favorite events.

Meet of Many Features.

Rowing will be one of the many features of THE TRIBUNE'S water carnival, and the races will be smaller replicas of some of the largest events held in the country. The Lincoln Park Boat club, which boasts of some crack oarsmen, will be asked to send its crews into competition against another middle west rowing association.

As it will not be many years before the majority of middle west institutions, especially the Big Ten colleges, take up rowing, an eight oared race will feature the rowing events. The event will be pulled over the three-quarters mile course, so that thousands of spectators may get a glimpse of such a contest at close quarters.

Sculls, Canoe Racing.

An opponent for the local eight will be selected tomorrow, when Commodore J. B. Salem will return from the regatta at Peoria. In addition to Lincoln park meeting an eight of some other rowing organization, there will be four double and single oared races.

It is the intention of THE TRIBUNE to make the carnival as entertaining as possible for the spectators. For this reason, as many events as possible will be held on the water and not in it. In recent years, numbers of canoe clubs have been organized, and hardly a Sunday passes that a regatta of some sort is not held.

Because of the interest being taken in canoe racing, not only by those closely identified with the frail craft but by spectators, a number of events will be held. The list of contests will be announced as soon as officials of the local canoe clubs have been consulted regarding the kind of races and the number of entries to be received from each association.

Weismuller to Show Skill.

The canoe events, like the rowing, will be separate. Prizes will be given to the winners while the club scoring the greatest number of points will be given a trophy worth while. More definite plans will be announced in the near future.

Efforts will be made to not only secure the services of Johnny Weismuller and Sybil Bauer of the Illinois A. C. for exhibition purposes, but other aquatic stars of national prominence will be asked to give Chicago's sport loving public exhibitions of their prowess.

Weismuller is now considered the world's greatest swimmer. He is a product of Chicago and is an example for other boys to follow. He has gained the topmost rung in the ladder of swimming fame through shear perseverance and his exhibitions will be exceedingly interesting.

Miss Bauer to Swim.

Miss Sybil Bauer is holder of several world's and national back stroke records for women. She learned to swim in Chicago's public schools, but developed under the able tutelage of William Bachrach, swimming instructor at the tri-color club. She is without doubt one of the leading women aquatic stars of the world.

Fancy diving, always an interesting event, will be held with some of the best performers asked to give exhibitions. Arthur Hartong of the I. A. C. and W. P. Heyn of the C. A. A. will be among those asked to execute the difficult dives from a board eighteen feet above the water. If the water is deep enough exhibitions of high diving will also be given. A row boat race for Lincoln park employés will be among the features and the winner will be given a useful prize. Medley swimming events will also be arranged in order to have something going on every minute of the three hours' program.

Permission to hold the carnival has been granted by the Lincoln park board, of which Eugene Pike is president. Regardless of weather conditions the event can be held, and it is one of the best bodies of water in or near Chicago for such an event. The lagoon is wide enough to permit eight oar crews to pull with safety. A heavy wire fence insures the taking of children to the park with safety.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

HOLDING GOLF TOURNEYS.

Is it desirable for golf clubs to bid for what is considered the honor of entertaining big golf events like the National Open at Skokie this week, or the amateur championship?

There are two opinions on the subject and many of our most prominent clubs which formerly sought these events no longer make any attempt to secure them. On the con side of the discussion we may cite:

Such tourneys deprive members of the use of their own course for approximately two weeks during a season when many are having their vacation period.

Tourneys cut up the course, especially pro events, for the pros almost invariably take the turf with their iron shots.

There is a vast amount of detail work and usually complaints from competitors and public because it is impossible for a club accustomed to accommodating 300 members to care for several thousand people with facility and rapid service. Even the admission charge of $1 at Skokie is criticized in some quarters, whereas it is a fee prescribed by the U. S. G. A., which receives the money toward the expense of the event.

While the U. S. G. A. defrays actual expense, the holding club is put to preliminary expenditure in preparing the course, extra service, and aftermath costs.

Against these objections are advanced:

Selection of a course, especially for the National Open, stamps the links as modern and up to date with a fine test of golf.

While most golf clubs have waiting lists (Skokie's is around the 200 mark), the club receives national advertising and reputation, and members when traveling in faraway pastures naturally take pride in stating their club affiliation.

Successfully conducted tourneys are necessary in the game, and a club which gives its best services has performed constructive work.

Members see the greatest exponents of the game in action.

While from a purely selfish standpoint the weight may seem to be against large tournaments, The Wake thinks clubs which do undertake the affairs deserve credit for being representative and progressive.

Luckiest Golf Shots.

Friend Harvey: On the South Bend municipal course, the third hole is a mashie shot. The green lies over a creek bank with a house across the road on the left and another house just back of the green.

I got an awful crack and it broke a window in the house on the left, hitting just enough of the frame to bounce against the house back of the green and again carom onto the green about eight inches from the hole.

In the party behind me a player drove onto the porch of the house whose window I had broken. The good housewife called a cop and made him come across for the broken window. H. H. H.

HOOVER SCULLS TO WORLD TITLE OVER BRITISHER

Yank Defeats Beresford in Thames Classic.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England, July 8.—[By Associated Press.]—Rowing a stream line racing shell of his own design over the famous Royal Regatta course in the face of a strong wind and a driving rain, Walter Hoover, the crack American sculler, outdistanced his opponent, J. Beresford Jr. of the Thames Rowing club by nearly fifty yards today and the Diamond sculls trophy, blue ribbon trophy in the world of oarsmen, will follow Hoover to his native city of Duluth.

E. H. TEN EYCK 3D.

The time made by the American for the course of 1 mile 550 yards was 9:32, more than a minute longer than the diamond sculls record, but Henley officials believe that Hoover's sculling, unequaled on the Thames in many years, would have brought a record under normal weather condition. They are anxious for the American to return to England in 1923 to defend his trophy and try for a record.

Against England's Best.

Hoover rowed against one of the best English scullers, Beresford, descended from a family of oarsmen, having spent much of his time since early boyhood in a shell on the Thames under the guidance of his father, an oarsman of repute.

The American went into the lead at the start and the Englishman was compelled to follow in his wake all the way. Leading by a length at the quarter, he steadily increased the distance separating him from Beresford.

The Englishman appeared to be greatly handicapped by the rough water and after Hoover started away from him he continued with a stroke of 32 for a time in an effort to make up some of the distance, but soon was obliged to reduce his pull to 23 to the minute. This he maintained to the finish with a steady loss of distance.

World's Best Sculler.

All the experts acclaim the American as the world's best sculler. Englishmen say everything about him is unorthodox, from the shell, which is designed along lines of a naval torpedo, to the sweatband he wears around his head. But, however different from what has been considered sculling form in England for a century, it is readily admitted that Hoover attains what is still the principal object in sports—dash and speed.

The story of the American's attainment of what is considered the world's amateur championship is that of a comeback by an oarsman who after two years' army service on the border returned to the racing shell to find his rowing so unsatisfactory that he was ready to quit the sport. He then decided to put in one more year. Taking stock of himself, he reached the conclusion that his legs needed strengthening, and started three miles of road work daily. He mapped out a diet and continued his rowing practice, for which he was rewarded by his recent Philadelphia victory and his victory of today.

Leander Club Wins Cup.

Chief among the other events of today's regatta was the race for the grand challenge cup. This went to the famous Leander club, which defeated the Thames club by a length in 7:36.

Weather conditions for the last day of the regatta were such as to preclude the setting up of any new records, but the towpath was crowded with spectators, among them bearded veterans, some of whom were sculling on the Thames in the late '60s.

These old timers told visiting Americans that the Henley regatta is not what it used to be. In pre-war days England's leisure class had money as well as time to spend the last night of the regatta on celebrations similar to those after American college football victories. This year not a houseboat was moored on the regatta course and the social side of the carnival was hardly noticeable.

COACHED BY TEN EYCK

To E. H. ("Dad") Ten Eyck, Hoover owes a great share of the inspiration and the futelage that carried him triumphantly through his greatest race yesterday. It was as a lad of 17 that Hoover watched Ten Eyck's crews scoot out into Lake Superior from Duluth harbor. From that moment he became an earnest follower of the teachings of the dean of American rowing.

I. A. C. SWIM STAR AFTER NEW MARKS

Alameda, Cal., July 8.—Johnny Weismuller, swimming wizard of the Illinois Athletic club, finished training today for an attack on five world's records in the tank at Neptune beach tomorrow. He will be opposed by Lester Smith and George Schmith of the Olympic club in the 100 meters free style and in the 100 meters backstroke by Ike Kellpio and H. Algers of the Idora club. His time will be caught at various distances.

READY FOR TITLE PLAY BEGINNING TOMORROW A. M.

Change of Flags May Stop Record Scores.

YOU PICK THE WINNER!

With more than 300 starters for the open golf championship, any one of whom might win, with luck breaking consistently, picking the winner is an impossibility. On form Hagen, Barnes, and Hutchison are favorites. The leaders are:

AMATEURS—Evans, Jones, Guilmet, Gardner, Guilford, Knepper, Herron, and T. D. Armour.

AMERICAN BRED PROS—Hagen, Diegel, Sarazen, French.

MEXICAN—Espinosa.

BRITISH—Duncan, Mitchell.

AUSTRALIAN—Kirkwood.

IMPORTED PROS—Barnes, Hutchison, McNamara, R. McDonald, T. Kerrigan, Anderson, McLean.

EASTERN PROS—Hagin, Barnes, Cruikshank, G. McLean, Hackney, A. Sanderson, J. Anderson, John Farrell.

MIDWESTERN PROS—Hutchison, Ayton, Linn, French, Loos, J. Cook, G. and A. Kacbarth, Sweetser.

SOUTHERN PROS—Diegel, Brady, Melhorn, Sefcsic.

WESTERN PROS—Novak, Espinosa, Dutra, G. Martin.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Aspirants for the national open golf championship, which will be played at Skokie Country club, starting tomorrow, are delighted with the overhead climate. Chicago is furnishing at the Glencoe course, but are adverse to the hard, sunbaked fairways which are transforming moderate hitters into Babe Ruths, Hornsbys, and Williamses.

BOBBY JONES.

In baseball parlance, they are "knocking 'em a mile." With the exception of the long fifth hole, 590 yards, all of the others can be reached with a drive and mashie, provided the wind is favorable. About 250 of the title aspirants were out yesterday, and save that there was a fairly stiff breeze off the lake, conditions were the same as on the preceding days.

Big Golf Stars on Hand.

All of the visiting stars save Jesse Guilford, national amateur champion, were on hand, and he is expected this morning. Chick Evans has not yet put in an appearance, but he knows the Skokie course sufficiently to be satisfied with a single practice round.

Jim Barnes, the national open champion, and Bobby Jones, were the most prominent of yesterday's arrivals. Bobby, after a preliminary spin over nine holes, which he made in 34, took a hurried lunch, and then paired with Stewart Maiden, the Atlanta professional, against Robert A. Gardner of Onwentsia and Jock Hutchison, his quartet drawing the bulk of the gallery.

A hole ahead of them were Walter Hagen, the British open champion, and Jim Barnes, the national open champion, playing with Grantland Rice, whose yellow sweater took the sartorial prize, and E. A. Valentine. The two big guns were comparatively neglected in view of the following match.

Georgia Pair Beaten.

Gardner and Hutchison marched through the Georgia pair to the tune of 4 and 3, the youthful Atlanta prodigy being off his game. He found a number of traps and picked up at the sixth and seventh holes.

Jock, who took 6s at the fourth and fifth holes, reached the turn in 37, and his side was 2 up. Coming home the visiting players were not able to win a hole. Jock after turning the first five incoming holes in one under fours, had a disastrous seven at the fifteenth. He hit a tree on his drive and another tree on his second shot, which left Bobby to remark, "There's another one down the course, see if you can hit that."

Their best ball cards were:

Jones and Maiden—

Gardner and Hutchison—

Gardner and Hutchison—

Stewart Maiden's card was 33—38—71, Hutchison, with an approximated 7, at the seventh hole, got 37—39—76. Jones picked up at the sixth and seventh holes and came home in 40.

Good Card for Mitchell.

Abe Mitchell playing with Cyril Walker and Bob Cruikshank in the afternoon, had a fine card of 69 as follows:

Out	4	3	4	4	5	4	5	3	3—35
In	4	4	4	3	4	4	4	4	4—34—69

Barnes on his first round over the course came home with 74 while Hagen had a stroke less, their cards reading:

The Question.

Which would you rather see, a pitching duel or a slugging bee?

Where Asked.

At White Sox park.

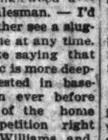
The Answers.

W. C. Rutzen, 1730 Ballou street, salesman.—A slugging bee, any time. It is not so cut and dried, not so technical; one never knows what's going to come off next, nor when it's going to stop. The deeper the muddle gets the more interesting and exciting the plays become, especially if the game is tied in the ninth inning.

T. H. Ratcliffe, 2732 North Kimball avenue, salesman.—I'd rather see a slugging bee, for the reason that it's more exciting. If the game stands questionable as to which side will win, it makes a more exciting game. A slugging match usually runs through more than nine innings and it usually gets extremely exciting toward the close.

Glenn Bishop, 306 Englewood avenue, salesman. — I'd much rather see a slugging game at any time. I feel like saying that the public is more deeply interested in baseball than ever before because of the home run competition right now between Hornsby, Williams, and, within a couple of weeks, perhaps, Babe Ruth. A pitching duel may be all right, but I really think that baseball fans want to see them hit the ball.

Andrew Johnson, La Grange, Ill., accountant.—I believe I prefer a slugging match. I'm not a regular baseball fan, but I have noticed that a perfectly played pitching duel game excites my admiration for the technical skill displayed and all that, but it's real fun and real sport and you get your money's worth when the batters are making regular fireworks with the ball.



Harold Weiss, 3334 Parnell avenue, student (14 years old)—I'd rather see a pitching duel. If there's a good pitcher, he can put it all over the slugger. He won't even give him a hit, no matter how good a batter he is. If he's a real good pitcher he can make the batter swing all over the place, make real sport of him, and then send him back to his stall in disgrace.

Cubs Grab Two Games from Lowly Braves, 6-5 and 8-2

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Bill Killefer's peppery Cubs climbed up to within half a game of third place yesterday at the expense of the Boston Braves, trimming the Mitchellites in both ends of a double header, 6 to 5 and 8 to 2, at the north side park. The double win made six straight victories for the Bears.

It took two sterling rallies of three runs each to down the Braves in the opening game, for the Bostonians gave the Cubs a great scare by rising up in the seventh frame and batting around for five runs. In the afterpiece the locals outbatted the visitors and had little trouble in achieving their victory.

Watson Sent to Showers.

Johnny Watson, who started for the Braves in the opener, sought the showers after the sixth frame, in which the Bears clubbed his offerings for three runs. Dana Fillingim, who took the mound in the seventh, also was slammed for three runs, and gave way to Joe Oeschger, who finished with comparative ease.

The Braves did some clubbing on their own account in the fifth, when Virgil Cheeves threatened to toss the contest into the Braves' dugout by issuing three walks and two hits that netted three runs before he could be yanked. George Stueland was rushed to the rescue, and was clouted for a double that scored two runs. Stueland gave way to a hitless pincher in the Cub rally in their seventh, "Kewpie" Osborne worked the last two rounds and came through with colors flying.

Kaufmann Turns Back Foe.

Tony Kaufmann was the Cub twirler in the second game, and although Tony was wild he was strong enough to turn back the Braves' attacks. Tony issued six passes and threatened to give away many more, but the Braves were hitting at bad balls or popping out on high ones. Six hits were all the Braves got off Tony.

Mitchell again employed two hurlers in attempting to stem the north siders' stream of hits but both failed, for the Cubs amassed seven hits and five runs off Hugh McQuillan's benders and then crushed Lansing for six hits, which were good for three runs.

Ray Grimes, who has been troubled with a mild attack of lumbago, wrenched his back in the first inning of the second game and retired in favor of Barber. More than 15,000 fans turned out.

BANISHED SOX TO QUIZ LANDIS

Milwaukee, Wis., July 8.—[Special.]—Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis was named for the first time in connection with the revival of the 1920 world series baseball scandal when Attorney Ray J. Cannon of Milwaukee, representing three banished White Sox players in their suits against the Chicago club, announced that he will confer with Landis in Chicago next week relative to "second place" money due.

Judge Gregory signed a new order for the Comiskeys to show cause why they should not be examined here under the discovery statute relative to alleged "crookedness" in world's series games. The date set was July 12.

PADDOCK NOT TO ENTER BIG MEET

Los Angeles, Cal., July 8.—Charles W. Paddock, world's champion sprinter, has decided not to enter the national amateur athletic union track and field meet to be held at Newark, N. J., in September. Paddock says he is in excellent condition, but does not care to continue training until then.

Paddock predicts the Los Angeles Athletic club will retain the A. A. U. track and field championship. The club stars to be sent east include Glenn Hartranft, national intercollegiate shot putter; Clarence (Bud) Houser, interscholastic weight man; Alma Richards, 1912 and 1920 Olympic team high jumper.

ANY EXCUSE

NEW YORK, July 8.—[Special.] — Since the recent pop bottle throwing which marred a game at Ebbets' field, the Brooklyn baseball club has been considering the best means by which such practice in the future may be stopped. It was said today that the club has decided to raise the admission fees to the bleachers as a preventive, although official announcement of the change will not be forthcoming for a few days. It is proposed to lift the admission prices for adults and boys from 50 and 25 cents to 75 and 50 cents, respectively, this new scale to become effective on July 16. The capacity of the bleachers will be limited to 3,500 by the reported new decision.

MISS BAUER SETS TENTH WORLD'S MARK IN WEEK

New York, July 8.—Miss Sybil Bauer of the Illinois A. C., Chicago, broke the world's record for the 100 yard backstroke swim for women in a 75 foot pool today by one-fifth second. She finished in 1:15 4-5. Miss Bauer later failed by three-fifths of a second in an attempt to equal the mark for 150 yards backstroke in the same pool. Her time was 1:59 4-5.

In breaking the mark she established last March for the 100 yard swim, Miss Bauer defeated Miss Aileen Riggin, Olympic fancy diving champion, by ten yards, and Miss Helen Donohue by fifteen more. Miss Riggin and Miss Donohue represented the Women's Swimming association of New York.

This is the tenth world record that Miss Bauer has broken since coming here last Saturday. She planned to return to Chicago tonight.

Aggies' Athletic Director Quits for California Post

East Lansing, Mich., July 8.—[United News.]—Chester L. Brewer, director of athletics at Michigan Agricultural college, has handed in his resignation. This confirmed rumors that Brewer would leave to become director of athletics in the agricultural college of the University of California.

match in which, paired with George Duncan, they defeated Joe Kirkwood, the Australian champion, and Willie Hunter, the former British amateur champion, 4 and 2.

Alex Home In 32.

Alex started his fine work at the ninth hole with a birdie 3 and then came home in 32, his card and the par figures reading:

Smith—In .....3 4 4 3 3 3 4 5 4—32
Par in .....4 4 4 3 4 4 4 4 5—36

Duncan had 35—37—72, the other players being several strokes over. Mike Brady of Detroit with a 73, and Leo Diegel defeated Emmet French and Gene Sarazen of Pittsburgh, 1 up. Sarazen in his morning round had a card of 68.

A round of 69 by Laurie Ayton in the morning enabled the Evanston professional and George Duncan to defeat Abe Mitchell and Phil Gaudin, the Skokie professional, 3 and 2.

Lloyd Gullickson, former Chicago city champion, came home with 32 in the afternoon, which included a ball out of bounds at the eighteenth hole. His card was 69. Jim Johnston, the Minnesota amateur champion, who was playing with him, had 36—37—73.

Doc Treacy, the former Chicago professional now at Danville, had the best score in a four ball match with Willie Kidd, Dow George and Norman Clark, his card being 37—34—71. George had 76.

Plans Practical Day of Rest.

A full house is expected today, but the majority of the players will take it easy in preparation for the first qualifying round at 36 holes tomorrow.

Opinions differ as to what will be the maximum score to qualify in the twenty-four eligible places, the majority picking two 77s, but from the scores already made this estimate may be shaded.

The flags will be in more difficult positions and as the U. S. G. A. rules call for a loss of stroke and distance for ball out of bounds, there is a possibility of higher cards, while the hardness of the fairways may cause many drives to kick off the line and run into trouble.

Additional entries bring the total to close on 327, so that fully 300 will start in the qualifying rounds.

KENNETH BURNS SNARES PRIZE IN GLEN VIEW PLAY

Playing a consistent game that netted him a card of 71—2—69, Kenneth H. TILDEN VS. SHIMIDZU FOR NET TITLE TODAY

Indianapolis, Ind., July 8.—William T. Tilden will meet Zeno Shimidzu, Japanese Davis cup player, in the singles, and Ralph Burdick and Frits Bastian, Indianapolis, will play John Hennessey, Indianapolis, and Walter Wesbrook, Detroit, in doubles in the title round of the twelfth annual national clay court tennis championships at the Woodstock Country club here tomorrow.

Shimidzu won his way into the finals today by defeating Charles Garland Jr., Pittsburgh, former American Davis cup player, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2. Tilden defeated Wesbrook in the other semi-final match Friday.

Shimidzu Shows Power.

Garland was no match for Shimidzu, although this is the first important outdoor tournament the Japanese has played in this season. Shimidzu converted Garland's usually effective forehand drives into returned placement aces, and his lightning crisscross plays had Garland plunging from alley to alley near the back line.

Bastian and Burdick defeated Tilden and Sandy Weiner of Philadelphia in the doubles semi-finals, 6—4, 7—5, 6—4. The world's champion and his 14 year old partner could not overcome the experienced teamwork of the Hoosier combination, which earlier in the day had defeated Willis Fulton and Leonard Keith, Cleveland, 3—8, 6—3, 6—3. Tilden and Weiner at the same time eliminated Parks and White, Ardmore, Pa., 6—4, 6—8, 6—4, in fourth round play.

Strachan Boys' Champion.

Hennessey and Wesbrook defeated Shimidzu and Beals Wright of Boston in the doubles semi-finals, 6—2, 7—5, 6—2. Donald Strachan, Philadelphia, won the boys' open tournament singles title by defeating Byron Donaldson, Detroit, 3—6, 8—6, 6—4. Donaldson held a comfortable lead at first, but Strachan's uncanny consistency finally won out.

FAIR CANADIAN WINS U. S. TITLE

Buffalo, N. Y., July 8.—Mrs. Harry Bicknell, of Toronto, won the women's National clay court tennis championship at the Park club here today. The Canadian titleholder defeated Miss Leslie Bancroft of Brookline, Mass., in the final 3-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Mrs. Frank Godfrey of Brookline, Mass., and Miss Bancroft won the doubles title by defeating Mrs. Bickle and Miss Helen Hooker of Greenwich, Conn., in a close three set match, 3—6, 7—5, 6—1.

GILLIS IOWA U. TENNIS CHAMP

Iowa City, Ia., July 8.—[Special.]—A slow serve, with a fast return, proved an ace in the hole for Lee J. Gillis of Rock Rapids, Ia., and he won the University of Iowa tennis tournament today, defeating John M. Dorsey of Clinton, Ia., 3—6, 6—4, 6—4. Gill has previously won the intercollegiate championship of South Dakota, which he held from 1911 to 1915, and the tri-state tournament championship, which he won in 1915, defeating all other entrants from Minnesota, North Dakota, and South Dakota.

Breaks Iowa City Links Record, Set by Himself

Iowa City, Ia., July 8.—Prof. Julian C. Monnet, dean of the college of law, Oklahoma university, here from Norman to pass his vacation in the shadow of his alma mater, Iowa university, broke the record of the Iowa City Country club golf links, with a score of 80 for the course. The old score of 81 had stood for years. It was made by Prof. Monnet also, he having broken the course record of 82, set by Arthur Gordon of Lamar, Colo., formerly Iowa state champion, in 1905.

PUBLIC PARKS GOLF.

Teams representing the various public parks will meet today in the first of the series of interclub matches for the Robert W. McKinlay trophy, emblematic of the team championship of the Cook County Municipal Golf association.

WOMEN TO PLAY GOLF.

Women public parks players will start their series of interclub matches tomorrow under the auspices of the newly formed Women's Public Parks Golf Association of Illinois.

CLUB GIVES PLANS TO CARE FOR MOTORISTS AT OPEN GOLF MEET

GOLF fans who plan to drive by auto to the national open championships at Skokie this week are urged by officials of the Glencoe club to observe certain traffic and parking rules. The club's bulletin, issued by George J. Pope, follows:

The co-operation of those who drive to the Skokie Country club during the U. S. G. A. Open tournament is earnestly requested, as serious congestion can be avoided only by following the plans which have been formulated. There are three elements which enter into this problem:

1. Complying with necessary village restrictions.

2. Respecting the rights of residents.

3. The comfort of guests and provision for prompt parking and ease of departure.

The officials of Glencoe have set aside certain streets where cars can be parked. Indiscriminate parking will not be allowed. Competent men will be stationed at necessary points to direct cars to the nearest parking space and signs will be posted along the roads leading to Glencoe and the village streets. A one way traffic plan has been worked out, so that by following directions all cars will have continuous and uninterrupted travel.

The playgrounds of the Glencoe public school have been turned over to the Glencoe Boy Scouts, where a large number of cars can be accommodated.

There will be a charge of 50 cents per day for parking cars at the school grounds. The senior scouts will be in attendance from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. Numbered checks will be presented to cars and duplicates given the drivers. Comfort facilities in the school house will be available for both men and women. The scouts pay their own expenses and any profit will go into their treasury. The attendants at all other parking spaces are paid by the club and tipping is unnecessary.

Thousands of cards showing the best auto route from Chicago to the Skokie club have been distributed by the Illinois Automobile club to motorists. The automobile club will co-operate with the officials of the country club in handling the traffic to and from the club in the towns of Glencoe and Wilmette, and also the parking arrangements at the country club. Two service trucks from the Illinois Automobile club garage will be on duty at the tournament all week to give emergency service to all motorists, whether members of the Illinois club or not.

THIRTEEN NO HOODOO FOR THIS GOLFER WHO MAKES HOLE IN ONE

EVEN the hoodoo thirteenth hole has been subdued and no longer has any terrors for C. W. Hubbell of Flossmoor. Playing in a foursome yesterday with President Charles O. Goss against F. P. Wood and H. L. Hanley, he sank his tee shot, 127 yards, for an ace. President Goss had 3, Mr. Wood 2, and Mr. Hanley 3. Earlier in the week B. W. Bradley negotiated the seventh, the 121 yard water hole, in one "shot."

MISSES LEITCH LAND IN CANADA

Montreal, Que., July 8.—Cecil and Edith Leitch, English golf stars, arrived here today from Liverpool. Miss Edith said she would play in the Canadian and United States women's championships, but expressed fear that an injured arm would keep her sister, the former English champion and present Canadian titleholder, out of both tournaments.

Pacific Coast Swimmer Comes East for Title Meets

Los Angeles, Cal., July 8.—Tom Blake, Pacific coast one mile swimming champion and holder of several middle distance records, left here yesterday for the east, where he will represent the Los Angeles Athletic club in several national events. His first appearance will be at Philadelphia, where he will take part in a ten mile race.

AUTO PILOT HURT.

Aberdeen, S. D., July 8.—Frank Reukn of Sioux Falls suffered a broken jaw and a fractured skull this afternoon as the Tristate fair grounds when his car went through the fence in the second lap of a quadriplay heat of a nonprofessional auto race.

"BIG THREE" CHIEFS NAMED TO CLEANSE COLLEGE ATHLETICS

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 8.—Presidents J. G. Hibben of Princeton university, A. L. Lowell of Harvard university, and J. R. Angell of Yale university have been named a committee to remove objectionable features from college athletics, President Hibben announced here today before departing for a pleasure tour of Alaska. He said that it was the first announcement of the appointment of the committee.

The recruiting of athletes from distant points in order to strengthen the teams of certain institutions is to be attacked, President Hibben said. The shortening of the football season also is under consideration, he announced.

300 ENTER IRISH FIELD GAMES AT DE PAUL TODAY

De Paul university campus will be the scene of tryouts today by more than 300 Chicago athletes of Irish descent competing for entrance in the Irish revival of the Aonach Thailltean in Dublin next month. Scores of the athletes have won renown in midwest track and field events.

The winners of today's events will be sent to New York to compete in the finals. Those who come out with flying colors in New York will be entered at Dublin in the ancient Gaelic sports festival.

Promptly at 1:30 p. m. the field of amateur athletes who claim forbears in the "ould sod," will assemble.

Track events, jumping, weight throwing, and pole vaulting are mixed on today's program with such old fashioned sports as soccer football, hurling, and Irish baseball.

Many of the Chicago entries are already picked on their past performances as almost certain to qualify for the American team at Dublin. Among the better known are:

Jimmy Murphy, Notre Dame high jumper; Bill Hayes, Notre Dame sprinter; Larry Butler, crack I. A. C. dash man; Pat Shea, weight thrower; P. J. Leahy, former Irish amateur champion broad jumper; William A. Dowling, St. John's Military academy track star; Garfield Dunne, De Paul university distance runner, and Dan Ahearn, I. A. C. broad jumper.

Picks Boxers This Week.

Joe M. Coffey, in charge of boxing, has been holding tryouts in various clubs throughout the city for the last week. He expects to announce the personnel of the Chicago boxing team early in the week. It will include fighters in each recognized weight division.

At the same time John F. Cullerton, secretary of the local committee in charge of the games, will make known the list of handball winners.

The meeting is staged under the sanction of the Central A. A. U.

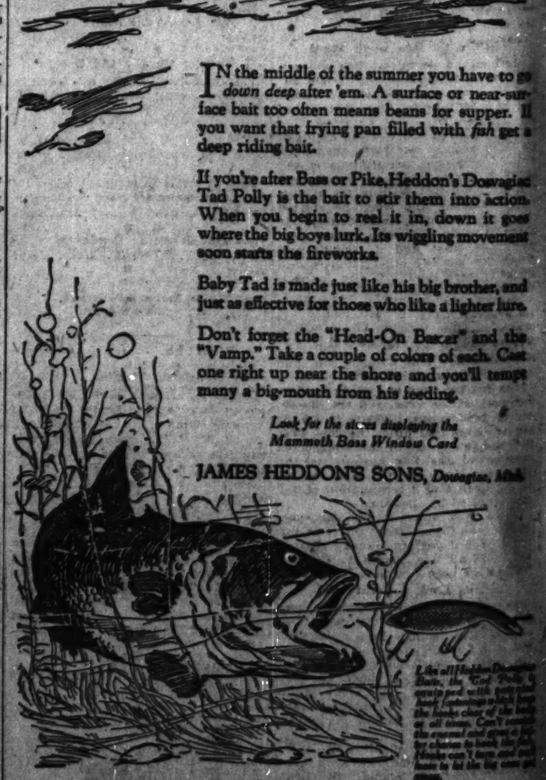
Goin Fishin'? —go deep for the big boys



IN the middle of the summer you have to go down deep after 'em. A surface or near-surface bait too often means beans for supper. If you want that frying pan filled with fish get a deep riding bait.

If you're after Bass or Pike, Heddon's Dowagiac Tad Polly is the bait to stir them into action. When you begin to reel it in, down it goes where the big boys lurk. Its wiggling movement soon starts the fireworks.

Baby Tad is made just like his big brother, and just as effective for those who like a lighter lure.

Don't forget the "Head-On Bazer" and the "Vamp." Take a couple of colors of each. Cast one right up near the shore and you'll tempt many a big-mouth from his feeding.

Like all Heddon Dowagiac Baits, the Tad Polly is guaranteed with each and every one of the kind to be the best of all seasons. Can't exceed the counsel and advice of your dealer to look the Tad Polly over carefully before you buy. If he can't have one in stock he is to let this fine bait get away.

BROWNS DUE TO CRASH ON TRIP EAST, SAYS HUGH

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

St. Louis' Browns, having cut out the pace for the American league for two weeks or more, are about due for a crash; a crash which may prove the turning point of the season.

HUGH FULLERTON.

If they slump in the east, as all indications are they will, and rally from that slump, then we can commence to figure seriously how to jump from New York to St. Louis during a world's series. If they do not rally immediately then the only hope the Browns will have is that the Yankees slump worse than they do.

The American league race has been a sort of topsy turvy affair thus far, and with the season half over there are only slight signs of it settling down. Detroit and the White Sox have commenced to have severe attacks of the hopes, which are more warranted on the part of the Sox than the Tygers.

Indians Crashed Terribly.

As a matter of fact, since Cleveland has crashed so terribly and has not yet shown even a symptom of reviving either in team spirit or in pitching, this American league race has been between two clubs: the Browns and the Yankees.

In the preseason dope the Browns outfigured them on regular teams and on attacking force, while the Yankees showed much superiority in the pitching department. Thus far the dope has proved accurate in the cases of those teams although the Yankees have not shown quite as much pitching as they figured to do. The bad break in form of both Hoyt and Mays during the early season forced them down.

The Yankees, back home, with Ruth and his sympathizers, are certain to be dangerous. The prospects now are that the Yankees will be on top of the league again before the western clubs return home, and that they will slump again when they come west.

Cleveland is long overdue for a rally, and with a disastrous visit to the Yankees to start off an eastern invasion it looks as if their pennant hopes will disappear during the next fortnight. The team is badly shot to pieces just now, and discouraged.

The failure of the pitchers to show anything made it difficult to hold the club in the race, and the death of Jim Dunn hurt the spirit and morale of the entire outfit. Even Speaker seems heartbroken and lacking his old fiery leadership.

Browns Traveling Fast.

The Browns have been traveling fast and hitting hard. Just now the pitching, which has been a trifle better than was expected, is showing signs of wabbling a trifle. The problem is how serious this weakening of the pitching staff will be. The Browns are hitting hard enough and scoring enough runs per hit to carry a handicap in pitching, but not a heavy one.

If you will study the American league records for the season you will find that the Yankees have not been making runs in proper proportion to their base hits. This in the face of home runs with the bases filled, which ordinarily would raise the figures on runs per hit, shows that the Yankees are still swinging for home runs instead of playing the game to get runs.

The last ten days the Yankees have improved very much in this respect, which tends to prove that they are commencing to get down to real business. If they do they ought to cut Commissioner Landis in on part of their world series receipts. His lecture to them seems to have stemmed the tide of discontent temporarily at least. But the idea of having harmony in the Yankee camp is not worth considering. It cannot be done.

The immediate outlook is for a big revival by the Washington club and a letup on the part of the Red Sox, who have been floundering. The team is not a good one, but it is better than it has been playing.

Washington Has Good Team.

Washington, however, has quite a ball team if it will work. It is due for a sharp rally, and the pitching staff just now is in better form than it has been this season. Just what the trouble has been is hard to say. A few of the boys were in war paint during the western trip, but the team is a well behaved one as a rule. I found them this morning just waiting for Walter to get started, and when he started the team picked up immediately. It ought to move up steadily for the next month at least and if Griffith and Milan can get two other pitchers into shape to work regularly with Johnson the team will make trouble.

Detroit and the White Sox have been going too fast for the kind of teams they are. The slipping of the Tygers already has started, and it is a question how long Gleason can spur his White Sox along. The pitching of the Sox has been one of the biggest surprises of the year, and the discovery of good young pitchers is one of the accidents that upset the dope. Yet it is not fair to credit the unexpected showing of the Sox entirely to the pitching. Much of the credit is due to the spirit and determination of the men inspired by Gleason.

There is a story in the American league that Frank Navin offered Gleason $20,000 a year to Manage Detroit, and, with all due respect to Cobb, it would have been a bargain for Detroit.

Macks Lack a Great Deal.

The Athletics are making a nice fight to keep out of the cellar this season. The team lacks a great deal, but it is hustling, too, and so long as the fighting spirit lasts it will make trouble for the best of them.

Boston probably will break worse and worse. It is not a contented team, and a dissatisfied bunch of players make a bad club.

From now until about Aug. 4 the Yankees should hold the whip hand in the American league. St. Louis must make its rally during the next stay at home, and it must wallop the Yankees themselves. If it can accomplish those two things the Browns will go through a pennant. If not we'll move to New York and watch the Giants and Yankees battle again in the fall.

Meantime we can root for the White Sox regardless of the dope.

DEMPSEY-WILLS FAIL TO AGREE ON TERMS FOR GO

CAN'T SEE WILLS

NEW YORK, July 8.—[Special.]—Jack Dempsey and his manager, Jack Kearns, in an interview have disclosed the relative esteem in which they hold the five principal challengers for the heavyweight championship. The titleholder and his Man Friday agree in giving the contenders this ranking:

1. Jess Willard.
2. Bill Brennan.
3. Harry Greb.
4. Georges Carpentier.
5. Harry Wills.

Neither Dempsey nor Kerns consider Wills has more than an outside chance for the crown. Kearns predicted Dempsey would dispose of Wills in shorter time than it took him to knock out Fred Fulton. The Minnesota plasterer was eliminated in 18 seconds.

"Willard is the greatest fighter of them all. There's no question about that."

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—Jack Dempsey, white heavyweight champion, and Harry Wills are as far from being matched for a title struggle as ever. The expected signing of an agreement under the terms of which Dempsey officially consented to box Wills did not occur today. At the last minute Paddy Mullins, manager of Wills, declined to sign the Kearns-Dempsey agreement.

Another effort to get Mullins to sign the agreement will be made Tuesday upon Kearns' return from Buffalo.

The desire of Mullins to have the proposed battle conducted this year was responsible for the failure to sign. The agreement approved and submitted by Kearns contained Dempsey's consent to a title bout with Wills provided the contest be held within sixty days from the acceptance by the signatories of the successful bid for the bout. Time and place were not specified.

Mullins objected on the ground this agreement did not bind Dempsey to any specified time limit in which to box Wills. The challenger's manager insisted on provisions that the bout be held under the rules of the New York state athletic commission, and that the bout be held for certain this year.

HOOSIER STATE'S ATTORNEY TURNS BOXING BACKER

Laporte, Ind., July 8.—Earl Rowley, state's attorney, today stated that Michigan City was cleaner and more lawabiding on July Fourth than any time in its history, when entertaining a large flock of visitors.

"If prize fighting is as cleanly conducted as that boxing bout July 4, then I am in favor of prize fighting," he stated. "You can quote me as saying that Michigan City was cleaner as to law enforcement on the day of the Leonard-Kansas fight than it ever was in its history. Not only was there no law violation throughout the city but there was none at the ringside or in connection with the arena."

SOX SWAP WITH YANKS RUMORED

Philadelphia, Pa., July 8.—[Special.]—Rumors of a trade floated around the Sox camp here today following the secret arrival and departure of Harry Grabiner, club secretary. Grabiner came here last night and departed for New York this morning.

Nothing was mentioned in connection with a trade, but reports had it that a Sox player might be shipped to the Yankees in exchange for a couple of men.

THE LEONARD-TENDLER FIGHT

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

LEW TENDLER, who is matched to box Bennie Leonard for the lightweight championship at Jersey City July 27, is to have half a chance to get the title. There being no decisions in Jersey bouts, he can win only by knocking Leonard out. After all the talk, and challenging, the evasion and sidestepping and haggling of the last two years, this should have been a decision bout.

Where men are at all evenly matched and both are clever boxers, the chance of a knockout in a twelve round bout is slight.

A knockout is more likely in this bout, however, than in many others, because Leonard never makes a running away fight, and if Tendler's attack weakens Leonard will press him hard and try to finish him. With Leonard standing up to Tendler's attack there will always be a chance that Tendler may slip through Bennie's guard a punch like the one that knocked out Bobby Barrett for half an hour.

No Signs of Slipping.

What are Leonard's chances? Leonard hasn't shown any sign yet of slipping back in fighting form. Whenever he trains for a lightweight championship bout he gets down fine on weight and looks as hard as when he won the title. He has all his speed and courage, and is always trying to win as quickly as possible. When Leonard is hurt he fights faster and hits harder. His fights with Willie Ritchie and Mitchell are examples of Bennie's fighting style.

Leonard is a fast boxer and a slugging fighter in one. In Kilbane he met a clever boxer with a world of speed and a good punch. He went after Kilbane from the first step, dazzled Kilbane with shifty feinting and swift punches that went through Johnny's guard like hornets through a wide open barn door, outclassed him in everything and quickly and easily knocked him out.

That was years ago, but Leonard hasn't "gone back" since. He is never out of training, and he lives like a college athlete. Ben has brains. At 26 he's much better than at 20.

Tendler Also a Hebrew.

Tendler, also a Hebrew, is much like Leonard. He knows that the championship would mean a fortune to him, and for two or three years he has concentrated everything on winning it, sticking to training and the simple life.

Tendler is less stocky than Leonard and an inch taller. Bennie is 5 feet 5 and Tendler 5 feet 6. He has lighter legs than Leonard. His shoulders are wide and his reach is long. His face is long and narrow, and his nose prominent. His jaw is square. His age is 24.

In boxing Tendler is entirely different. He follows the "southpaw" style once made popular by Knockout Brown of New York, boxing with right foot forward and right hand extended. He uses the left hand with much of Brown's effectiveness, besides having something of an educated right. Tendler has an advantage in his boxing position because he has plenty of practice in fighting men who stick out their left hand and left foot, while others have little experience against southpaws. He has fought nearly every one but Leonard among the lightweights. Leonard hasn't had any other starboard battery rivals.

Lew Tendler was a Philadelphia newsboy, and had his first ring experience when he stepped in as a volunteer for a preliminary fight when he was 15. He made good from the first bout. He was naturally cunning and crafty. He didn't win many fights with knockouts for a long time, but he was always fighting fast in the last ten seconds and nobody stopped him. As he met better men he improved and still held the lead. He stayed in Philadelphia, where he was unbeatable in the six round bouts.

Like Leonard, Tendler is dangerous all the time, but where Leonard is always out to win at the first chance Tendler is too cautious to try to hurry matters. When he slips over a left hand k. o. punch it is after long and cautious waiting and calculation of risks and chances. That's the punch Bennie Leonard will have to watch.

Trains for Southpaw.

It's the punch Leonard hasn't been accustomed to in other fights. For several months part of Leonard's training has been against clever boxers who have been coached to oppose him in Tendler's characteristic position. But the imitation never has the genius of the original.

Tendler is undoubtedly going to keep Bennie busy watching. But Tendler isn't going to have any restful time himself.

TOTH TO ATTEMPT CHANNEL SWIM LATE IN AUGUST

Boston, Mass., July 8.—[Special.]—Charlie Toth, widely known long distance swimmer, is sailing today for Europe, where he will make an attempt to swim the English channel. He was accompanied by Gus Wise, his manager and trainer, and Ernest Chatelaine. Toth and his companions will go to Dover direct from Liverpool and begin his study of the tides. It is planned to make the attempt the latter part of August. Toth was recently examined by Dr. Dudley Sargent, who decreed him practically perfect. In a recent trial swim he was in the water fifteen hours and forty-eight minutes, an American endurance record.

Foreign Trainers Trying to Follow U. S. Methods

Foreign trainers are anxious to follow American methods in developing athletes. A representative of the Hungarian government recently applied to Willie Plant of New York City, American walking champion, for information on his method of training and retaining competitive form. Joseph B. Pearman, New York A. C. heel and toe star, was the subject for a series of recent photographs and moving pictures taken for the purpose of illustrating to athletes in Japan the fundamentals in heel and toe walking.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST
By A. R. METCALFE

NEVER COVER AN HONOR WITH AN HONOR.

ALWAYS cover an honor with an honor is one of the fool rules which has caused thousands of players to wonder why they can never win. Never cover an honor with an honor would be still more absurd. About as good a rule as can be formulated is as follows: Never cover an honor with an honor unless it makes some other card good in your hand or may make a winner in your partner's hand. The only cards to be considered are queens and jacks as the cards led, and kings and queens in the second hand. A few examples of when and when not to cover follow:

Exposed in dummy Q, J, 8, second hand holding K, 6, 5. Should the declarer lead the J, second hand should not play low. Should the declarer lead the J, second hand should play the K. In other words, when there are two honors in sequence exposed in dummy, the declarer should cover the second, not the first. Should the K be played on the Q, the declarer might win with the A, and finesse on the return, thereby winning all the tricks in the suit, even if the fourth hand held 10 and two others.

An Exception to Rule.

An exception to this rule occurs when the second hand holds K and only one other. The K should be played on the first trick, as otherwise the declarer might lead low the second time. Should the declarer hold one more diamond he should play in the same manner with only three in dummy, but should the second hand K and by finessing the 9 on the return cover at all unless holding the ten with his K. Supposing dummy to hold J, 9, 3 and the next player K, 6, 5 and the J to be led by the declarer, the K should be played at once. The A and Q would probably be found in the declarer's hand and the play of the K might make a 10 good in the fourth hand, but should dummy hold J, 10, 3, the next player K, 6, 5, and the J be led, the remaining cards can be arranged so that the play of the K would win. If the fourth player holds either Q or A, it would not pay to put on the K. If the fourth player holds neither Q or A, it would not pay to put on the K, which exhausts the subject. When second hand holds the Q and two small cards, not including the ten, the case of whether to cover a J led from dummy is very difficult. If the J is led when dummy holds but one or two small cards the Q should cover.

From combinations such as K, J and A, J with other cards in dummy, the declarer has a difficult proposition when the knave is led. Suppose dummy to hold K, J, 10, 3, and the J or 10 led, it would be absurd to play the Q. If the combinations were K, J, 9, 8, and the J led, it would still be absurd to cover. If the combinations in dummy were K, J, and one or two very small cards, the chances are a little in favor of playing the Q, should the J be led. A knowledge of the declaring methods would assist greatly in such cases.

When Situation Is Reversed.

When the situation is reversed and a finessing card is led towards dummy an entirely different set of complications arise. Supposing the Q to be led by the declarer, second hand to hold K-6-5 and dummy A-J-7-4, the K should undoubtedly be played. The situation would be altered if the Q were in the dummy and the J led. With the Q led, second hand holding K-6-5 and dummy holding A-J-10, it would be absurd to cover. The only chance for a second hand to win would be for the declarer to have no more of the suit or to be afraid to take the finesse on account of some other suit. With the J led by the declarer, second hand holding K-6-5 and dummy A-10-8-2, the K should be played in the hope that it might establish a Q-9 tenace in partner's hand. With a J led by the declarer, second hand holding Q-6-5 and dummy K-10-8-2, the Q should be played in the hope of making the A and 9 good in the partner's hand. The number of cards held by the second player and the dummy should always be taken into consideration.

There is never any use in covering when it is impossible for the fourth player to have three cards of the suit unless the lead should be a singleton. In other words, when second hand and dummy hold 9 of the suit it is practically always absurd for second hand to cover except when holding the cards next above and below the card led.

MIKE DUNDEE AGREES TO BURMAN FORFEIT

Mike Dundee, Rock Island featherweight, who will meet Joe Burman, local bantam, in the main event of Jim Mullen's boxing show at Aurora on Friday night, has agreed to post $1,000 with the sporting editor of THE TRIBUNE tomorrow to insure his making 124 pounds at 3 o'clock the afternoon of the contest.

This was the condition on which the match was made, and Burman insisted the forfeit be posted. Joe said he will claim the forfeit if Dundee is a fraction of a pound overweight, because he already is giving away considerable poundage. The bout is creating much interest, and Promoter Mullen said yesterday the largest crowd of the season should attend. Burman is working every day at the Arcade. Dundee is at Ferretti's.

Tickets are on sale at the usual places and special trains will be run over the Elgin and Aurora electric, which has an unloading platform alongside the arena.

George Ferguson, manager of Ever Hammer, local lightweight, has been unable to arrange a meeting with Floyd Fitzsimmons, Michigan City promoter, relative to a match between Hammer and Lightweight Champion Bennie Leonard on Aug. 5. Ferguson is willing to sign and Fitzsimmons has accepted Leonard's terms.

Packer Schwartz, well known chef at Great Lakes during the war, will leave for the east within a few days to prepare Leonard's meals during his training for the Lew Tendler fight on July 27. Packer cooked for Bennie at Michigan City and the champion was greatly impressed.

Buck Krieger-Joey Slitver bout which is to be staged at Fort Sheridan July 18, is drawing much attention along the north shore. Slitver is one of the best boxers seen at Great Lakes in years, and has scored two consecutive knockouts in his two fights at Fort Sheridan. Krieger was former welterweight champion of the army of occupation in Germany. There will be thirty-four rounds of boxing.

GAR WOOD AFTER RECORD.

Commodore Gar Wood will make his attempt to lower the world's twenty-four nautical mileage record of 728 miles on Sunday, July 16, at Put-in-Bay. It will be the opening day of the interlake regatta, and the start will be made at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, finishing the next day.

SINGLE G. AGAIN SHOWS CLASS ON GRAND CIRCUIT

Cleveland, O., July 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Single G. demonstrated again today that he is the best pacer in Grand Circuit. The aged son of Anderson Wilkes, driven and trained by Ed Allen of Indianapolis, defeated the best bunch of pacers in training, in the free for all purse feature of today's getaway card at North Randall.

Single G. won the pace event in straight heats and set a new season's pacing record for one and two miles, by negotiating the distance in 2:03¾ and 2:02¾ respectively. Never was the result in doubt. So well were Single G.'s chances thought of that he was barred in the auction betting. In the mutuals he was a prohibitive favorite.

Juno Proves Surprise.

After Single G. had been ruled out, Juno proved a surprise by beating Hal Mahone and Jimmy McKerron in the third heat.

Pop Greers, veteran driver of the Grand Circuit, had a narrow escape from injury in the 2:15 trot. As the horses were scoring for the second heat, Queen Alix backed into Geer's sulky, overturning it. The veteran Memphis reinsman luckily escaped with a slight shaking up. His entry, Anna Phelps, which finished second in the first heat, ranaway two miles and a half after the accident, and was withdrawn.

Sunflash Is Eclipsed.

One of the biggest upsets of the week came in the last event, which Minerva Gentry won. Sunflash, one of the hottest favorites of the meeting, won the first heat easily, but was unable to beat the winner in the next two.

RAINBOW TROUT OF M'CLOUD RIVER TRANSPLANT EASILY.

THE rainbow trout, king of them all, according to many anglers, is a western product and anglers can be thankful that this handsome scrapper thrives in the streams of the east and middle west.

In the mountain streams of the Coast range of the Pacific states and on the west slopes of the Sierra Nevada mountains are found the various kinds of trout which are usually considered as forming the well known rainbow trout series. Here you find Salmo Irideus, the typical rainbow. Although many anglers declare that this species is by far the greatest of all game fishes, such an assertion is usually made to include others of the rainbow series, as the various forms of rainbows have few if any equals among the Salmonidae.

Beauty, gracefulness of movement, pep, fight, and courage—that's the rainbow and its willingness to take the fly readily will please the most fastidious angler.

Fortunately for trout fishermen, one rainbow, the McCloud form, is easily propagated and successfully transplanted. This is the rainbow trout of most fish culturists. Through the operations of the United States fish commission it has had its range greatly extended. As early as 1880 culturists began trying to stock streams with this fish and results have been very successful. Michigan especially has been fortunate in this respect, as streams stocked in that state have come through in fine shape.

The size of the rainbow varies greatly. It depends upon the amount of food he can get, of course. This is true of bass or most any fish so far as that goes. Temperature of the water also plays a big part. In the Sierras where this trout is native you can catch them all the way from 10 to 30 inches in length and weighing from 2 to 8 pounds. In the Ozark region in Missouri, a wonderful fishing country by the way, rainbows are caught weighing from 5 to 10 pounds.

On the other hand you can strike some small, cold mountain streams in the west where the food supply is not so good and the water always extremely cold and you will have to be satisfied with rainbows that will not weigh more than a half pound. Perhaps a few miles away there will be a lake where the water is warm and food plentiful and in it rainbows will be found 2 feet in length. That's the way it goes.

The average growth of a rainbow under favorable conditions such as are found in a hatchery is as follows: A year old fish, from ¾ of an ounce to 1¼ ounces; two year old, 8, 9, or 10 ounces; 3 year old, 1 or 2 pounds. Some fish might run ahead of that rate. Put him in water at 60 degrees and he might double his size a couple of times in a year if he has feed galore.

GREY LAG, AT TOP WEIGHT, TAKES EMPIRE CITY RACE

Yonkers, N. Y., July 8.—Grey Lag of the Rancocas stable won the thirteenth running of the Empire City handicap for 3 year olds and upward this afternoon. Carrying top weight of 122 pounds, Grey Lag covered the mile and a furlong in 1:54. Bon Homme was second and Devastation third, followed by Capt. Alcock and Haphaistos. The race had a value of $6,550 to the winner. Grey Lag was the favorite at 6 to 5. The race was the feature of the opening day of the Empire Racing association's season.

WHEN you write a Want Ad be sure that it tells your story adequately, that it gives a full and accurate picture of what you want to sell. A clear statement of the facts of your offer will attract buyers, while, on the other hand, a carelessly worded Want Ad may run without result. Therefore, in writing your want Ad keep in mind the Tribune's slogan,

The more you tell: the quicker you sell

It's the secret of Want Ad success! It's the recipe for results!

The Case of Mr. J—

MR. J. used the following Want Ad in an effort to rent an extra room in his apartment. He inserted the ad a number of times without renting the room.

> SHERIDAN, 0000—TO RENT—NICELY FUR. dble. rm., adj. bath; exp.; bus and lake.

He was somewhat discouraged by the result of this advertising until one day he noticed The Tribune's Want Ad Slogan—"The more you tell, the quicker you sell." He determined to use it, and revised his Want Ad to read as follows:

> 0000 SHERIDAN-ROAD.
> Wonderful, lge., cool, light frt. rm., lge. closet, r. w., twin beds, beau. furn.; suit. 2 or 3 people; ideal loc.; lake, surf.; 2 ex., bus.

Mr. J. rented his room after inserting the Want Ad once, and the reason is not far to seek. The second Want Ad gave plenty of details interesting to a person looking for a room, and the first one did not. Such features as the size and location of the room are given, and the fact that it is light and cool and has a large closet. The story of this room is adequately told. The reader gets a definite, concrete picture and is aroused to action. "The more you tell, the quicker you sell."

The Case of Mr. B—

MR. B. ran the following two line Want Ad in an effort to rent an apartment in his building:

> TO RENT—0000 LANGLEY-AV., 2D APT.; mod., stm. ht., pan. serv.; $45. Drexl. 0000.

The Ad, Mr. B. reported, produced no results whatever; so he revised it according to The Tribune's slogan and ran it again:

> TO RENT—0000 LANGLEY-AV., 2D, 4 RM. mod. apt.; pol. oak floors; stm. elect.; ras; hot water; jan. serv.; every rm. light and airy; excel. trans.; $45 per mo. Drexel 0000.

When The Tribune Adtaker again called, Mr. B. reported that he had received many replies to the revised Want Ad from which he could select a tenant at leisure. "The more you tell, the quicker you sell."

—how to hire salesmen

MR. P. needed a number of salesmen to handle his line in Chicago and adjacent territory, so he very logically put a Want Ad in The Tribune. This is the Ad he ran:

> SALESMEN—10, WITH CARS, FOR CHICAGO and suburbs. Call Booth 00, 0 floor, Wrigley Bldg.

Mr. P. reported but indifferent results from this first Want Ad, so The Tribune Adtaker advised him to rewrite his Want Ad, setting forth his offer in more detail. He did, and following is the Want Ad after he had revised and rewritten it:

> SALESMEN.
> I want 10 live salesmen with cars to work in exclusive territory in Chicago and suburbs handling a new line of comforters; only experienced man need apply. BOOTH 00, 0 floor, Wrigley Bldg.

Mr. P. was very well pleased with the results from his new Want Ad. He said that he had received a large number of applicants, practically all of whom were of the type he required. "The more you tell, the quicker you sell."

—Want Ad secures a stenographer

MR. C. was in need of a capable stenographer, so he advertised in the Want Ad Section of The Tribune:

> STENOGRAPHER — EXPERIENCED AND competent, over 25, good on detail; excellent opportunity for bright young lady; S. Side. Address H N 000, Tribune.

The Ad did not pull very well, and Mr. C. had about concluded that he would have to hire a girl "by some other means," when a Tribune Adtaker advised him to write a more detailed, more interesting Want Ad, which he did. It follows:

> STENOGRAPHER.
> There is a good opening on Automobile Row for competent girl, 25 years or over, who is also able to do some detail work; excellent opportunity for her future with fine working conditions and hours; the salary will be paid according to ability shown. Address H E 000, Tribune.

After running the above Want Ad Mr. C reported to The Tribune Adtaker that he had more replies than he thought possible and that he had already hired two girls. A good illustration of the truth of the slogan—"The more you tell, the quicker you sell."

"Wording a Want Ad—"

FROM time to time The Tribune has published outlines of suggestions to help Want Advertisers in the construction of their Want Ads. Very soon we shall publish a booklet to be called, "Wording a Want Ad—To Make It Pay," containing a complete list of these outlines of suggestions. These booklets will be presented free of charge to anyone asking for one. As the edition is limited, it is advisable to send for this booklet quickly. We will mail you a copy as soon as it is printed.

If you need—a Want Ad, just call Central 0100 and ask for an Adtaker. If you have a telephone, your ad will be inserted and a bill sent you later. Remember this easy, convenient way of ordering a Want Ad!

Here's how—to make your Want Ads more effective. Read these outlines carefully. Clip them and refer to them in writing your Want Ad. List the important features as they apply to your offer; and when you are sure that you have not overlooked any important detail, make a new list of these features in the order of their importance, and presto! your Want Ad is written!

Wisconsin Takes Annual Profit on Road Investment

Lure of Northern Lakes Fills Highways in Vacation Land.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

TIPLER, Wis., En Route over Cloverland Trails.—[Special.]—The great summer trek into the land of pines and singing reel is in full swing.

White dust hangs low over every winding road and smooth state highway leading to and through the northern lake land. A thousand tiny hotels and pine encased resorts have come alive after the lean winter to welcome the hoard of automobile tourists, swarming like locusts through the big woods trails and into lake retreats all the way from the Illinois state line to the Superior country. Even this drowsy little lumber camp, at the head of the Forest county highway system, is astir with vacation activity when it is not sitting back comfortably on the general store stoop commenting on the equipment of the hardier ones who are pushing far afield in search of new and untouched fishing grounds.

"The greatest crop since the war," is the way Jess Gilmer, known from the Manitowish waters to the Brule for his woods and stream lore, sizes up this year's summer visitors, "an' every one of 'em looking for some spot where only the eagles can get to."

The situation bothers Jess a trifle. He is so busy packing fishermen from the head of auto navigation through the slashing trails to the north with his team of white ponies that his trout fishing is seriously interrupted and it has come to a point where his hilltop shack with its rough bunk house houses several visitors each week and has become the headquarters for much of the Steven's Lake and Pine river vacation business.

But, like all old timers of the Forest county district, Jess is alert to serve every interest and whim of the stranger. The "tourist first" slogan has been drilled into every man of the county until the natural kindness of the northern folk has been made almost a summer religion. The tenderfoot is welcomed everywhere and patiently taught how to adapt himself to wilderness ways, where to find the deep holes and the big fighters of lake waters, what bait to use, what roads to take, and how to avoid danger. Prices, except in a few scattered garages and a limited number of resorts, have been stabilized and regular committees formed in each community to hear and adjust complaints made by visitors.

But the crowning welcome of the northland lies in its roads. There is little paving north of Appleton or Madison in the resort district, but the miles of carefully tended gravel and hard packed sandy earth carry the heavy tourist traffic everywhere, and each county is out to beat its neighbors in remarkable highway maintenance.

"The roads are our vital asset," said F. J. Rogers, highway commissioner of Forest county, who has brought his traffic lines to state leadership. "Without them we could expect little or nothing in the way of advancement up here. It is the roads that have brought every bit of prosperity to this country. They have opened it, not only to the thousands of summer vacationists who return year after year with money to spend and improvements to make, but also to the steady, reliable settlers who are clearing the land, producing bigger crops each season, building up the towns and industries, and advancing the value of every foot of ground. They have also brought in almost unlimited financial resources from the wealthy sportsmen who have established summer homes. They have taken a direct interest in the country, and it is their money, loaned in every worthy project, that makes our growth possible. Our farmers, new and old, no longer find trouble in financing any of their operations."

More than $100,000 is being spent on new road work in the county this year, devoted largely to improvement of the timber trails branching from the main highways. One of these, state highway No. 98, opened to traffic July 1, is the big feature of the season.

The new road, striking north from trunk line 32, the resort road, at North Crandon, runs straignt north to connect with Michigan highway No. 73 at the Brule river state line. It crosses four rivers and any number of streams, all good trout waters, and runs through twenty-six miles of virgin timber, some of the most beautiful in Wisconsin. The trunk makes a new and valuable connection with the northern peninsula highway at Iron river and makes it possible for motorists to cut off heavy mileage in making the rounds of the northern lakes.

Probably the only road that can compare with the new trunk line in wild charm is the Cloverland trail running from Ashland east and south through the Gogebic ranges, virgin timber, and copper country to reach Marquette. It forgets civilization the moment North Crandon outskirts are reached and plunges into the cool depth of the pines and hardwoods, the retreat of much of the game that has been forced north and west by the steady march of civilization. The Popple, Pine, and Brule river crossings interrupt the run to Iron river and, with their tributaries leading from the Eagle to the Pine waters, offer excellent trout fishing, despite the high water which gave game fish an abundance of food this year.

Wisconsin Road Tips

STEADY construction work on Wisconsin's main highways this year makes it advisable to plan carefully for all northern trips in order to avoid heavily traveled detours and to save time in reaching all points north and west of Milwaukee. Following are combinations of state trunk lines which offer the best routes for through travel. They may be followed easily by watching the numbered direction signs along the state roads:

From Milwaukee to Fond du Lac—No. 57 north to Plymouth and No. 23 west to destination. Gravel roads.

To all points north of Green Bay—No. 57 from Milwaukee north to Hilbert, No. 114 west to County trunk A, country road A north to Kaukauna, and No. 15 to Green Bay and north.

To Madison via Milwaukee—Nos. 41, 92, 19.

To Kilbourne via Milwaukee—Nos. 41, 92, 19, 107, 29, 33, 12.

To St. Paul via northern route—No. 57 from Milwaukee to 114, to 15, to 47, to 16, to 11, to 12 and destination.

The best route into the northern lake district at present is No. 47 from Appleton through Shawano and Antigo, and No. 39 to Rhinelander and Woodruff. If the desination is the Eagle river country take the county trunk line from Deerbrook, north of Antigo, to Crandon and No. 32 highway to Eagle river.

SPEEDERS' CLASS

A SPECIAL school for traffic violators is the latest innovation of Carlos D. Goeltz, city police judge of Sioux City, Ia.

The first move toward checking violations of the newly enacted traffic rules was a wholesale arrest of offenders, charging each up with a fine of $1. This proving ineffective, the fine was increased to $2. But violations of the ordinance seemed to increase in direct proportion to the increase in fines. The next step was to raise the ante to $3. One day last week when Judge Goeltz came face to face with thirty-one offenders he scratched his head in desperation and then in addition to the $3 fine compelled the culprits to sit in class for two hours rehearsing the long list of published rules under the tutelage of a special cop assigned for the purpose.

SUPER SUBWAYS.

It is planned in London to do away with all railways above ground, and the old roadbeds are to be connected into highways or speedways for motor traffic.

Steady Increase Reported in 1922 Auto Production

FIGURES received from the department of commerce show a very large increase in May in the production of passenger automobiles and trucks. The total production of passenger cars in May, so far reported, amounted to 231,699, compared to 197,221 in April. This is an increase of nearly 18 per cent.

The total truck production in May was 24,603 machines, compared with 22,227 in April.

Reports have been received this month from a number of companies which have not reported previously. This has necessitated a revision of the figures for earlier months. For the month of May ninty-one companies have reported on passenger car production and eighty-two companies on trucks.

With a few exceptions the following table represents the production of identical firms for each month:

	Passenger cars.	Trucks.
January	81,693	9,244
February	109,170	18,121
March	152,959	19,651
April	197,221	22,227
May	231,699	24,603

Still Retains Kick.

The days of automobile cranking are not over by any means. The Norwich Union Indemnity company of New York reports having paid recently almost $7,500 in five states for thirty different accidents to injured workmen as the result of automobile cranking.

His Roads.

The chief of the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture will probably never personally inspect all of the system of federal-aid roads provided for by the federal highway act and for which initial appropriations have been made.

The system is being designed to serve the whole country and will be approximately 180,000 miles in length. Should he make an inspection, traveling at the rate of thirty miles an hour, eight hours a day on all working days, and not go over any mile twice, it would require nearly two and one-half years to complete the job.

Test for Clutch.

When the clutch slips, it causes the motor to race or to run too fast for the speed one is driving. Clutch slipping may be the cause of one's motor overheating or of causing loss of power.

The way to test one's car to see if the clutch is slipping is to let motor run at what would be a fair speed—about twenty or twenty-two miles per hour, if one were driving. Put the emergency brake on tight and shift your gear to high speed and gradually throw in your clutch. If your motor stalls, your clutch is not slipping. If the motor continues to run, then the clutch needs attention at once.

$250 Cash Starts You In $10,000 Per Year Business

We are prepared to establish a limited number of honest and ambitious men with small capital in the Automobile and Radio Battery Manufacturing and Repair business. This business will take in the manufacturing and repairing of storage batteries and service for the automobile and radio industry.

The demand for these batteries is increasing at the rate of 35,000 per day. The sales, repairs and replacements will be so enormous that the entire country will be unable to handle them. PROFITS WILL BE AMAZING, COMPETITION WILL VANISH. The possibilities for live and ambitious men are astounding. You will operate 12 months a year on practically a cash basis, IN ANY PART OF THE COUNTRY, WITH ASSURED SUCCESS. Can be efficiently handled by one man or more, and you can start in your garage, basement or spare room if necessary, BUT WE HAVE PLENTY OF CHOICE LOCATIONS FOR THOSE WHO DESIRE TO START ON A LARGER SCALE.

We teach you the entire business in 150 hours, regardless of your previous education, training or occupation, and furnish you everything needed to start you off making big money at once. WE MAKE OUR MONEY FROM THE SUPPLIES YOU PURCHASE FROM US IN THE FUTURE. School is open both day and evening, to allow men now employed to attend while holding their present positions.

MEN, THIS IS A WONDERFUL CHANCE. DROP EVERYTHING FOR THIS OPPORTUNITY. Remember, we can only finance a limited number and you will always regret it if you call or write us too late. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO INVESTIGATE, and we will explain everything to you more fully if you will call or write.

TRIBUNE TOURS

XX. ROUTES TO VACATIONDOM

THE lure of lakes and pine forests is in the air. Thousands of drivers are already on the roads chasing the miles to favorite vacation haunts and thousands more are devouring text books of the open road in attempting to decide on the summer jaunt. Here is the vacation suggestion that should solve most of the problems, for it offers the ideal combination of good roads, varied scenery, excellent fishing, fair hunting, and the choice of hundreds of isolated vacation spots.

The main route into the northern Wisconsin and Michigan wilderness this year differs widely from former seasons, due to construction work on the main trunk lines Nos. 15 and 55 leading from Milwaukee to Fond du Lac. Both roads are passable, but the detours on 15 total twenty-six miles and those on 55 around West Bend and Fond du Lac offer rough going.

The best route from Chicago follows the Milwaukee-Waukegan concrete highway from Dempster street west of Evanston to Waukegan. Then pick up Sheridan road and follow it to Ryan's road, ten miles north of Racine. Turn left on Ryan's road to the second right hand concrete road, marked Wis. highway 57. Turn right and follow 57 straight through Milwaukee, Cedarburg, and Plymouth to Hilbert, good gravel all the way. There turn left on highway 114 to county trunk line A. Turn north on the road marked A crossing the river at Kaukauna, and bear to the right on No. 15 15 concrete if you intend to strike north to the Green Bay country first. This route crosses the state line at Menominee and strikes north to join the Theodore Roosevelt highway at Powers. From that point the resort and lakes of the upper peninsula may best be reached by following Michigan highway No. 12 west through Iron mountain, Iron river, and into the Gogebic country—smooth ore and macadam roads all the way.

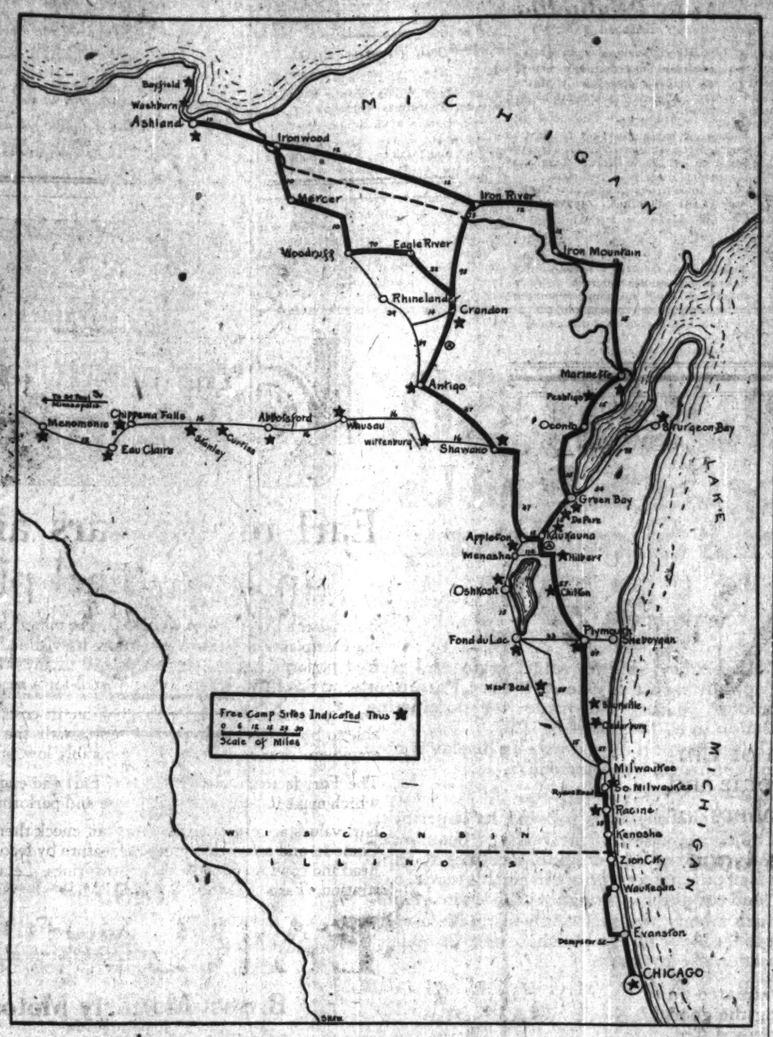
If the Eagle, Manitowash, or Pine waters are desired, turn left into Appleton after crossing the river at Kaukauna and at Appleton take No. 47 highway north and west through Shawano and through the Menominee Indian reservation to Antigo. The reservation road is a mixture of sand and clay, good for the most part and affected little by wet weather. The hard wood timber through which the route runs is well worth the few short stretches of sand to be encountered.

From Antigo use No. 39 highway north to county trunk A and the county road as a short cut in reaching Crandon and Eagle river. This county trunk crosses the Hunting and Wolf rivers and several good trout streams. In making direct for the Manitowish waters use No. 39 from Antigo to Woodruff and No. 10 to Manitowish and Mercer, in the heart of the lake district.

An attractive loop trip can be had by leaving Crandon on 32 highway to North Crandon and striking north over the new No. 98 highway, recently opened to traffic. This road traverses twenty-six miles of virgin timber and crosses a score of trout streams before reaching the state line and joining Michigan highway 73 for the run into Iron river.

The best northern route to Minneapolis is also shown on the accompanying trail map. Stars indicate the best free camp sites along all of the routes.

It is well to take two days to the trip north, although by hard driving it is possible to cover the 300 miles in a single day.



Circle Tour of Lake Draws Many Chicago Drivers

CHICAGO devotees of the open road swung their cars into the dust covered line yesterday as the caravan of Michigan tourists who are making a 1,730 mile circle of Lake Michigan rounded into South Shore drive and headed for the loop.

More than thirty cars are included in this year's circle tour, run under the auspices of the Michigan Pikes' association. Several fast baggage trucks, carrying the tourists' camping impedimenta, and a radio equipped touring car adds to the comfort and entertainment of the big road boosting party. The Ford band is also accompanying the party, and forms a musical feature of the numerous good roads meetings planned along the route.

The "pikers" reached their Chicago control at noon, and made their headquarters in the Chicago Motor club, proceeding again after luncheon to Milwaukee for the night control. They will push on today to the north via Sheboygan, Menominee, and Iron Mountain to Crystal Falls, in the northern peninsula. The schedule then calls for a run to Calumet and a day spent in the copper country before the party turns east for the straits and the homeward run down the famous West Michigan pike.

Other Chicago motorists interested in the development of middle western highways plan to join a second party, under the direction of W. H. Loutit, president of the West Michigan Pike association, which leaves Chicago July 15 for Grand Haven, later proceeding north over the West Michigan pike to meet the circle tourists at Harbor Springs.

The latter party will include highway leaders from a number of middle west and southern states, among them Supt. Frank Sheets and Chief Engineer Clifford Older of Illinois. Supt. A. R. Hirst of Wisconsin and F. F. Rogers, state highway commissioner of Michigan. They will inspect pavements through lower Michigan and as far north as Petoskey, and hold highway meetings in a dozen towns and cities while making a study of western road development.

Michigan has been in the fore front of the highway race for the last three years, and its commission has made interesting experiments with various types of paving surfaces to care for enormous automobile traffic. The state system is now practically complete as far as main trunk highways are concerned, and construction work is being centered on secondary roads, on widening of the present heavy duty trunks, and on repair and maintenance system improvement.

TELL-TALE

Built to Give Real Service

TELL-TALE Piston Rings are constructed to give the very best possible service. They are made from a special analysis, dense-grained gray iron, sure to maintain its "life" under extreme motor heat and friction. That is one of the reasons why TELL-TALE Rings last so long. Their one-piece construction also adds to their durability.

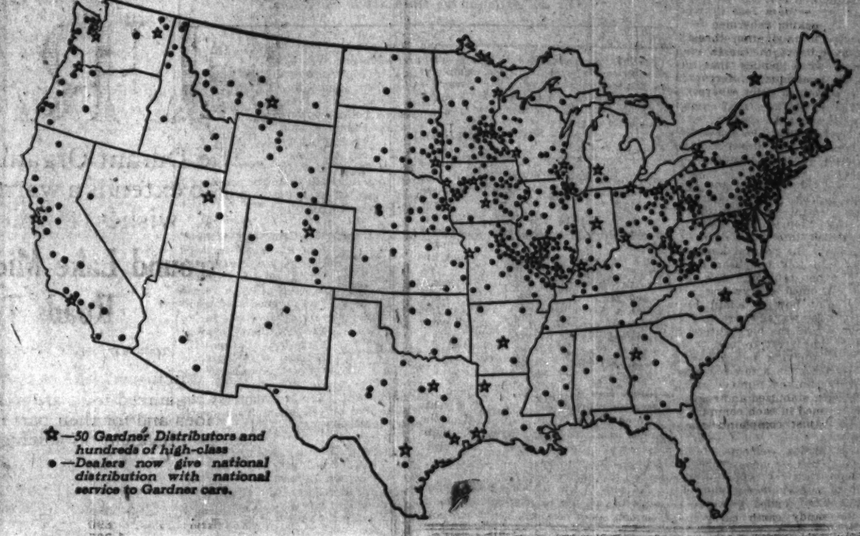
National Distribution means National Service



★—50 Gardner Distributors and hundreds of high-class
●—Dealers now give national distribution with national service to Gardner cars.

Outstanding Value has been the Big Factor in Securing this Nation-Wide Distribution

The rapid and substantial increase in the Gardner selling organization is a direct result of the real value that has been built into the Gardner car. Distributors and dealers everywhere, quick to recognize this unusual value, have eagerly sought representation in the great Gardner selling organization which now completely covers the country. Similar appreciation on the part of the motor-buying public has increased the sale of Gardner cars by leaps and bounds.

As a result of this nation-wide distribution national service is now conveniently available to every Gardner owner. This service is backed by a one-year full-value written guarantee which goes with every Gardner car sold—a guarantee that means something because it has behind it an organization with more than 40 years of successful manufacturing experience, whose exceptionally strong financial position places it among the real leaders in the automotive industry.

The one ambition and effort of the Gardner organization has been to build a quality car—a car that could be offered at a price which would enable the public to realize the biggest possible value for their money.

In no other car selling under $1,000 can you obtain anywhere near all of the noteworthy features embodied in the new Gardner model:

32 x 4 Anti-skid cord tires.
Westinghouse electrical equipment.
Borg & Beck clutch.
Timken and Hyatt roller bearings.
Forty-eight-pound crankshaft.
Brown-Lipe spiral bevel differential gears. Driving pinion made integral with driving shaft.
Mechanics' transmission and universal joints.
Alemite lubricating system.
Willard threaded rubber battery.
Gardner special built body with hard, maple frame covered with 20-gauge metal sheets.
Hard-baked enamel finish.
Heavy beaded crown fenders.
Heavy channeled aluminum body moulding.
Chase "Drednaut" double-texture top material.
Bright-finish, straight grain genuine leather upholstery.
Real curled hair filling in cushions and backs.
18-inch steering wheel with aluminum spider.
Bar radiator cap and motometer.
Newest, sturdy drum-type head lamps.
Demountable rims with improved lugs attached.
Added and improved equipment representing at least $200 greater value to the user—at a price $400 less than a year ago!

These are but a few of the reasons why the Gardner has so quickly won nation-wide distribution through national recognition as the car of greater value at a lower price.

Motor Industry Rides to Safety on Business Boom

Detroit Letter Reveals Plans to Meet Rail Strike.

BY WILLIAM WHITCOMB.

DETROIT, Mich., July 8.—A complete return to normal conditions of the automobile industry is indicated by a financial review for the first half of 1922. This is revealed by the dividend disbursements against the same period one year ago and at the close of 1921.

In the list are about twenty companies which distributed dividends on July 1, against less than ten a year ago. During the month of July the list of companies distributing earnings will be increased 50 per cent. Each month since March has seen an increased output by all compales, some of the more optimistic manufacturers even bringing out new designs to compete with the older and more well known models.

This upturn in motor production against a depression of nearly two years permitted the companies to liquidate all or most of their bank indebtedness and placed them in a secure financial position.

The most notable recovery in the dividend resumption is that of the Paige-Detroit Motor company, which declared a 6 per cent disbursement payable July 10. The last dividend of the Paige common stock was in the latter part of 1920.

Just what effect the coal and railroad strikes will have on the automobile question cannot at this early date be told, but it will undoubtedly cause a slacking of production. The greatest difficulty will be in the long haul shipments. The lake shipments will, of course, be increased, and the once popular driveaways will be resumed.

Such concerns as the Ford Motor company, the Packard Motor Car company, Dodge Brothers, and the Timkin Detroit Axle company have sufficient coal on hand to run them for several months.

Beginning Aug. 1 the Buick Motor company will start the assembling of all closed cars manufactured by the organization in the plant formerly occupied by the Scripps-Booth corporation in Detroit. This will release additional open car production in Flint, allowing the Buick officials to plan a much larger production, which has become necessary on account of increased demands.

At present the closed bodies are built in the Fisher Body plant, Detroit, and hauled by specially built trucks to the Flint factory.

By a decision of the United States Circuit court of appeals at Cincinnati last week, the Ford Motor company won one of the most important patent suits tried in this country for many years. Action was brought by the Thompson Spot Welder company of Boston against Ford to sustain the Harmatta patent for a process of spot welding. This was declared void, and will save numerous automobile plants millions of dollars in royalties which they might have been forced to pay had contentions been sustained.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's out to learn the truth about motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question I. R. Ritzelsen, Albany, Wis., was awarded $5.

The Question.

What state do you like best for touring?

Where Asked.

On Michigan avenue, at Ontario street.

The Answers.

H. F. Peterson, 1602 East 55th street, chauffeur — So far, Maryland appeals to me the most. I have not been through the western states, but I have covered every state south and east of Chicago. They have wonderful scenery, both valley and mountain, and plenty of historical places to add to the interest. The roads and accommodations were good everywhere last summer.

Dwight Bemish, 5016 Drexel boulevard, chauffeur—I am not familiar with the western states, but east of here I prefer New York state. The roads, road markings, and accommodations are all good. You can make fast time in that state. They don't have the speed traps that they have here. And the scenery—you can't beat the scenery along the Mohawk valley and in the Adirondack mountains.

Henry Topp, Topp Tire Co., Ontario and Michigan avenue—Give me Wisconsin. Wisconsin roads, they are wonderful. Wonderful accommodations, and courteous people. Ninety per cent of my trade loves Wisconsin just as much as I do, and they are all Chicago people. I have been all over the United States and Wisconsin goes first.

Jack Cannon, 1940 Grace street, chauffeur—I have traveled in every state of the union and I feel that in Wisconsin you have just as good scenery as any other state, far or near, unless you go over into British Columbia, or follow some of the trails along the St. Lawrence river. The woods and the lakes, they are beautiful. You can run into a lake within five or ten miles from nearly every town.

Herbert P. Joehnek, Barrington, Illinois, chauffeur—I prefer Wisconsin. There are plenty of resorts to stop at, where you can get a good meal or fish and camp out. Any time you ask a question along the road you will get a civil answer, and that's better than they do at a lot of places through Illinois. They also look after the roads up there, and when they are going to do a thing they do it; they don't talk about it, as they do in Illinois.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

NEGOTIATIONS have been practically competed by W. C. Durant for the taking over of the Locomobile company, it is understood from reliable sources. Approximately $3,000,000 will be paid for the Bridgeport plant, which is now in the hands of a receiver.

Plans for the plant's operation have not as yet been announced, but it is expected that a high class car, similar to the Locomobile, will be turned out.

Volume of business became so great during the last few months that the Hudson and Essex company announced savings in costs which in turn have been passed down to the public through price reductions. New prices on the Hudson seven passenger phaeton, coach and speedster are $50 less; on the Essex cabriolet $100, and on the Essex coach $50.

The Rickenbacker Motor company set new records in daily output last week with an average of forty-two cars. The production is steadily increasing, and Capt. Rickenbacker, who has just returned from a western tour of agency inspection, reports that the present rate of production is far below the demand.

The Mason Tire and Rubber company of Kent, O., has purchased the Owen Tire company of Bedford, O., and will use the plant for the manufacture of cord tires as Ford equipment.

An initial output of 1,500 tires per day is announced. The Mason plant is now 50 per cent oversold on its product.

Allison-Rood, Chicago distributors for the Leland built Lincoln, have added a complete Ford line. The company is now featuring a big display of all body types.

The Gary car, which lists at $490, has reached Chicago. It is being shown at 2411 Michigan avenue, the headquarters of the Simmons-Hardin Motor company.

Percy Ford, popular race driver and motor executive, has newly joined the Marmon Chicago organization.

The R. C. Cook company, distributor of the Velie, reports active sales on the new sport touring model 58, just recently released from the factory. Aluminum steps and entirely new long, soft flowing lines make this a distinctively natty looking car that well warrants its "sport" classification.

The new Velie-Built Motor gives the model the same power plant advantages that characterize the Velie line for this year.

CHANDLER SIX

Touring Car In Road Use Confirms Show Triumph

$1595

THE beauty of line, smart style and rich appointments of the new Five Passenger Chandler Touring Car made it a dominating sensation in all the shows of 1922.

The admiration the car won on display is now being confirmed in performance.

Then, the body triumphed.

Now, the chassis is proving its superiority.

The combination of the body of beauty and chassis of might is profoundly satisfying to thousands of purchasers who are using this model over all road conditions throughout the United States.

Such a body and such a chassis make a value not to be duplicated at anywhere near Chandler's sensationally low price.

10 Years Average Life Westcott Cars

In buying a Westcott Motor Car, you are assured nearly twice the service yielded by the average motor car.

The exceptional durability of Westcott Cars has made them famous.

Lasting nearly twice as long, depreciation expense is greatly reduced and resale value kept unusually high. And these are the two most important items in figuring motor car maintenance costs.

Come and see the Westcott. Go over it carefully. Note how in major units and minor details everything about the car has been carefully and thoughtfully planned, designed and built to maintain the ten years average life.

You will be particularly interested in the Westcott California Type steel sheathed, steel braced, three-ply permanent top. It is the only car furnishing such a top as standard equipment. The Westcott top keeps the car looking new and up-to-date years after the average top looks disreputable or has been replaced.

The Car with WESTCOTT a Longer Life

WESTCOTT

A Motor That Wears In While Others Are Wearing Out

There is a definite reason for the great and growing popularity of the Willys-Knight car.

From the day it leaves the factory its smooth, powerful motor begins to grow even smoother and more powerful.

Carbon, the enemy of most motors, in the Willys-Knight improves compression and increases its power.

Repair shops are almost unknown to the Willys-Knight motor. It runs dependably and economically through an extraordinary mileage.

The car is especially designed to match the motor in long life and distinction. Its sturdy steel chassis eliminates jolts and jars and keeps the body permanently free from rattles and squeaks.

In the Willys-Knight you get remarkable power, comfort and dependability at exceptionally low operating cost.

Come in and we will tell you why.

FARM AND GARDEN

Starts Garden for Health; Becomes Head Lettuce King

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

W. S. SHEARER, Ameri head lettuce wizard, back to Chicago the o day to tell old friends how he had become one of the world's big gest vegetable specialty producers. Many Chicagoans were familiar with the first chapter in his romantic story that scenario writers would probably label "Romance in a Head of Lettuce." It began the day Mr. Shearer locked his desk in a textbook publishing office here in Chicago in 1913 and started to Idaho for his health.

Gardening had no special appeal for Mr. Shearer, but in order to be outdoors the planting of a garden was the first thing he thought about after the chairs and tables had been put in place in the new home at Lewiston, Idaho. The superior quality of the first crispy head of lettuce that came from his back yard garden convinced him that growing the crop on a commercial scale would be profitable. "I told my wife that our fortune was made after I had eaten a few bites of a head that came from our first crop of lettuce," said Mr. Shearer.

105 Acres of Lettuce.

He was soon gathering evidence to prove his prediction. The next year he planted one-ninth of an acre of lettuce and sold every head of it to local customers. Each year since he has increased his acreage, gradually supplying more and more customers in northern Idaho and in eastern Washington and Oregon, until in 1916 he was distributing lettuce as far east as Minnesota. Last year his head lettuce had reached all the leading vegetable markets in the middle west, selling forty carloads in 1921 for $40,000. He had orders for more than 150 carloads for the season. In one day telegraphic orders came in for 5,400 crates. One hundred and five acres of head lettuce will be grown on the Shearer vegetable ranch this season.

Heads Big Sales Agency.

Last winter 800 Idaho farmers formed a league and signed a contract to grow lettuce according to certain rules and regulations governing the fertilization, cultivation, and harvesting of the lettuce to produce a high quality and uniform grade. Besides Mr. Shearer's 105 acres there will be 1,200 acres of head lettuce grown by league members to be sold under the same trade name and through a selling organization. It is estimated that approximately 400,000 crates will be produced and sold through the sales agency which is headed by Mr. Shearer.

A carload of lettuce brought in from the lettuce wizard's Idaho ranch was sold on the Chicago market a few days ago. The car was opened early one morning and before 9 o'clock South Water street merchants had bought the entire load at $6.50 a crate, netting Mr. Shearer more than $4 a crate, f. o. b. Idaho shipping point.

HEAD LETTUCE WIZARD

W. S. Shearer of Lewiston, Idaho, is one of the world's biggest head lettuce growers. He left Chicago eight years ago and started growing lettuce in his back yard, gradually increasing his operations until this season he will have 105 acres under cultivation. Last year he sold $40,000 worth of head lettuce in vegetable markets of the middle west.

Sheep Men to Profit by New Loading Rules

The Interstate Commerce commission's decision effected a freight saving of $15 to $20 a car on sheep when the sheep minimum was reduced for cars 36 feet 7 inches in length from 22,000 pounds to 18,000 pounds, announces the National Livestock exchange. The decision effects sheep men in the territory east of the Mississippi river south to New Orleans, including Illinois, on shipments moving east of the Illinois-Indiana state line.

A 19,000 pound minima for cars 36 feet and 7 inches long, and less than 40 feet, and 20,000 pounds for cars over 40 feet long, was established by the decision. Railroads are required to maintain the minima prescribed after Aug. 19.

Everett C. Brown, president of the exchange, said that a reasonable estimate of the saving to producers made possible by the action of the national exchange in this decision, coupled with the decision in the mixed car case reported recently, is $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 a year.

GARDEN NOTES

Cabbage worms and cabbage loopers make life miserable for plants from now until the cabbage crop is harvested. They also attack cauliflower and kale. Arsenate of lead will kill them and can be safely used to protect the plants until harvest time.

Drought and hot weather has greatly reduced the berry crop all over Illinois, and the berry sections in most of the other middle west states have suffered during the last few weeks.

This is an ideal time in the season to mow the weeds in fence corners and around the garden border. Cut the weeds at the time they first start blooming or before, if possible. At flowering time the plants are in the weak stage. If the weeds are allowed to stand after they blossom the seeds ripen and the whole plant has to be burned to destroy the seed. Even then many of the seed fall on the ground in handling the plants.

Soaking the soil around the roots near the base of trees on lawns and parkways will have much to do with keeping the foliage green and fresh during hot weather.

Illinois Farmers Boost Egg Profits by Organizations

FIVE months' experience in the marketing of eggs and poultry through their own cooperative shipping associations has demonstrated to Illinois farmers that millions of dollars can be saved every year by selling the state's 76,000,000 dozen egg crop through farmer owned organizations. Farmers who have been selling their eggs and poultry through the twelve cooperative associations already operating in this state have received enough extra dollars for their products that they no longer have to theorize on the question of whether a cooperative selling organization can be operated as economically and efficiently as an old line firm.

Organization Solves Many Problems.

Farmers and agricultural leaders have had many of the questions in poultry marketing answered since they started cooperative egg and poultry shipping associations in Illinois last February. The fundamentals in cooperative marketing make it possible for eggs and poultry to be marketed cheaper than through the old system, they say.

A member of a million dollar poultry and egg firm in west central Illinois says that if farmers would all deliver their eggs to one central station and not make it necessary to advertise or maintain wagons or trucks to gather them up, eggs could be handled at a lower cost than "we handle them or any other company handles them if they get more than a car of eggs each week."

"This is exactly what cooperative egg and poultry selling organizations are doing in Illinois today; it is one of the fundamentals that justify cooperation. Advertising and the costs of gathering eggs in trucks and wagons are eliminated," said E. F. Murphy, in charge of the organization work, in answering the poultry dealer. "The cooperative associations give the farmer all the money the egs sell for, less the actual marketing costs. Under the old system producers not only pay the costs of marketing but pay a profit to the local country buyer," he said.

Fresher Eggs for Consumer.

The west central Illinois poultry dealer raised another important question when he said the trouble is that it is impossible to get farmers educated to the necessity of delivering their eggs practically every day, or to keep them in a cool place on the farm until they can get them to market. "We believe the most serious thing wrong with the present way of marketing eggs is the length of time they are held on the farm, which, of course, takes away the freshness," said the local buyer.

Mr. Murphy agrees and adds that heretofore farmers have not brought in the best quality of eggs because local buyers have not paid them any more for eggs that are fresh and in good condition than they have for eggs of second grade. The cooperative associations are encouraging the production of good eggs by grading and actually paying every farmer on the basis of the grade he delivers.

DOWN ON THE FARM

IF you have pictures similar to the one above, send them to The Tribune. Modern hay loaders and hoisting machines are gradually minimizing use of old fashioned pitchforks like these Illinois farmers are using. Swift changes in evolution of American agriculture are bringing about like progress in improvement of live stock, crops, and labor saving machinery. On screen of agricultural progress whole farm picture takes on entirely new color, so changed that city business men brought up on farms almost drive by their old homesteads on an occasional visit to country. No prizes are offered to farmers who send in pictures, but The Tribune is anxious to print pictures of interesting farm scenes, in order that farmers in neighboring states and men in cities may keep pace with advancements. There's also comedy on farm. Keep camera handy and snap interesting happenings.

Send your pictures, with full information, including names and addresses, to Farm and Garden Editor, Sunday Tribune.

Los Angeles May Become Packing Center of Coast

MIDWEST livestock men are expected to watch with keen interest the development of a plan to build up a new market place for range cattle on the Pacific coast, drawing upon the supply that is now being shipped from the western states to the middle west livestock centers. G. I. Christie, director of the agricultural experiment station at Purdue university will make a survey of live stock conditions in six of the far western states during July and August. Various livestock interests, including representatives of the Union Stock yards being established at Los Angeles, Cal., and the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Santa Fe railroads are having the survey made.

G. I. CHRISTIE.

Corn belt farmers will be particularly interested in the survey because anything that leads to the development of livestock production in the western states will have its effect on the livestock production in the central west states.

According to an announcement of the plans, a big stockyard will be located at Los Angeles and will be developed along the lines of the Union Stock yards at Chicago. Livestock will be drawn to the Pacific coast market from Utah, Idaho, Nevada, California, Arizona and New Mexico. Near the stock yards packing houses will be built to take care of the livestock coming from these six states and the practice of sending hundreds and thousands of range cattle to the Chicago livestock market will be discontinued.

LAST MINUTE FARM NEWS

Ohio's commercial onion crop is estimated at 6,100 acres this year, compared with 5,800 last year. The celery acreage is also expected to be increased.

Thousands of grain growers are receiving the thirty minute market quotations broadcasted by radio telephone from the Chicago Board of Trade, says A. M. Clement, chairman of the board's marketing committee.

Only 12,000,000 dairy cows would be needed to produce the milk and butterfat now produced by the 23,000,000 dairy cows in the United States if only pure bred sires were at the head of each herd, according to a survey made public by the National Institute of Progressive Farming.

Dairymen's Jottings

The value of milk as a food for children is being realized more fully every year. An example of its value has been shown by tests made at the Darwin school, Chicago, where 600 children were served milk each day for three months. The average gain during the ninety days was 3.2 pounds, against an expected gain of 1.5 pounds.

Many answers come to the federal department of agriculture recently in an attempt to find out the causes for spreading tuberculosis among dairy cattle. How many of the twelve causes of the spread of tuberculosis summed up below do you violate?

1. Unrestricted range or common pasture.
2. Common drinking pool or trough.
3. Introduction of untested cattle.
4. Nosing at fence lines.
5. Close, foul housing.
6. Milk of infected animals fed to calves and hogs.
7. Trading of untested animals.
8. Dead animals eaten by dogs and hogs.
9. Breachy stock.
10. Breeding to a common bull.
11. Serving cows outside the herd.
12. Conditions unfavorable to health as drafty barns and underfeeding.

Buick Takes Care of Buick Owners

Buick responsibility does not end with the sale of a Buick car. It follows the car throughout its entire life.

That is why Buick has organized a nation-wide authorized Buick service that extends to practically every city, town and village in the United States.

Buick owners do not need service often. But they have the comfortable feeling of knowing that they can always be supplied with genuine Buick parts and have their work done by Buick-trained mechanics wherever they may happen to be.

SHARP DECLINE IN ALL GRAINS LAID TO GERMAN CRISIS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Financial and political developments in Germany were responsible for a sharp decline in the price of all grains. The canceling of wheat by that country of late is understood to have been on a large scale. Speculators who bought recently expecting an advance were forced to sell out at losses, and at the inside figures wheat was off 2@2½c, corn 1¾@2¾c, and oats 1¾@ 1¾c from the close of the previous day. Final trades were about the bottom, with net losses of 1¾@2½c on wheat, 1¾@2¼c on corn, 1¾@1¾c on oats, and 2¼c on rye. Lard was off 25@30c, and short ribs 52½@55c.

Grains closed at the inside figure of the week and showed considerable losses as compared with the previous week. Crop developments were favorable, and while the demand for cash wheat showed improvement the close was at losses of 5¾@7¾c. Corn dropped 1¾@2¾c, oats 2@2¼c, rye 4¼@5¾c. Provisions were also affected by the foreign situation and lard lost 56@57½c., and ribs $1.62@ 1.30.

Trade Ignores News.

The trade paid no attention to the general run of news, the bulk of which was of a bearish character. Crop reports from the northwest left little to be desired and weather conditions there were about what the spring wheat needed. No mention of rust was made during the day. Export demand continues very slow and while some hard winter was secured from the west by the seaboard it was to fill old sales.

Fairly general liquidation was in evidence in all grains, with numerous stop loss orders caught on the way down, the filling of which was responsible for the break to the extreme low figures of the day. In wheat there was good buying of September at 1.11.12 by commission houses and brokers with seaboard connections, but they were quickly filled. The late steadiness in all grains was due to week-end evening up.

Corn Reports Favorable.

Crop reports on corn have become much more favorable, due to recent rains and the weekly forecast suggested further moisture would be received shortly. Cash demand was fair with fresh receipts up ½@¾c as compared with September. No threshing of early oats has been done in the more northern sections of the belt so far.

Rye was dominated by the action of other grains and the German developments and broke sharply. Some hedging pressure was in evidence.

Scattered liquidation was on in July lard, with the support coming almost entirely from local shorts. Strength in hogs had little effect in view of the German situation, that country usually being the largest buyer of American hog products. Deliveries on July contracts were 350,000 lbs lard. CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export demand for grain at the seaboard was very poor. Seaboard interests sold wheat futures at Chicago early, presumably reflecting further cancellations. German cables brought offers to cancel corn, oats, and barley. Charters were made for 450,000 bu oats to Genoa and Naples, reflecting recent business. Late Friday Italy took 500,000 bu durum wheat for September-December shipment.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago were 25,000 bu wheat, 120,000 bu corn and 120,000 bu oats. Minneapolis sold 100,000 bu wheat to eastern mills. Deliveries on July contracts aggregated 38,000 bu wheat, 370,000 bu corn, 207,000 bu oats, and 25,000 bu rye. Charters were made for 600,000 bu corn to Buffalo and Georgia Bay at 2¼@2¼c.

Cash wheat at Chicago firm as compared with July. No. 2 sold at 2¢@2½c and No. 2 hard at 2@3c over. Receipts 50 cars. Outside markets weakened with futures. St. Louis was off 3@4c; Kansas City, 1@3c, and Omaha, 1c.

Offerings of cash corn sold readily with the basis ½@¾c better as compared with September. No. 2 mixed, 1¾@2c, and yellow and white, 1@1¾c under. Receipts 271 cars. Outside markets, ½@1½c lower.

Cash oats closed 1@1½c lower with receipts 105 cars. No. 2 white brought 2@3c over and No. 3 white ½@1c over July.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

"Prospects are that the government report will suggest a spring wheat crop of around 250,000,000 bu," said P. S. Goodman of Clement, Curtis & Co., in reviewing crop conditions. "This will be materially raised should the crop escape rust damage. The Pacific northwest has a poor crop and beyond improvement. With the falldown in winter wheat the total yield this season will not exceed last year's at least and may fall below. Corn crop is just fair. In the southern part of the country the crop is poor in growth and little or no improvement can be expected."

Burton Hungerford wired Logan & Bryan from Aberdeen, S. D.: "From present indications spring wheat crop of South Dakota should make average yield of around 12 bu per acre, suggesting 32,000,000 to 33,000,000 bu for the state. Rye harvest quite general. Crop should average 18 bu per acre, indicated crop 5,000,000 bu or more. Corn generally good. Oats very uneven, but weather good for them."

In his report to Jackson Bros. & Co. from Parko, N. D., R. W. Kinyon said: "S. West of Herman spotted; many poor fields; improves near Wheaton. From there north oats generally poor. Many short wheat fields. Crop improves north of Fairmont and from Christie here is very good. Harvesting of rye started; crop good. Corn has good stand. No trace of black rust."

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

German news is the all disturbing factor in the grain and provision markets, and while the latest reports yesterday suggested that there was a possibility of French and other interests in connection with American bankers getting together by the end of next week there is a feeling for the present that it is best to go slow on the buying side, and the disposition on the part of the rank and file is to press the selling side of grains. At the rate the sales are being pressed traders said it would not take long before the markets would be oversold and rallies result.

July wheat went to a premium of nearly 2c over the September yesterday and closed 1¾c above. It is said that local interests control the bulk of July contracts. Northwestern interests were good buyers of July here. Stocks are to show another big decrease, as shipments for the week were 824,000 bu and receipts only 351,000 bu. There is very little cash wheat here that is unsold or not under orders to go out.

The committee to investigate conditions of the grain trade and suggest improvements as authorized by the grain conference on Friday has been appointed by President Robert McDougal of the Chicago Board of Trade. The members are Joseph P. Griffin, former president of the Chicago Board of Trade; L. L. Winters and G. E. Marcy of Chicago, Frank M. Crosby, a Minneapolis miller; J. W. Shorthill, Omaha, of the Farmers' National Grain Dealers' association; A. E. Reynolds, Grain Dealers' National association, Toledo; and George E. Powell of the St. Louis Merchants' exchange.

There were 1,689 cars of all grains on track in Chicago on Friday morning, compared with 2,413 cars July 5. There were 610 cars awaiting inspection and orders and 1,079 cars at elevators. Unloaded, 563 cars; loaded for the day, 219 cars. The Northwestern elevator, with a capacity of around 8,000,000 bu, has resumed operations, and grain has been running there all week. This materially helps the handling of grain at Chicago.

Sentiment at the close was about as bearish on grains as it ever gets. There was evidence of leading interests supporting all grains on the breaks, but generally the buying was poor, while eastern interests were heavy sellers of September and December wheat, nearly all the big houses having orders.

Corn has been selling stubborn of late, but ran into stop loss orders yesterday, and December broke from 65c to 63⅝c within a few minutes, going 5c at a time. All the big commission houses had selling orders, and local traders, who have been friendly to the market all week, went out of their holdings on the break. The country sold old and new corn fairly.

July oats were down to 34½c. They sold during the day at the same price as a year ago. An operator figured that had a trader stayed long and turned over his holdings four times during the year he would have been out 18c a bu, the carrying charge having eaten up all profits.

Liquidation in July and September lard made one of the worst breaks of late. Provision specialists say domestic consumption of lard is liberal and expect a decline in the hog receipts.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Financial and political news from Germany was the disturbing factor, offsetting all the constructive influences and causing a decline, and closed at intermediate prices, with losses of 10 to 24 points. Japan bought 25,000 bales on the break. A rally at the last came from profit taking by shorts. Trade sentiment was mixed, but the disposition was to buy on the breaks.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The local unlisted securities market, with the exception of Ford of Canada, continued dull, and price changes in the majority of issues were confined to a fraction of a point.

A firm undertone characterized the general market, however, and the majority of the more active traders showed moderate gains. Ford of Canada advanced some 40 points to sales at 425, closing at 415 bid, 430 asked. Paige-Detroit at 21@21½ was off approximately 2 points. Stearns Motor was fractionally easier at 23¼@24½. Motor Wheel preferred improved a point to 14 bid, 14½ asked. McCord common was active and strong, improving from low sales at 6¾ to top sales at 8, then reacting to a close of 7¾@7⅞. Reo relinquished a point at 27½.

Firestone Tire and Rubber issues were higher, the common being quoted 66 bid, 69 asked; second preferred 98 bid, 99 asked. A good demand developed for Butler Brothers stock, advancing from 37½ to a close of 39. Burroughs Adding Machine continued strong and gained some 8 points to sales at 193. Little interest was shown in the Goodyear Tire and Rubber list, common being quoted 11@12; the preferred 35@36½; prior preference preferred 68@70. Beatrice Creamery common sold off $2 at 190@199.

Public utility issues were quiet and without spectacular features. American Gas and Electric common changed hands between 142 @145; preferred 42½@43½. Appalachian Power was fractionally improved at 19½@ 20. Sales of Middle West Utilities common ranged between 42@43; preferred, 74½@75½; prior lien preferred, 97@98. Northern States Power common was quoted 88@90; preferred, 90@95½, with few reported sales. Standard Gas and Electric common was traded in at 19¼ and the preferred between 48¼@ 49. United Light and Railway shares were slightly lower, the common closing at 54¼; 6 per cent preferred, 74½; 7 per cent participating preferred 78. Sales of the warrants ranged between 10¾@11.

DURUM WHEAT DECLINES.

Durum wheat for September delivery at Duluth led the decline yesterday and dropped about 6c per bu., closing at $1.04¾, or within ¼c of the bottom.

THE MODERN CHICAGO WOMAN doesn't let her husband take THE TRIBUNE with him when he goes to work. She keeps it for herself and reads it carefully. Her husband buys another at the station or on the corner.

If ever investors in Mortgage Bonds have shown a preference for the First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds recommended by Lackner, Butz and Company, it was during last month.

Not only did we more than double the business of a year ago June (the largest June in our career) but a large part of this increase came from the influx of funds of experienced, conservative investors who in increasing numbers recognize that—

"Recommended by Lackner Butz & Company means a safe investment"

This year, particularly, every conservative investor should have our list of 7% Bonds before investing a penny anywhere. Phone, call or write for latest circulars.

Bond Rates Defined

FORTY YEARS of experience in serving a conservative clientele of careful investors convinces us that "the margin of safety and security" offered by a bond is more important than the interest rate. We could offer good bonds at 7%—but we can offer better bonds at 6½%—the extra margin of security—to our shrewd clientele—means more than the ½ point in yield.

WE OFFER AS PROOF

$135,000 Loyola Vista Apartments

6½% 1st Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds
$100—$500—$1,000 Denominations
Maturing in 2 to 7 years.

LOYOLA Vista Apartments are located at Sheridan Road and Winthrop Avenue, opposite Loyola University. A fine new building, fronting 150 feet on the boulevard—containing 31 high class 4 and 5-room apartments—the margin of safety exceeds the bond issue by almost 100%. Ideal location and exceptional transportation insure easy rental—and a waiting list. Annual income conservatively estimated at $42,000. These bonds ready for delivery now.

Part of the recent sharp declines on mixed hogs was regained at the close this week when bulk moved at strong to 15c higher prices as compared with Friday. Packing grades were little changed, while top and average stands steady and 5c higher, at $11.00 and $10.15 respectively. Extreme range from common packers to choice light is widest in some time. Average cost shows 15c advance over previous week's close, though there were instances of 15@25c decline on packer mixed.

Cattle market throughout the week ruled on a strong to higher basis and on several sessions established new high tops for the year on both weighty cattle and yearlings. The former class outsold lighter weight steers, reaching a top of $10.30 Friday, while best yearlings sold at $10.20, Thursday. Eastern competition and export orders were largely responsible for the strong undertone. Butcher stock met fairly active outlet, and bulls and calves were in demand at the close.

Lambs Highest Since June 1.

Urgent orders after holiday forced lamb values 50c to $1.00 above a week ago, considering the lighter "sorts" and good outlet for common light offerings. Best arrivals late reached $14.00, as against an extreme top of $13.50 previous week, while bulk after midweek was above the $13.00 mark. Breeders were active competitors for strong desirable ewes and paid up to $11.50 for choice yearlings. Aged sheep supply was unusually small. Lamb prices are highest since early in June.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 45,000 hogs, and 16,000 sheep, as against 9,584 cattle, 47,869 hogs, and 13,605 sheep a week ago and 12,609 cattle, 40,625 hogs, and 17,577 sheep corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 150,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep, against 45,141 cattle, 145,242 hogs, and 83,598 sheep a year ago.

First Mortgage Chicago Real Estate Bonds

CHOICE JULY INVESTMENTS

In offering these Real Estate Bonds we call special attention to the fact that business property has not been subject to the great inflation of value which in recent years has affected some other classes of property. For this reason, the values shown below are not only conservative in themselves, but should tend to increase. We have marketed issues of this type to the amount of many millions of dollars with uniform satisfaction to our clients.

"How to Judge a Good Bond"

FOR a number of months we have been publishing a series of advertisements which deal with the various factors which enter into safe bond investment. Many of our customers and friends have requested us to reprint this series in book form for reference purposes.

Do you know—

What characterizes a good bond?
What secures a municipal bond?
The difference between being a bondholder and a stockholder?
What determines the marketability of a bond?
How bonds are regarded by bankers as collateral for loans?
The distinguishing features of industrial, railroad and municipal bonds?

Accordingly, we have grouped a series of twenty-four of these advertisements in an attractive booklet which we are distributing on request. For those who are experienced in investment it contains interesting facts regarding the various kinds of bond investment. To the less experienced investor it presents the fundamentals of bond investment in simple and attractive form.

We shall be very glad to send a copy without obligation.

FINANCIAL NOTES

With the railway managers, labor board and union heads diligently attempting to ascertain who is responsible for the continuation of the shopmen's strike, the only new phase of the impasse which caught the attention of Wall street today was the report that a large volume of express traffic was being held up on various lines. As a general rule, the freight has been moving fairly regularly, traffic executives state, with only such interruptions as a delay in putting cars on the lines would entail. Passenger traffic, on the other hand, is understood to be entirely unaffected by the strike and because express travels via the passenger trains the financial district expressed considerable surprise that any delays should be looming up. It is believed that shipping by express has been accelerated and this temporary congestion is held by many executives to be the cause of the slow movement of certain traffic.

As a result of the encroachment of salt water in the Toteco-Cerro Azul oil fields in Mexico earlier in the week, officials of the Mexican Seaboard Oil company, the company which appears to have suffered most as a result of the invasion, have issued orders to keep production down to 75,000 barrels daily, until further notice in order that the life of the field may be lengthened. This company, according to a statement issued today, produced 140,548 barrels of crude on July 6, against 129,000 on July 5, and 134,000 on July 3. Efforts are being made to bring about an agreement among other Mexican companies to curtail output for the time being.

Leaders in the public utilities field are watching with keen attention the present position of Montana Power in the hope that facts may give some inkling of the situation which will face the directors when they meet on Aug. 25 for action on the dividend. In certain quarters of Wall street reports are current that the present $3 annual rate will be increased to the former $5 rate, a rumor which is attributed to the increased earnings of the company resulting from the reopening of copper mines throughout the state of Montana, and a general increase in other business.

Although the movement has not been in effect long enough, or in sufficient volume, to make a lasting impression on the market for money, nevertheless the banks here and the largest institutions of some of the other centers which act as depositories for interior institutions are commencing to feel the call for funds. It has produced little more than irregularity in the call market, thus far, but if the movement develops into a strong one, will, of course, be reflected in time money, too. Improving business conditions in some of the districts which have been particularly backward is the cause of the present outswing.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending July 5 by 199 banks in 24 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $927,844,000, compared with $904,466,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $927,844,000, compared with $655,469,000 for the corresponding week last year.

Five hundred stockholders of the United States Leather corporation have instructed attorneys to begin civil and criminal proceedings against E. B. Cassatt of Cleveland, promoter of the corporation and president of one of its subsidiaries. Examinations of the corporation's books, it was said, disclosed that Cassatt had received $492,000 from the sale of stock, of which only $130,000 appears to exist in live assets.

Northern Pacific directors call the attention of holders of Northern Pacific-Great Northern Pacific joint 6's to the fact that the last day on which the bonds may be converted into Northern Pacific refunding and improvement 6's is July 12. The joint bonds have been called for redemption at 103½ and accrued interest on July 27, but privilege of conversion expires at the close of business July 12.

Directors of the Mutual Oil company have voted to increase the capital stock from $15,000,000 to $30,000,000. A special meeting of the stockholders will be held about the middle of the month to act on the proposal. Union Oil company of California declared an extra dividend of $1 a share. Salt Creek Producers association declared a quarterly dividend of 20 cents a share, payable Aug. 1, to stock of record July 15. Previously, the company declared an extra dividend of 10 cents a share. Pacific Oil's annual report shows that during the last year the company has acquired an additional 29,630 shares of Associated Oil, making its total holdings 230,320 shares, or 57.93 per cent of the total outstanding.

During June the United Verde Extension Copper company produced 2,941,034 pounds of copper. There were 2,140,671 pounds of copper produced by the Mother Lode Coalition Mine company during the month of June, compared with 2,104,402 pounds during May. The Michigan Copper Mining company has called an assessment of $1 a share on the stock, payable on Aug. 1 by stockholders of record July 31.

A report that nearly 40 per cent of all sales of Willys-Overland corporation in May were made to buyers who had not previously owned cars is taken as an indication that the saturation point in automobiles is still far away.

Interborough officials say that deposits of securities of the Manhattan Railway, under the Interborough-Manhattan readjustment project have been made in sufficient volume to warrant operation of the plan before Aug. 1.

The first hearing of the federal trade commission on the merger of the Midvale, Republic and Inland Steel companies will be held July 19. The department of justice is expected to make a report to the senate on July 10.

The department of commerce reports that the imports of iron and steel to the United States during May amounted to 23,093 tons, 18,382 in April, 14,170 in March and 13,383 tons in January. A monthly average of imports for 1921 was 5,500 tons.

The indicated consumption of sugar in the United States for the first six months of 1922 amounted to 2,781,218 tons or at an annual rate of over 5,500,000 tons.

The Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation has been awarded contracts for the construction of the freight ships for the two Eastern Steamship lines.

Protect Your Investments.

The average American citizen is quick to resent any aggression on his personal rights. If his home is broken into or his property trespassed upon or in any way injured, he will immediately seek reparation through any means at his disposal. His property represents an investment and he must look after it and protect it so that its value may not be impaired. When it comes to investments in securities, however, the same citizen who is ready to protect his real and personal property seems strangely apathetic when injury to his investments is done or threatened. Take, for instance, the holders of railroad securities. There are billions of dollars' worth of railroad securities in the hands of the public. If these securities are to afford safety of principal and assure a reasonable return to their holders, the railroads must be allowed to operate at a fair profit. In July, 1920, the interstate commerce commission placed a valuation of $18,900,000,000 upon the property investment of the railroads, against a book value of over $20,000,000,000. At the same time the commission decided that the roads should be allowed earnings equal to 6 per cent on this property investment, which would mean $1,134,000,000 a year. How is this working out? The roads have not yet been able to earn anything like that amount. In 1921 they earned only 3.31 per cent on property valuation as established by the commission and for the four months ended April 30, 1922, they earned only 4.36 per cent on such value. Despite this showing and the fact that the commission has just put into effect a new decrease in freight rates, which may be expected to further curtail the gross earnings of the roads, great opposition was encountered by the roads against their carrying into effect a decrease in pay of certain employés authorized by a ruling of the United States Railroad Labor Board. The people, by act of congress approved by the President, established this board as a government tribunal empowered to fix rules and wages for railway employés, and its decisions and rulings are arrived at after evidence and arguments in support of their mutual claims have been given by representatives of both the roads and their employés. The opposition to the carrying out of this board's ruling threatened to cripple the rail transportation of the country, which not only would cause loss to shippers and merchants and suffering to the public in general, but would jeopardize the safety of, and reduce the income from a vast amount of railroad securities held by the public. How are railroads to pay interest and dividends to holders of their securities if they are not allowed to earn them—if they are ordered to reduce their income, but are not permitted to reduce expenses?

These things should be considered by holders of railroad securities who are depending for all or part of their income on the return from these securities. They should protect their investments. They should not allow apathy, misplaced sympathy, or sentimentality to cloud the issue or to prevent their using every legitimate means in their power to safeguard their investments by opposing anything that tends to prevent the roads from making reasonable earnings in a fair and equitable way. It is as important to protect your investments as to protect your property.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $505,500,000, a decline of $43,300,000 from the preceding week, due to the fact that last week contained the Fourth of July holiday, but a gain of $92,200,000 over the corresponding week in 1921. Balances last week totaled $50,000,000, an increase of $14,300,000 over the preceding week and also a gain of $24,500,000 over the corresponding week in 1921. HOLDS TIME RIPE FOR U. S. TO GET TRADE IN BRAZIL

"Brazil and the whole of South America was never more receptive to American-made goods than they are today," states Leon N. Bensabot of Rio Janiero. He is in the United States arranging for exhibits of American products at the Brazilian International Centennial exposition to be held in Rio Janiero from September until March, 1923. Mr. Bensabot, a former Chicagoan, has been director of the Paul J. Christoph company, one of the largest of American manufacturers' distributors in Pan-America, for fifteen years.

"Brazil has suffered severely in the last three years due to the slump in the coffee market and the depreciation of her currency," said Mr. Bensabot, "but business conditions are rapidly growing brighter, as is indicated by the increasing demand for importations. Our chief lines are all kinds of office supplies and American drugs and patent medicines. Many of these are now as well known in Brazil as in Chicago. The Brazilian business man wants all the newest devices in office novelties. He is becoming more and more American in all his methods."

Mr. Bensabot has contracted for several thousand feet of exhibit space in the million-dollar exhibition building the United States is erecting. Most of the lines shown will be Chicago-made, he states. "If there is any question on the relative merits of products seeking a South American market, I always favor Chicago goods. I hope to rouse Chicago manufacturers to the many advantages of South American trade before I go back."

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

COPYRIGHT: 1922, BY FAIRCHILD NEWS SERVICE.

BERLIN.—The German trade crisis is developing rapidly. Most manufacturers have announced their refusal to accept or deliver orders pending improvement or stabilization of the mark exchange. The index number of textile prices has increased 3,000 points in one week. Industrial leaders are halting developments of all foreign enterprises, Hugo Stinnes among them.

LONDON.—British piece goods manufacturers complain that the American buyers do not come to purchase, but to "crib" ideas. Some firms refuse to see American buyers.

NEW YORK.—Cloak and suit manufacturers see no cause for alarm over the general strike called for July 18 to compel complete unionization of the market. It is rumored that employers of union labor are actually pleased, hoping that the strike will wipe out non-union, low price shops.

YOKOHAMA.—Yokohama raw silk shipments to America from July 1, 1921, to June 30, 1922, were greater than for any similar period during the last five years, according to statistics compiled here. They comprised 279,200 bales, as compared with 162,554 bales for 1920-1921.

NEW YORK.—Despite the present dullness in the raw fur market, an important dealer contends he could sell out his entire stock in a few days if he would give December dating to new firms. At present, however, he is opposed to opening new credits with small firms.

BELFAST.—Linen trade with the United States is featureless. American buyers here are constantly repeating that they "expect lower prices." The general price situation, however, is firm.

PHILADELPHIA.—The knit goods market regards hosiery of silk and wool more of a gamble for fall than any other variety. It is feared that there are more cheaper "heathers" on the market than can be profitably absorbed by retail distributors.

PHILADELPHIA.—Winter underwear buying still is greatly restricted. It is believed here that the average jobber is shy of goods. Jobbers retort that they are still more shy of present prices.

CHEMNITZ.—Knit goods manufacturers place the blame for slackened business on the uncertainty of the United States tariff. Three-fourths of their entire output formerly went to America. Little hope is seen for other markets to replace America, if the tariff rates are unfavorable.

NEW YORK.—Blouse manufacturers believe that retailers are in better position to buy for fall than they have been for several seasons. Retail stocks are low, they say, and the consumer demand has increased during the last few weeks.

PHILADELPHIA.—Some jobbers are asking for forward deliveries of full fashioned silk hosiery due in July or August. The retail trade is calling for shipments. With the mills bidding for direct retail trade, these jobbers are finding difficulty in holding their customers without sufficient stock.

BELFAST.—The handkerchief business shows marked improvement during the last week. The lines most in demand are colored woven border effects, and most manufacturers are booked up on these goods until the end of the year.

LEIPZIG.—Leopold Apfel, insolvent fur house, has resumed business under supervision of the court and in participation with the creditors' committee. Present dullness of the market is hindering recovery of the firm.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 8.—COTTONSEED OIL closed at net losses of 17 to 24 points. The heaviness displayed in hog products and grain and more favorable news from the south induced rather general selling. Sales, 10,000 barrels. Prime crude nominal. Prime summer yellow spot, $10.05@11.00; July, $10.65; September, $10.57; December, $8.58—all bid.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, July 8.—Bar silver, 36¼d per ounce. Money, 1½ per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, 2@2¼ per cent; three months bills, 2¼ per cent.

Harbor View Apartments as they will appear when completed

An Investment for Your July Funds in Choice Real Estate Bonds

Among the many attractive issues of first mortgage real estate 7% gold bonds, which are being offered at this investment season of the year, by the American Bond & Mortgage Company, is a $900,000 Chicago issue on the Harbor View Apartments.

These apartments are to be erected at 3318-3326 Sheridan Road. This location is one of the finest on the North Shore, having an unobstructed and permanent view of Lincoln Park, Yacht Harbor, and Lake Michigan.

The building will be of fireproof steel and reinforced concrete. It will be ten stories high with terra cotta and press brick trim. The appraised valuation of the security is $1,500,000. The annual income is estimated at over three times the heaviest annual interest charge.

Our new booklet "Investment Opportunities" gives detailed information, not only about this attractive 7% bond issue, but others in Chicago, New York, Washington, Detroit, and elsewhere equally attractive. Send for your copy today.

The information contained in this advertisement, although not guaranteed, has been obtained from sources, which we believe insure its accuracy. The bonds are offered subject to prior sale, and when, as, and if issued and received by us.

Security and Good Interest
For Your July Investment

THE SAFE GUIDE in investing money is the experience and reputation of the House you deal with, and we leave it to your judgment whether our eighty-seven years of experience do not entitle this House to first consideration in making your July investments. Every bond we ever sold has kept each and every dollar invested in it safe, every penny of interest has been promptly paid when due. So you owe it to yourself at least to investigate our offerings before investing. The issues we illustrate here deserve your confidence and the yield —7%—is the highest you can get with such safety. These bonds are the logical investment for your July savings and surplus and we recommend them because they will give you satisfaction.

$550,000 7% Bonds—Evanston

SECURITY: The Main Street Block and land, 175 feet on Main Street by 70 on Hinman Ave. Fireproof building to contain 9 stores and 130 1-room suites.

EARNINGS: Conservatively estimated at $168,000 or over four times the greatest annual bond interest.

LOCATION: One of the best corners in the Main Street Business District, which is surrounded by high grade apartments, residences, churches and schools. Transportation is equal to the very finest.

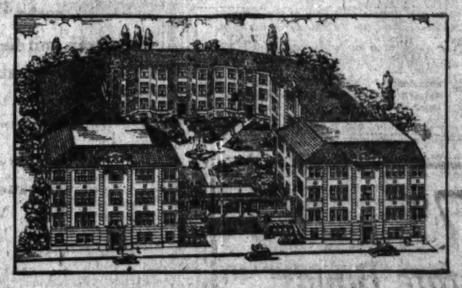
Price: Par and Accrued Interest to Net 7%. 4% Federal Income Tax Paid for the Investor.

$200,000 7's—North Edgewater

SECURITY: A First Mortgage on the Glyndale Apartments and ground at 6035 to 6045 Winthrop Avenue, which will contain 42 apartments of 2, 3 and 4 rooms each.

EARNINGS: Estimated at $45,000 per year.

4% Federal Income Tax Paid for Bondholders. Price: Par and Accrued Interest Netting 7%.



$300,000 North Shore Apartments

SECURITY: The Fountain Plaza Apartments in Evanston, on Hinman Avenue near Main Street. To contain 42 apartments surrounding a court of extraordinary size. Modern suites of 3, 4 and 5 rooms.

EARNINGS: The annual rental income is estimated at $70,000—ample to meet both interest and principal.

LOCATION: Beautiful Hinman Avenue, with the advantages of the Main Street Business Section at hand. Excellent transportation—the best on the entire North Shore. A very desirable place to live.

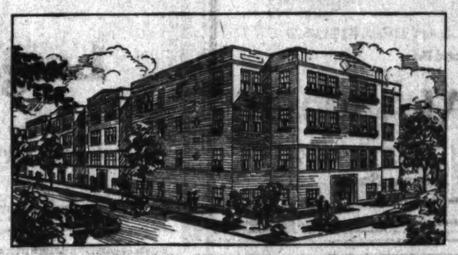
Price: Par and Accrued Interest to Net 7%. 4% Federal Income Tax Paid for the Investor.

$175,000 West Ravenswood 7's

SECURITY: A First Mortgage on a 3-story and basement store and apartment building and also on a 3 story court apartment building, and the ground at Kedzie and Sunnyside Avenues.

EARNINGS: $48,000, or about four times the greatest annual bond interest.

Diversified sources of income make this issue especially attractive. Price: Par and Interest.



$85,000 Washington Blvd. 7%

SECURITY: Washington Boulevard Arms Apartments, fronting 50 feet on Washington and 180 on Lamon Avenue. Contains 3 5-room and 18 4-room suites. These apartments are very livable, the living and dining rooms averaging about 12x19 and the chambers about 11x13 feet.

INCOME: We estimate the annual rental of these apartments at $26,000, or over four times the bond interest before any of these bonds mature.

We recommend these bonds as a completely safe investment. Offered at par and accrued interest in convenient denominations of $1,000, $500 and $250.

THESE FIRST MORTGAGE 7% BONDS are illustrated and explained in our July Booklet of Investment Offerings. Sold on easy payments if desired, 10% down, 10% a month. This Booklet will help you to make safe, profitable, first class investments.

Exceptionally Low Cost by Building Now

Today, when all building costs are low, greater savings are effected in Truscon Standard Buildings than in other constructions. In fact these all-steel buildings are at exceptionally low prices, due to the recent rock-bottom cost of steel.

1. Lower first cost is only one of the definite savings effected by Truscon Standard Buildings.

2. Their quick erection with minimum labor starts your building earnings promptly.

3. Their low cost reduces interest charges and taxes; their permanence saves on insurance and upkeep.

4. Easily dismantled, they are re-erected in new locations without loss.

Fireproof, daylighted, well ventilated, Truscon Standard Buildings make ideal factories, warehouses, foundries, service garages, filling stations, shops, etc. They are furnished in all sizes, with pitched, monitor or sawtooth roof.

Buy Them Now at Rock-bottom Prices. Write or Phone for Information, Catalog, etc.

7½% Investigate Beak Plan Bonds

Beak Plan Bonds are secured by absolute first mortgages on land and buildings in Chicago which are completed and occupied.

This makes it easy for you to investigate, as the security can be seen and examined at any time.

Our valuations are conservative, and the fact that nearly all the buildings which are security for Beak Plan Bonds are managed and rented by our organization is an additional protection to the bondholder.

Send for circular describing and illustrating our latest loans yielding 7½%. Six attractive issues to choose from

The property is located in one of the most desirable residential districts of the entire North Side, two blocks west of Sheridan Road and only four blocks from the lake.

The building will contain 54 apartments arranged in units of from two to six rooms each. Interior finish will be of birch and white maple. The apartments will be equipped with all modern conveniences. Bathrooms will have built-in tubs and tiled walls.

Land and building have been conservatively appraised at $380,000, or twice the amount of this bond issue. It is estimated that the annual income from rentals will be over three times the greatest interest charges.

The building is now in course of construction and its completion is guaranteed by us. The bonds are protected by our usual safeguards including Chicago Title & Trust Guarantee Policy.

We recommend these bonds as an exceptionally safe and conservative investment for your July funds.

The New York Times.

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—In today's stock market there was a disposition to give greater heed to the course of events abroad, particularly in Germany, and as further unfavorable news developed prices in all quarters of the market were reactionary.

There was a natural desire on the part of professional traders to even up commitments over the week-end in the belief that a political crisis as well as an economic one might develop in Germany. There was no urgent selling, but quiet pressure was exerted from the start of trading and few stocks were able to close the day with gains. The railroad sales were slightly reactionary and some of the more speculative industrials dipped down rather sharply. So far as domestic news was concerned, the day was without any disturbing factors.

Foreign Exchange Unsettled.

The foreign exchange market was unsettled, with German marks making a new low net French francs dropping temporarily under their close of the preceding day. The further decline in marks attracted the greatest attention, being coupled with news that Germany would ask for a moratorium on the next reparations payment. The continued weakness in francs was again linked up with the German situation despite the fact that undoubtedly the greater portion of the decline from the year's high has been a result not of doubt over reparations, but rather a product of heavier imports.

One of the interesting developments today had to do with the receipt of $2,500,000 for account of the British treasury which was deposited with J. P. Morgan and company. This is the first gold that has arrived from this quarter in many a month and it is understood that an amount equal to that received today is in process of shipment. This gold, it appears, is to be used as a payment on interest debt.

Bank Statement Favorable.

An increase of $21,240,000 in the surplus reserves of the New York clearing-house banks is shown in the weekly statement of actual condition made public today. Reserves in excess of legal requirements now stand at $37,907,490. Loans show a decrease of $13,353,000 and deposits are about $31,000,000 less than last week. Government deposits show a decrease of about $3,500,000. Details of the statement with comparisons follow:

RAILROAD NOTES

Authority was granted the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad yesterday by the interstate commerce commission to guarantee payment of the interest and principal of $8,055,000 in equipment trust certificates. The funds from this sale of the issue will complete payment on 6,500 new freight cars.

Authorization by the commission gave the New York, New Haven and Hartford permission to issue $5,500,000 in refunding mortgage bonds, to be pledged with the treasury as security for loans made by the government to the road.

Last week's traffic report shows a good movement of general merchandise, liberal shipments of building material, an enlarging tonnage of steel and iron and a moderate movement of grain and grain products. The scarcity of coal in some sections is becoming more pronounced and is beginning to interfere with industry to some extent. There has been some disposition to hasten shipments of many commodities for fear of a railroad strike.

THROWING AWAY Spark Plugs is throwing money away

Disbrow
EXCHANGE
Spark Plug
The only plug that has a cash value when worn out.

DISBROW EXCHANGE Spark Plug Service Saves You This Money

When you throw away a worn-out ordinary spark plug you get nothing for it. It is valueless. You did not get a full dollar's worth of service out of it.

When you buy a Disbrow you cut down spark plug cost. Pay a dollar for one. When it wears out you don't throw it away. Take it to any Disbrow dealer and fifty cents gets a brand new one. That is—when it is worn out you get the same exchange value you did on the first Disbrow you bought.

And you get real service out of Disbrow exchange spark plugs, too. They are built for long life—none bettter—famous "775" porcelain, perfectly insulated. Best chrome wire firing points—resist the highest temperature. Double gaskets—can't leak. Finest steel shell.

Disbrow Spark Plug Insurance Will Save You Money, Too.

Get Your Money's Worth

DRIVE TODAY TO THE DEALER NEAREST YOU

And Have Your Motor Equipped With These Waste-Saving Disbrow Exchange Plugs.

Fleet Owners

Buy the Disbrow Service for your salesmen's cars, trucks, delivery cars. Don't have a barrel or a box of old plugs lying around your garage, a constant reminder of wasted money. Disbrow Service saves this waste. By turning in your old Disbrow plugs you get new ones at a big saving. Write or phone Victory 0026.

WHEN THESE COMELY TRIPLETS WERE GRADUATED as members of the same class of the Punxsutawney, Pa., high school, the teachers breathed sighs of relief. Lillian, Louisa, and Laura Buisset look so much alike that even in giving out their diplomas the school officials confused one with the other. (Photograph from Fotograms.)

ATTENTION! THESE TWO LIVELY YOUNGSTERS came all the way from Nashville, Tenn., to pay their respects to the President and attend a veterans' reunion at Richmond, Va. They are Lieut. J. M. Long, right, and Sergt. J. F. Giles. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

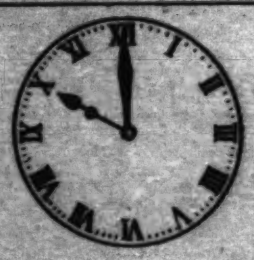
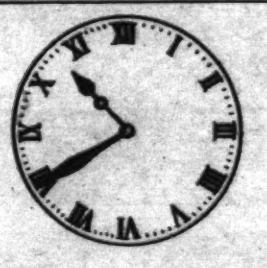
A clay of such amazing powers no less than a dozen imitations have sprung into being; applied in a moment; starts its work in ten minutes; and—

"Father was amazed at the great change."

—In forty minutes, wiped away, the clay has forced the clarity and color of youth to any human skin on which it is applied. A new triumph of dermatology





Astounding Beauty Clay Makes a New Skin in 40 Minutes!

Here is the Greatest News About Complexion Ever Brought to America. Even the Dullest Skin Yields to the Simple But Wonderful Method Used Abroad.

By MARTHA RYERSON

I AM going to tell you how a pleasure trip to Sunny Wales resulted in learning a real beauty secret. It is a secret of Mother Earth's; a natural, normal and gloriously swift way to end forever an unlovely complexion. I went to Wales with the worst skin a girl could have; one afternoon I left it in the hills! I exchanged it for one of soft texture and full of color. And this is how:

Except that I can now let you prove it for yourself, I would never tell the story—a story my own father found it hard to believe!

Hardest of all to believe is this; the transformation took just forty minutes! Here are the facts:

About the first thing one notices in this southern English province, is the uniformly beautiful complexions. The lowliest maid—and her mother, too—has a radiantly beautiful skin. Mine, lacking lustre and color, with impurities, nothing seemed to eradicate or even hide, was horribly conspicuous.

It was a happy thought that took a most unhappy girl on a long walk through the hills one afternoon. I had stopped at the apothecary's to replenish my cosmetic—to find it was unknown. They did not have even a cold cream. The irony of it! In a land where beauty of face was in evidence at every turn—the women used no beautifiers! Do you wonder "I took to the hills?" I didn't want to see another peaches-and-creamy complexion that day. But I did.

At a house where I paused for a drink from the spring, I stepped back in surprise when the young woman straightened-up to greet me. Her face was covered with mud. I recognized the peculiar gray clay of that section; very fine, sleek, smooth clay it was. Seeing my surprise, the girl smiled and said, "Madam does not clay?" I admitted I did not!

I Decide to "Clay"

In a moment, she wet the clay which had dried on her face and neck, wiped it away, and stood in all the glory of a perfect complexion. I think I shall never again envy another as I did that stolid maiden of the hills. Her features were not pretty; they did not need to be. For no woman ever will have a more gorgeous skin. She explained that this amazing clay treatment did it. The natives made a weekly habit of "claying" the skin, quite as one cares regularly for the hair.

I was easily persuaded to try it. Had I not done ridiculous things in beauty parlors where many could see my plight? We tucked a towel over my blouse, and from the spring's bed she took the soft, soothing clay and applied it.

As we sat and talked, the clay dried. Soon I experienced the most delightful tingling in every facial pore; the impurities were being literally pulled out. Half an hour more, and we removed the clay mask. Hopeful, but still skeptical, I followed into the tiny house to glimpse myself in a mirror.

My blemishes were gone!

I fairly glowed with color that spread down the neck to the shoulders. My cheeks were so downy soft, I felt them a hundred times on the way home. Father's surprised look when we met in the garden of the little inn later that afternoon was the most genuine compliment a women ever received. In a basket I had two crocks of the precious clay. I thought father's questions would never end; where did I find it; could I take him to the spot; what was its action, and reaction, and lots else I didn't know. Father is a chemist.

Suddenly it dawned on me. He wanted to unearth the secret of that clay's amazing properties, and take it to America! For two weeks we stayed on, he worked all day at his "mudpies" as I called them. Back home at last in Chicago, he worked many weeks more. He experimented on me, and on all my girl friends. At last, using the natural Welsh clay as a base, he produced a compound as miraculous in its effect—only ten times more smooth and pure than the clay used by the peasants abroad.

Anyone May Now Have This Wonderful Clay

News of the wonders performed by this clay has brought thousands of requests for it. Women everywhere (and men too, by the way) are now supplied Forty Minute Clay. The laboratory where it is compounded sends it direct to the user. A jar is five dollars, but I have yet to hear of anyone who did not regard it as worth several times that amount. For mind, in over six hundred test cases, it did not once fail. It seems to work on all ages, and regardless of how pimpled, clogged or dull the skin may be.

The application is readily made by anybody, and the changes brought about in less than an hour will cause open-mouthed astonishment. I know.

When I see a woman now, with a coarse-textured skin that mars the whole effect of her otherwise dainty care of self, it is all I can do to refrain from speaking of this natural, perfectly simple way to bring a skin and color such as Nature meant us to have—and has given us the way to have. It is so healthful to use, it cannot grow hair (in fact, its action checks that undesirable downy growth) and it keeps pores their normal size because it is laid on and not rubbed in.

Keep your skin pores clean, open, tingling with life! My father has made you a remarkable offer in the next column. Read carefully:

NEW SHIPMENTS FROM ABROAD!

FREE DISTRIBUTION OF $5.00 JARS EXTENDED

To the public: My first offer of full-sized jars without profit exhausted my small stock of imported clay. But we have just received more, imported direct from the British Isles.

Therefore, I resume for a time the offer of a full $5 jar without any laboratory charge. You may have one jar only for the bare cost of getting it in your hands! The expenses of compounding, refining, analyzing, sterilizing, packing and shipping in large quantity has been figured down to $1.87 per jar, plus postage.

Even this small sum of $1.87 is not really a payment—regard it as a deposit, which we we will return at once if you are not satisfied this miracle clay is all claimed.

Send no money, please, but pay when postman delivers. Just $1.87 plus postage. Or, if handier to receive jar prepaid, enclose $2; same guarantee holds good.

THE CENTURY CHEMISTS, Dept. 9
Century Building, Chicago:

I accept your "No Profit" offer. Please send me a full-sized, regular $5.00 jar of Forty Minute Beauty Clay at the net laboratory cost price of $1.87, plus postage, which I will pay postman on delivery. My money back unless only one application proves completely satisfactory.

SURRENDERING THE COLORS was a picturesque ceremony that accompanied the disbanding of the famous southern Irish regiments following the launching of the Irish Free State. The disbanded regiments are the Royal Irish regiment, the Connaught Rangers, the South Irish Horse, the Prince of Wales' Leinster regiment, the Royal Munster Fusileers, and the Royal Dublin Fusileers. In the picture the standard bearers are on their way to Dublin castle to turn over the colors.

Freshly manicured nails, every day, without a moment's buffing

For lasting loveliness, simply brush the nails with Glazo

For the cuticle, this dainty new Massage

Now you can have freshly manicured nails every day, without daily bother with pastes, powder, and buffer.

Simply brush your nails lightly once or twice a week with Glazo, the smart new liquid polish. No buffing is necessary, and for five to seven days your nails will have the beautiful, glowing lustre which Good Society demands.

Have Glazo applied after a professional manicure to protect the nails and prolong their gloss.

Glazo Cuticle Massage, used with your orange stick, quickly softens and perfects the cuticle, removes stain from under the nail, and corrects the harmful effects of harsh acids or cutting.

Just these two items, obtainable at any toilet counter, will give you a perfect, week-long manicure in five brief minutes. Ask for them today.

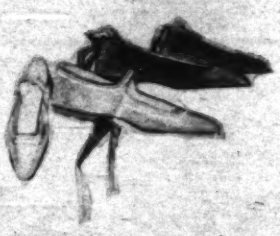
BEACH KICKS

THE SOLES ARE ON TO STAY

BEACH KICKS are smart—a glance assures you of that—they have real low heels and their soles are made all in one piece and stitched to the uppers just like your street shoes.



Think of it! You can't kick the soles off Beach Kicks no matter how much you walk or swim in them.

Beach Kick styles are very smart—strap pumps, ribbon-laced sandals, or high-laced shoes in colors to match or contrast with your bathing costume.

Nearly all the best stores sell them—if you don't find them at the first shop, try again, and be sure to find the name on the sole before you buy.

Instant Beauty for Everyone Says VIOLA DANA

Just Make This Simple Test

"I am often asked how I keep my complexion so fresh looking," says Viola Dana, the Screen Star. "It's a simple process for anyone to have a smooth, velvety, rosy-white complexion and unwrinkled skin if they will devote just a little time in caring for it.

"To have a clear, healthy skin, cleanliness is absolutely necessary. For this purpose I use a good cleansing cream (Lieka cold cream I have found to be the best). I then bathe my face with warm water, rinse with cold, dry thoroughly and apply Derwillo, a simple toilet preparation."

This marvelous preparation instantly beautifies the complexion and gives anyone a more youthful appearance. You can form no idea what a wonderful effect it has upon the skin until you test it. Here is the best way: Put it on one side of your face, then look in your mirror and note the difference. You will need no further argument to convince you that there is nothing like it for beautifying purposes.

The instant results it gives is the reason for its popularity with actresses and discriminating women who realize the value of a rosy-white, smooth, clear complexion.

Derwillo is especially recommended for dark, sallow skin, tan, shiny nose, blackheads, coarse pores and numerous other facial blemishes. Many use it in preference to face powders or all other beautifiers, as it is more lifelike. Perspiration does not affect it, therefore it stays on better than face powder, does not rub off on clothing and its use cannot be detected.

It is absolutely harmless even on the most delicate skin and will not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. Over one million are now using it. Now that short sleeves are in vogue you will want to beautify your hands and arms. There is nothing like Derwillo for this purpose. It comes in three shades—flesh, white and brunette. If you want a complexion which will attract favorable comment everywhere, just give Derwillo a trial and you are sure to be delighted. Do not accept substitutes, then you will not be disappointed, as there is nothing "just as good," "better" or "just like it."

Viola Dana

NOTE—Here is a fair, honest proposition by the druggists and department stores of this city. Get a bottle of Derwillo from any toilet counter, give it a trial for a few days and if you don't like it take it back and get your money. Could anything be fairer? It is sold by all up-to-date druggists.

Corns

Are Easily Ended

It's as simple as A B C to rid yourself of painful corns. Apply 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It" to any aching corn. With the first contact of corn and liquid all pain instantly disappears and the corn dies without ever waking up again. Soon it is only a loose piece of shriveled skin that is easily peeled off with the fingers.

Could anything be more sensible? Can any so-called corn "treatment" or "remedy" compare with "Gets-It" in simplicity and efficiency?

At all druggists—everywhere. The genuine costs only a trifle—no more than imitations.

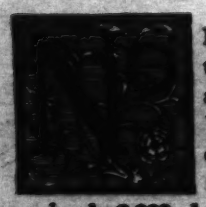
Every week 1,000 people write to Dr. Evans on How to Keep Well



PHYSICIAN in history has ever reached as many people as Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of The Tribune. On one day alone he received 2,000 letters from interested readers. He has answered in a single day 300 letters—all on different problems of health and hygiene, and every one with a personal touch that showed his careful consideration of each case. In a year, he receives about 52,000 letters and answers an average of 100 a day—more than 35,000 replies a year.

OF HIS life to the present time, one-half has been lived in the country and small towns, and the other half in the city.

ABOUT one-half of his life has been spent in the south and the other half in the north.

HE graduated first from an agricultural college.

THEN from medical school.

A COUNTRY doctor for five years.

THEN a city doctor.

FOR 31 years continuously a lecturer in a medical college.

FOUR years as health commissioner of Chicago.

ONE year as a member of the state health department.

HEALTH editor of The Tribune for eleven years.

NOW teaching medicine to the sons of his old medical students.

NOW advising mothers whose mothers asked for advice from his column.

DR. EVANS brings together an admirable mixture of humor, common sense, knowledge and experience in writing his daily column. It is not only helpful and informative but it is extremely interesting as well.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN PRIZES has been offered to architects by The Tribune for a design for its new home, destined to be the world's most beautiful building. Readers also are submitting their views and the pictures on this page are part of a series they are considering. Shall The Tribune pattern its new home after any of these buildings? Letters should be addressed to the architectural editor.

Cool and comfortable—

trim and summery

COOL, comfortable, and so good looking! That is the reason why Keds are so popular. Give your feet perfect freedom, and yet know that you look trim and well shod!

Keds are made for everybody. There are numerous models for many purposes, high shoes, low shoes, from the sturdy reinforced models for active boys to light, trim shoes for girls and women. Everyone is wearing Keds this season.

You will want to be sure that you get real Keds. The name is on every pair. They are made of firm, finely woven canvas. The soles are of tough durable rubber. The lasts are well-shaped—the details of finishing are done with skill learned by years of experience.

Your dealer will be glad to show you models for all the family. If he hasn't the kind you wish, he will get them for you.

But remember—Keds are made only by the United States Rubber Company. If the name Keds isn't on the shoes they aren't real Keds.

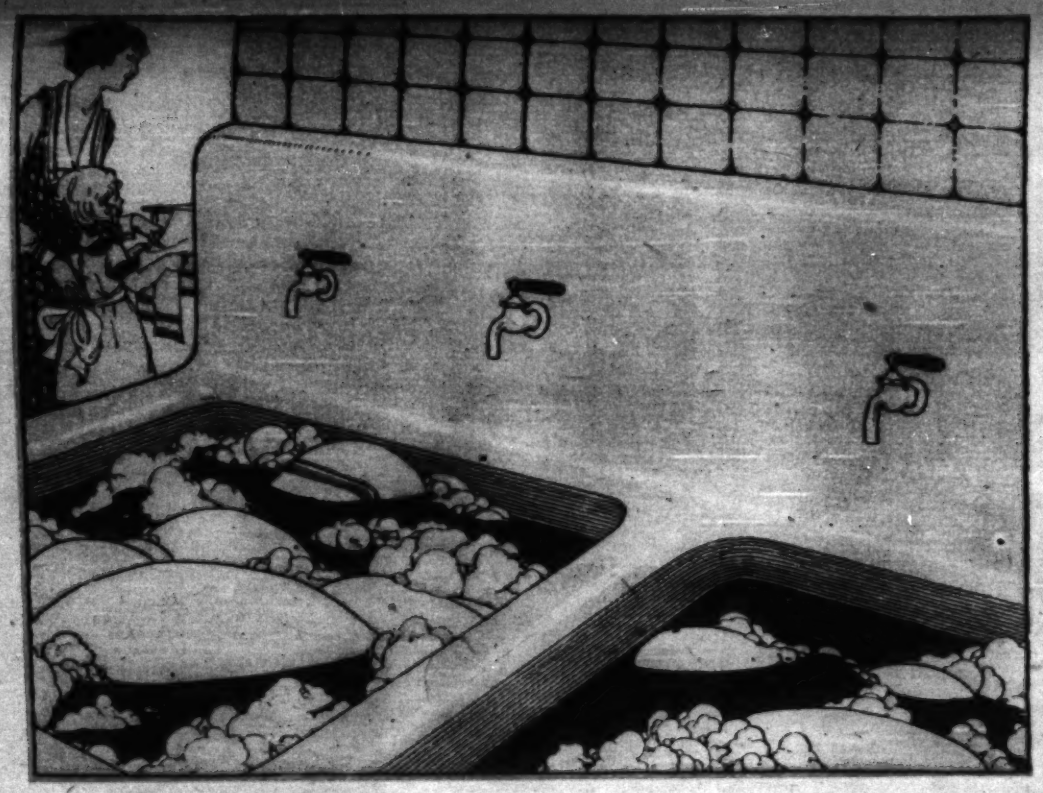
It does what soap has never done before



AN entirely new kind of soap that by itself loosens all the dirt. A kind of soap that requires less of your time and strength than any soap you have ever used.

Rinso does the family washing by gently soaking the dirt out of the clothes. Just use enough to get big lasting suds and only the worst spots will need to be rubbed. A little dry Rinso gets even these clean.

In a washing machine Rinso makes just the penetrating suds needed to get the clothes snowy white.

Rinso is made by the largest soap makers in the world, to do the family washing as easily and safely as Lux does fine things. It comes in two sizes—the regular size and the big new package. Get Rinso today at grocery and department stores everywhere. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

NOTE: In hard water it takes from ½ to 1 package (regular size) of Rinso to a tub to make good suds. In very hard water you will need from 1½ to 2 packages to a tub to get the big lasting suds that loosen all the dirt.

THERE'S THAT KID OUT THERE PLAYING— GEE— IT'S GREAT TO BE A KID— NO WORRIES— PLAY THE LIVE LONG DAY— NEVER GROWS TIRED— IT'S ABOUT TIME I GAVE THAT BOY A LITTLE ADVICE; CALLED HIM IN AND TALKED TO HIM ABOUT HIS FUTURE—

CHESTER— DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK, WHILE YOU'RE PLAYING AROUND, WHAT YOU'RE GOING TO BE WHEN YOU GROW UP? WHAT VOCATION YOU'LL FOLLOW? WHETHER YOU'RE GOING TO BE A DOCTOR OR A LAWYER, OR BUY AND SELL GOODS AND BE A MERCHANT.

WELL, I'VE MADE UP MY MIND I WANT TO BE A POLICEMAN—

YOU KNOW LIFE ISN'T ALL PLAY— THERE IS A SERIOUS SIDE TO IT TOO— YOU HAVEN'T COME TO THAT YET BUT YOU WILL PRETTY SOON— AND THE SOONER YOU START THE BETTER FITTED YOU'LL BE— AND THE BETTER FITTED YOU ARE THE EASIER THE TASK— JUST LIKE WORKING WITH GOOD TOOLS—

THE BETTER THE TOOLS THE EASIER AND BETTER THE JOB— WITH A TRAINED, EDUCATED BRAIN YOU'LL HAVE THE ADVANTAGE OF OTHER BOYS— IF YOU TAKE ADVANTAGE OF YOUR OPPORTUNITIES WHEN YOU GET TO BE 21 YEARS OLD YOU'LL HAVE A STORE-ROOM OF KNOWLEDGE THAT WILL MAKE THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA LOOK LIKE A BLANK BOOK— AND THE REST IS EASY.

WHATEVER YOU DO YOU OUGHT TO TRY TO EXCEL— DO JUST A LITTLE BIT BETTER THAN ANYBODY ELSE— THIS IS THE AGE OF SPECIALTIES AND SPECIALISTS— FIND OUT WHAT YOU WANT TO DO AND DO IT WELL—

IS THERE ANYTHING YOU CAN DO BETTER THAN ANY ONE ELSE IN THE WORLD?

YES SIR— I CAN READ MY OWN WRITING—

HOW ARE YOU GETTING ALONG IN SCHOOL? ARE YOU KEEPING UP WITH YOUR STUDIES? I WANT YOU TO BE PROMOTED YOU KNOW—

ONE HUNDRED? DO YOU MEAN TO TELL ME YOU GOT 100 IN SCHOOL YESTERDAY? ARE YOU SURE?

YES SIR— I GOT 50 IN ARITHMETIC AND 50 IN SPELLING—

AND ANOTHER THING— I WANT YOU TO LEARN TO BE GENEROUS WITH YOUR PLAYTHINGS— TO THINK MORE OF OTHER PEOPLE'S COMFORT— TO SHARE YOUR TOYS WITH YOUR LITTLE FRIENDS— NOT BE SO SELFISH—

I REMEMBER THAT SLED THAT SANTA CLAUS BROUGHT YOU LAST WINTER— I REMEMBER HOW YOU TREATED LITTLE AL LOEWENTHAL— YOU WOULDN'T LET HIM PLAY WITH IT AT ALL— I WATCHED YOU—

YES I DID, PAPA— HE HAD IT OVER HALF THE TIME— HE HAD IT MORE THAN I DID— I LET HIM TAKE IT ALL THE WAY UP THE HILL— I ONLY SLID DOWN ON IT—

AND LOOK AT YOUR FACE— JUST LOOK AT IT— BLACK AS COAL— COME INTO THE HOUSE AND GIVE YOURSELF A GOOD WASH— I WANT TO INTRODUCE YOUR FACE TO A GOOD BOWL OF SOAP AND WATER—

DON'T YOU EVER LOOK IN THE MIRROR TO SEE IF YOUR FACE IS CLEAN?

NO— I JUST LOOK AT THE TOWEL—

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

MR. HOPPER SAVES THE TEENIE WEENIE GARDEN.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"CALL out the army! Call out the army!" shouted the Dunce one morning as he burst into the Teenie Weenie library where the General sat working over his accounts.

"What's the trouble, Dunce?" asked the General calmly, for the head of the Teenie Weenies knew how excited the Dunce could become over the most simple thing.

"W-w-why, t-t-t-there's a t-t-t-t-toad out near t-t-the g-g-g-garden!" exploded the Dunce, dancing up and down in his excitement, his eyes as big as pinheads and as bright as tiny diamonds. "He's a-a-awful big t-t-t-toad, too. He's almost as big as a—as a—I don't know what; but he's t-t-t-terrible b-b-big."

"He must be if he is as big as all that," smiled the General.

"He's awful ugly, t-t-t-too."

"Well, just keep away from him and he won't hurt you," said the General. "Toads are harmless. Just keep away from him."

"B-b-b-but, General!" shouted the Dunce. "W-w-we're all liable to get w-w-w-warts or s-s-s-somethin'."

"Ah, that's all foolishness," cried the Doctor, who had been listening to the talk. "The toad is a good friend to have around."

"A f-f-f-friend?" gasped the Dunce, staring at the Doctor.

"Why, certainly," cried the Doctor. "He is just as harmless as a butterfly. And if you let him alone he will catch most of the bugs and worms that are destroying our garden."

"But, Doctor," said the Lady of Fashion, who had been dusting the furniture in the sitting room and had heard the conversation, "they are so terribly ugly—I'm deadly afraid of them," and the little lady shuddered so violently she almost shook off her tiny dusting cap.

"I'll admit they wouldn't take a beauty prize," answered the Doctor, "but in spite of their looks they are most gentle and harmless. I'll tell you what we can do. We will go over to the garden and watch the big fellow catch some bugs. It will be most interesting and you can see what a useful fellow that toad will be in our garden."

"Come on, let's go," cried the Dunce.

"We had better wait until evening" said the Doctor. "That is the time they catch most of the bugs."

"Don't they catch bugs during the day?" asked the curious Dunce.

"Well, occasionally," answered the Doctor. "But usually they hunt bugs in the evening and at night, for that is the time most bugs are out."

That evening the Teenie Weenies made their way quietly to the garden back of the little village, where they soon discovered the big toad sitting near a stone. From a safe distance the Teenie Weenies watched the toad with round eyes. Presently a black beetle made its appearance, and the toad patiently watched it until it crawled quite near, then, leaping forward on his mighty hind legs, he snapped up the bug with his long tongue so quickly the Teenie Weenies could hardly follow the movement.

The toad pushed the bug into his big mouth with his front feet and blinked his round eyes hard as he swallowed the beetle.

"The toad's tongue is sticky and anything it touches sticks to it," the Doctor told the Lady of Fashion, who leaned on the top of the stone and watched the performance with wide open mouth.

Every evening the little folks gathered near the garden and watched the toad destroy the bugs. They grew quite fond of him and named him Mr. Hopper. Even the Lady of Fashion learned not to be afraid of him, and she even patted him a couple of times.

Mr. Hopper spent many happy hours in the Teenie Weenie garden, and he kept the place quite free of bugs, which saved the little men a lot of work, for the worms and bugs were doing much damage to their vegetables.

The Teenie Weenie Poet asked to have this poem, which Mr. Hopper inspired, printed, and here it is just as he set it down:

Listen! Listen! Hear that sound?
A sort of flop upon the ground,
Flop, flop, flop.
It's old man toad who's hoppin' out
For bugs that chance to be about.
Flop, flop, flop.
And any bug that comes his way
Will never see another day.

RHUFUS RHYMER, Teenie Weenie Poet.

THE TEACHING OF MONSIEUR THE MARQUIS

BY C. C. ANDREWS

An Interlude of the French Revolution in Which Love, Too, Stages Its Revolt.

"The life of a woman, husbandless, childless, is cold and lonely, little one."

MONSIEUR THE CURE delicately tapped the lid of his snuff box, and took a pinch daintily between a frail old finger and thumb. His blue eyes, bright in their network of fine wrinkles, rested with an indulgent patience upon Marcel.

"But what then would you, my son?" he remonstrated in his amiable voice. "Are these old wifeless, childless hands of mine them to unlock the secret heart of a young maid? It is true I love Mademoiselle Germaine, and she, as I am honored to believe, loves me." He made a little courtly gesture. "But read her, therefore? No, no! Do you, who would have, ask, my good Tisot."

Marcel stood downcast, abashed, humble, twisting in great hands his red cap with its cockade. Behind him, almost roofless, fire blackened, sacked, dismantled, towered the ruined mass of the Château d'Aurillac, fit token of the liberty, equality, and fraternity that the revolution had brought to France; round his waist was the tri-colored sash that was the badge of his office from the committee of public safety—the badge that gave him authority over all the seigniory; the whole ravaged countryside had a fearful care of the patriot citizen Marcel Tisot. But in his veins ran the blood of the peasant born to cringe, and Monsieur the Curé, distant scion of a stock as ancient as that of the fugitive Marquis, was still Monsieur.

"She—she will not listen, monsieur," he stammered. "Ask? I ask and ask again. She has no thought of marriage, now or ever, with me or with another. Therefore, her answer is 'No.' I speak to Père Grandet, my uncle, who would have her my wife. He commands, and she laughs—it is still 'No.' But you, monsieur——"

"Of a certainty cannot change it into 'yes,' my friend. Patience—patience! She is so young, the little one. Wait, my good Marcel."

THE curé made a soothing gesture that was also one of dismissal; Marcel, obedient, bowed, putting on his red cap; he tramped down the poplar flanked road toward the village dejectedly. The curé, turning about at the sound of a step, discovered Mademoiselle Germaine. Beside his small slenderness the girl showed a tall young goddess, of a glowing brunette beauty that was rich lined yet delicate; she stood with straight brows contracted above her dark eyes, and red lips pressed to a line. The old man's greeting smile held something of the paternal; in past days, before the great upheaval, when he had been tutor to Mademoiselle d'Aurillac, and it had pleased her to have her studies shared by her foster sister, the daughter of the land steward Grandet, it had not been the gay little Diane that he found either his best or his dearest pupil.

"The cousin Tisot talks of you, my child," he said at once, smiling.

"He wastes your time and his own, monsieur. As he should know," she answered quietly.

She stood with hands folded, silent, waiting; to use many words was not her way. The curé tapped his snuff box again, eyeing her. He put it up, and laid withered fingers on her round young arm.

"It is as you will," he said gently; "but I would have you think, my child. He is rough, a little, yes, but he is honest, the good Marcel; he loves you, and he stands well with the republic. The grandfather is old and growing very old. The life of a woman, husbandless, childless, is cold and lonely, little one."

"I know it well, monsieur. Nevertheless it will be mine," said the girl steadily.

There was a note of finality in her voice; she stood again silent with grave eyes upon the dark mass of the adjacent forest, its trees clustered black and dense against the saffron and rose of the sunset sky. Monsieur the Curé presently went his way; his long black gown and broad shovel hat melted into the shadows; she went within and closed the door upon the chilly twilight. The room—the great living room of the farmhouse—was empty but for the cat basking before the fire over which a huge soup pot bubbled; from the floor above, to which a staircase led, came the cracked quaver of Père Grandet, and the shrill, cackling tones of Mère Thérèse—crippled with rheumatism and bedridden, the old man preferred the ministrations of the old servant to those of his granddaughter.

Germaine took up her knitting; the frown was still upon her forehead as the bright needles clicked, a cloud that it might be boded a storm for the good Marcel. It was true that he had asked and asked again, stubborn, indomitable; had paid no more heed to her "no" than to the blowing of a dead leaf in the winds. When he returned it should be said again—and as it had not been said yet—said with the threat that had been a score of times upon his tongue—that she would go to the aunt Céleste at Beauvais. Eh—but he had no terrors for Germaine Grandet, the Deputy Representative Tisot! The little sound of laughter and scorn died half uttered at the ring of a step upon the path—he had come back!

THE door opened, a figure appeared, entered, and she sprang to her feet with a cry. For this was not Marcel. The man stopped still, threw off his hat, stood haggard, dust stained, dishevelled, in the light of the fire, oddly calm, though his breast rose high on hurried breath. The girl sprang to the staircase door, closed it with swift caution, set her back against it; terror and recognition were in her blanched face.

"Monsieur Gaston!" And then, "Monsieur the Marquis. You!" she gasped.

"As you see, child—yes. I saw you through the window, Germaine. Who beside you is in the house?"

"The grandfather and Mère Thérèse. No others."

"Ah!"

The chair from which she had risen was close; with a gesture of exhaustion he dropped into it. First noiselessly slipping the bolts of both doors, she ran to a cupboard; brought out a bottle of cognac, poured a glass, and brought it to him. With a word of thanks he drained it; in a moment, with a revived face, looked at her cool and smiling. Gaston, Marquis d'Aurillac, proscribed, fugitive, with a price upon his head, his life forfeit did he fall into the hands of the republic, was of the kind, did the fates do their worst, to go to the guillotine not less composedly. The girl shuddered, meeting the blue eyes that were gay under his fair unpowdered hair. Dust, fatigue, pallor clouded but could not hide his beauty—a beauty that in its different fashion was as striking as her own. His glance, surveying her, grew grave.

"You have become a woman, Germaine," he said quietly.

"What else, monsieur. I am 20 years old." A sound upon the floor above made her swiftly turn and listen; she turned back again. "Monsieur, why have you come—why, why? In England you were safe, but here, in this mad France that grows daily madder—if it is known—if you are taken ——" The marquis laughed.

"But I will not be taken, child," he said composedly. "I put my head into the noose, yes, since I choose, but the rope does not tighten, trust me. Why do I come? Take the answer in a sentence. In a month my sister, Mademoiselle Diane, marries the Vicomte de St. Roch, and I have a mind that she does so as well dowered as may be—dowered, since I can give her little else, with the d'Aurillac jewels. In these mad times, as you rightly call them, when neither letters nor carriers may be trusted, to come was the only way. I am here, therefore. They are in the strong chest in the charter room at the château, of which your father has the keys. Has he turned republican, child? Even if so he will scarce, I think, fling a d'Aurillac to the wolves. He is not in the house, you say. When——" She stopped him with wrung hands.

"Monsieur," she cried, "they have burnt the château!"

"Burnt?" He started up. "Burnt d'Aurillac! Germaine!"

HE sprang to the window at which she pointed. From it he saw the ruin that towered in its blackened desolation against the pale sky. A word or two of broken rage and grief escaped him; then he stood silent, with clenched hands, and heard her rapidly whispered story. The château had been burnt and sacked by the sansculottes more than a year ago; her father, faithful to his trust, striving to defend it, had done so at the cost of his life—he had been struck down, trampled as the frantic mob burst yelling into the great hall—fifty such stories might have been told in the France of that day.

The girl spoke quietly—her grief was a conquered and chained thing. The jewels were saved—had been removed from the château before the attack; her father had locked them away; the key was in her keeping; she would give them to monsieur. But first he must have food; he was exhausted and must rest; the grandfather need know nothing, nor Mère Thérèse, who had a tongue of the longest.

Eating the meal she hurried to set before him, the marquis answered her questions. Yes, he desired to reach Rouen; it would, most probably, be safer than returning to La Havre, where he had landed. But first he must go to the ruin of the Silver Stag in the village a mile beyond the further borders of the forest, where M. de La Roch and his cousin, the Comte De Mersac, who had traveled with him from England, would await his coming—Mademoiselle Diane, it seemed, had been fearful of his making the journey alone.

The keeper of the Silver Stag, an old servant of the De Mersacs and to be trusted, would have coach and horses ready to take them to the coast; they traveled as the emissaries of a great English business house—had the necessary papers.

Listening, pale and intent, Germaine nodded. But yet, it would be quite safe, quite easy for monsieur, Cousin Marcel Tisot, whom he would remember, would presently return—he would himself escort him through the forest and to the Silver Stag, being, as he was, deputy representative of the committee of public safety. The marquis sprang to his feet with an ejaculation of involuntary dismay.

when she would come back. And the latest is that Brock has just gone into town—he walked out of the house here quite openly, carrying his satchel, and at the station he took a ticket for New York."

"He's been away for over a week, so the servants told Jones. We haven't seen him now, Wilette?"

"Is Allen at Colbix Hall to Marie, I suppose." Wet said with a touch of impatience. "Is Allen at Colbix Hall from the station and he was telling me it looked as if Brock had gone for good, all the farm accounts made out and everything left shipshape."

When he left them West remarked, "He's left in Marie, but fear of Mrs. Brentwood's detectives which had made him wipe her to keep Marie at Kent House. But it didn't matter. When he knew Marie bemittee, see you? If Monsieur the Marquis has a neck for the knife and a hand for the basket, so, too, have I!"

HE finished the soup, went striding across to an opposite room, calling for Mère Thérèse to follow. Listening, the girl knew that he was changing into his laced coat and plumed hat of office before going to the improvised barracks that he had established in the undestroyed wing of the château; his voice, rising above the shrill cackle of Mère Thérèse, made his plans clear. A patrol should be dispatched this way, another that, still another that; there was little doubt but that the fugitive, whichever road he might have taken, would be captured before daybreak. That, having been recognized, he would venture into the near neighborhood of the chateau was not likely. Once she noiselessly stirred; taking a knife from the table she hid it in the folds of her bodice, and moved toestand with her back to the door that she had shut upon the marquis.

Marcel came out fastening his sash—the sash that completed the costume of the laced coat and the plumed hat. The other with the red cap, lay dropped upon a chair. Her eyes had gleamed as she saw them, and she had almost laughed through her clenched teeth, because she had known what she would do—it was not capture but escape in which he should help, the good Marcel! He went out. Mère Thérèse presently vanished up the staircase in response to a cracked call from Père Grandet. She soundlessly slipped the bolt of the door, and turned to face D'Aurillac as he stepped into the room.

"Monsieur, you did not tell me!"

"That I had been recognized, set upon, taken? As I escaped at the cost of an empty pistol, and, I think, threw the dolts off my scent, there was no need, child. Why alarm you? I had hoped to be safely away before the tale reached you, if it did so at all. But I had reckoned without the cousin Marcel, my dear!" Cool laughter was in his blue eyes as he regarded her, laughter and scorn. "The Citizen Deputy Representative Tissot is a good patriot, it seems!"

"Monsieur, you heard——"

"Most clearly, since the good patriot roars like a bull! Take back the jewels, child. Should I be captured with them upon me, and it is known that it was from you I had them——" She thrust the cases back upon him. Breathless, she caught his arm.

"Monsieur, no, no! Trust to me—you shall escape—you shall reach the Silver Stag. I listened—I know what he does, Marcel. All the roads will be guarded—through the forest is the only way. They will search it—yes—but the order is not given—there is time first, a little time—and there is not a path that I do not know. O, say nothing—obey me—follow me! For the sake of Mademoiselle Diane, who loves you! I beseech you, monsieur!"

She was as rapid in her movements as in her swift, vehement speech. She ran and brought Marcel's discarded coat, helped him replace his own with it, herself fastened the tri-colored sash, and in reply to the words of involuntary refusal and remonstrance that he began to speak, repeated her entreaty even more passionately. It was the only way, if he would escape; and, most happily, it was dark; if he were seen by stray eyes, who would glance twice at the deputy representative walking with her—his cousin—was it not a thing that often happened? He was something of the same height, same figure as Marcel; there was even a resemblance in his fair hair, half loosened from its ribbon, and covered by the red cap with its cockade. In a few seconds the disguise, such as it was, was complete, and she had thrown a long blue cloak over her own shoulders, drawing its hood over her dark head.

ON the doorstep, remembering, she turned back, and cautiously again withdrew the bolt of the staircase door. Then they were out in the merciful darkness, the merciful solitude of the dusty road. Lights presently started into brightness about the ruined portion of the black mass of the château, moving hurriedly here and there; a sound of raised voices, rough, loud, excited, came faintly down the wind—Marcel had lost no time. Once a peasant, trudging by, driving a couple of lean cows from pasture, spoke a hoarse greeting to the citizeness and "Citizen Tissot" as the two went swiftly by. But they gained the shadows of the forest and met no hindrances.

D'Aurillac stood still. She must come no farther, he began. Let her direct him to the right path for the Silver Stag—she stopped him. "It is impossible, monsieur. In a little while the patrols will be in the forest—in the main paths you would be taken. We must avoid them—go by ways I know. Follow me, I entreat you, and waste no time."

"But you will be missed, child, and, should it be guessed that you have helped me——"

"Ah, monsieur, what matter? Think of nothing but that we must reach the Silver Stag. This way."

She struck aside into a track between sheltering bushes. Following, the marquis more than once stumbled as though he were uncertain of his feet, more than once paused with a sharp intaking of breath. The path ended in a broad glade surrounded by trees above which a pale sickly moon was rising. It was almost crossed when the girl halted, listened, caught the man by the arms. The silence of the forest was broken by the tramp of feet and the sound of voices—advancing feet, advancing voices. She turned a colorless face.

"It is a patrol!" she gasped. "They come this way! O, quickly, for the love of the Virgin, monsieur!"

She dragged him into the shadow of the trees. For a space both stood with strained ears. Would the footsteps pause, turn? They came on, were louder. Monsieur the Marquis gave a little laugh; he steadied himself upon strangely rocking feet.

"Go, Germaine. Leave me! Quickly, child!"

"Monsieur——" She caught his hand. He put hers away.

"Instantly! Conceal yourself! If you are seen by these bloodhounds, and with me—go, child, I implore you."

"Monsieur, I will not!" Her hands were upon his arm; in a very agony of desperation, with all her force, she thrust him back. "I will not go. And if you are—taken—if you die, so, too, will I. I will, monsieur!"

"Germaine!"

"I will! To their faces I will curse, I will spit upon the republic! I will cry to them to take me to the guillotine! This way—quickly—quickly! Crouch down—be still—and they may pass."

IN a moment, through a break in the bushes, they were huddled, hidden, in a little hollow where gorse clumps grew thick and tall. The sounds of voices and tramping grew louder; figures broke out into the glade, approached. There was a shouted order; the men swung about, crossed it obliquely, vanished among the trees, were gone. The sounds died away; once more the forest was silent, and the two got upon their feet. In the moonlight they looked at each other, the pale wonder of the man's face fronting the girl's dark splendor. She spoke as though she answered him, with steady eyes that did not fall.

"What would you, monsieur the marquis?" she said with bitter quiet. "I love you—yes, it is true. From the time you were a boy and I a child, caressed, teased, fondled, flattered—was it not so?—what else should I do? I breathed, my blood ran, as naturally. What matters? When once you are safe we do not meet again in life." She met his look, read it. "Ah," she cried, "was it a reason, that, why I should endure that you shamed yourself in shaming me—the daughter of a servant faithful to you? A thousand times more, because I loved you, would I have died first, monsieur!"

Her gesture silenced any reply he might have made. They went on. The track into which she led was rougher than the first had been. It ended in a sloping sweep of turf at the bottom of which a tiny stream ran babbling. A few paces down the marquis, lurching again, clutched her shoulder, and she cried out, for he showed a ghastly face.

"I am wounded," he said faintly. "When I was set upon one of the fools thrust at me with his pike. I made shift to bandage the hurt in a fashion, but—but——"

The words trailed off, inarticulate; his withdrawn hand showed dabbled and red. The girl threw her arms about him as he staggered; his weight dragged through them; he lay half fainting. She knelt beside him, swiftly and deftly unfastened his clothing. The wound was probably not in itself severe, but it had bled profusely; jerked by the rough walking, the bandage had loosened and slipped. She readjusted it, making a hasty pad of her torn off and folded apron; then soaked her handkerchief in the brook and wetted his forehead; he presently revived, opened his eyes, with her help got upon his feet. They descended th slope, crossed the rivulet, mounted the incline beyond, plunged again into the sheltering darkness of the trees. But slowly, for D'Aurillac paused often, faint and dizzy, swaying upon unsteady feet. Once, twice, they stopped, with held breath and thudding hearts at the sounds of feet and voices; once, twice, they turned, dwindled, died away.

THE moon was high and the stars bright when they came out upon a spot where two paths met and branched away. The one led towards the Rouen road, the other they must follow to reach the Silver Stag. The marquis staggered and reeled against a tree, clutching it. He could go no farther—must wait—rest—he muttered weakly, and but for her quick arms about him would have sunk down.

"Monsieur, no—no—not here!" He struggled desperately to support himself, but almost his whole weight was upon her. "They will search the roads—of a certainty the one to Rouen. It was this way that Marcel himself—ah, listen—listen! It is Marcel! They are coming! A moment! Only a little moment, monsieur!"

Suddenly, loudly, footsteps and voices had shattered the forest silence; above them all, stridently calling an order, the not-to-be-mistaken voice of Marcel. A minute and he would appear at the junction of the paths, be upon them! Once more D'Aurillac strove to stand—his head dropped helplessly against her shoulder—with a frantic exertion of strength she half carried, half dragged him a few paces in among the bushes—he slipped from her arms and lay motionless—he had swooned. The sounds were close—through the leaves the moonlight showed the movements of figures—again came that voice of Marcel. Crouched before him, over him, the girl felt in her bosom, found the haft of the knife that lay there, drew it out, and held it gripped. "You love me, want me. The knife is in my heart before you shall touch him!" That was what she would say if Marcel came.

He had halted, hesitating—she could distinguish the outline of his figure, see the swing of the tri-colored sash. He turned his face—without doubt he saw her. The point of the blade was as near to her heart as the words to her lips. Deputy Representative Tissot faced about. "To the Rouen road, my children!" he shouted. "It is there, or I am an imbecile, that we shall find the aristocrat! Forward then!"

The patrol swung into the path, following. In a few moments there was silence in the forest. The knife slipped from Germaine's hand; she crouched down, holding the head of the unconscious man against her heart.

DAWN was breaking, cold and pale, when a blue bloused man, munching his breakfast of onions and black bread, came by, walking at the head of the ragged horse that drew his mud-encrusted cart. He stopped and stared amazed at the pale girl who suddenly appeared in his way, listened, scratched and shook a tangled head. Eh? Take a wounded citizen in his cart to the Silver Stag? But no, little citizeness! A man, see you, had his own work—was it not so? And the Silver Stag—my faith, but it was miles out of his road. Impossible, therefore, let the citizen unfortunate—— Desperately the girl flung down a desperate card. She burst into a laugh.

"You will not?" she cried. "But you are bold, citizen, to refuse help when he demands it to Deputy Representative Tissot!" The man, following her pointing finger, peering in among the bushes, catching a sight of the tri-colored sash and red cap, sprang at once to eager obsequiousness. It was enough—he was at the service of the citizeness, most humbly at the service of the citizen representative. To the Silver Stag—to wherever the citizen representative pleased. The citizeness would herself help the citizen representative? Again, it was enough. He mounted to his seat, gathered up the reins. In a few moments the cart was on its way.

The morning was bright when the Silver Stag was reached. The Vicomte de St. Roch and M. de Mersac, booted and ready for the journey, started up as the two dishevelled, pale, bedraggled figures came into the room where, uneasy and wondering, they waited. Forthwith there followed ejaculations of relief, a hail of questions—the marquis in response was brief. He placed his companion in a chair, anxiously called for wine, poured it, and made her drink before he drank himself—his wound, his faintness and weakness were, it seemed, things forgotten. De Mersac had presently eyes for her; he confirmed himself with an oath in declaring aloud that the girl was handsome! The vicomte, turning to look, exclaimed, looked close.

"What's here?" he cried. "I have surely seen you before, child—is it not so? Of a certainty, yes, or I have no eyes for a face worth remembering. My faith, I have it! I am a fool that I do not at once know the little——"

His extended hand would have turned the girl's face to the light with small ceremony. Monsieur the Marquis came swiftly in between, flinging away the tri-colored sash of Deputy Representative Tissot.

"Your pardon, M. de St. Roch," he said, smooth and formal, "you mistake. You have not as yet the honor you claim. With her permission I now present you, and you, M. de Mersac, to Mademoiselle Germaine Grandet, but for whom, Eugene, your Diane must have lacked both dowry and brother. I owe her my life—this child—conceive it! And at the risk of her own, for let it be known to the bloodhounds of this accursed republic that she concealed me, aided my escape, and her head is forfeit to the guillotine as surely as mine."

"Monsieur, it will not happen," said the girl faintly. "He will protect, not denounce me, I think, Marcel." A shudder shook her. Before her was the picture of the price that, when Marcel knew, she must pay for life. An unspeakable price. But he need not know. She steadied herself, stood for a moment with shut lips. "Give yourself no concern—you are safe, Monsieur the Marquis," she said. Monsieur the Marquis bent his head and kissed her hand, faced about, holding it. His blue eyes had the flash of steel.

"Messieurs," he said quietly, "mademoiselle long ago won all my love, before she forced from me—forced from me, you comprehend—the honor and reverence that are humbly her due from all. She loved me, but she would have taken death at her own hands rather than shame from mine. In return for the insult I dared to offer her, she has given me life. There can be no cancelling of a debt so great, though a man pays with all he is and has, as I do. Will you send for or fetch a priest, Eugene? Without doubt, there is one in the village. It is only as my wife that the sister of yours may suffer me to take her to England."

"Monsieur, no, no!" Germaine gasped. "It is not fitting—I am of the people—a poor girl." The marquis kissed her hand again and laughed—the gay laugh of the boy who, in the Chateau d'Aurillac, had stolen the heart of a child.

"Alas, that is true, sweetheart, since you take a husband with hands so nearly empty! My child, I did not see, dearest. The priest, Eugene—time presses. My faith, but she has her wholesome lessons, this republic, since I am already taught to unlace the shoes of madame!"

GLANCING down, he had seen a torn shoe, a stain of red that told of bruised and bleeding feet—he knelt, unknotting the laces. The Vicomte de St. Roch pulled together his staggered wits. With a fine air of deference he bowed to a pale, trembling, bewildered yet radiant girl.

"My homage, mademoiselle," he said, smiling. "And my apologies, since I have fallen, it seems, into error. I have made my condolences to M. D'Aurillac for all that he had lost and left in France. I should rather have presented my felicitations upon all that he wins and takes from it. When Monsieur the Curé has done his office, I will beg leave to present them also to Madame the Marquise."

He bowed again, turned to the door, beckoned to a speechless and confounded De Mersac to follow. They went out. Monsieur the Marquis was left, very busy, upon his knees.

THE SACK
by OWEN OLIVER

All His Life Had Been a Sack Race—and Yet He Chose to Come Back to It and to His Burden!

THE surgeon rather advised against the operation; but he left it to Greatorex and his friends to decide.

"My head is a lump of wood," Greatorex told him. "Get them to settle it."

It seemed to the surgeon that most of the friends thought more of themselves than of Greatorex. So he committed the decision to the one who thought more of Greatorex than of herself. He had no doubt that she did. No one had.

"There is just a chance that it might save his life," he stated; "but it isn't very likely that the life would be worth living. To him, I mean. Of course, there is the question of those who are more or less dependent on him. I don't mean merely for money."

"Do just what is best for him," she decided at once, "without taking account of any one else."

The surgeon nodded; put his hand on her shoulder.

"I shan't operate," he told her. "He will go quietly and without much pain. God bless you!"

"Thank you. You are very kind. You will let me be with him as much as possible?"

"Of course," the specialist promised. "Of course. Yes, yes!"

Greatorex rallied when the surgeon told him the decision; found some of his keen wits for a few minutes.

"Who settled it?" he muttered.

"I consulted Miss Mason. She left it to me to do what is best for you."

"Ah! For me! She would, of course. But, you see, I should reckon her. A man isn't just his own chattel. Doctor, settle it as I should if my old head would work."

The surgeon's mouth twisted for a moment. He had taken a liking to Greatorex.

"I think she'd miss you a good bit," he said. "You would weigh that in; weigh it more than you ought, I expect. However, you are you! I'll see if I can pull it off, old man. We'll say tomorrow morning. That won't leave the little lady long to worry."

"You've got my point of view all right," Greatorex told him. He smiled faintly. "Thanks, my dear chap."

WHEN Greatorex took the anaesthetic he thought he was preparing for death; and then all at once he found himself preparing for life instead; standing somewhere just beyond the beginning of things, getting ready to start in a race.

His schoolfellows were there, too. They had all grown young again, just as he had; those who had died as well as those who, like himself, had come to be oldish men. They were all forming up in line to toe a great white mark. Johnnie Reeves was playing the fool as usual; and as usual Harry Kane was late and kept them waiting for him. Teddie Burns' little white dog ran in front of the line and barked and had to be driven away. They all laughed at that. Laughter had not felt so spontaneous for many years.

There was a broken, hilly country in front of them; and far across it, upon a wooded rise, there was a queer shaped white column for the goal. Greatorex resolved confidently—it was a long time since he had been so cheerfully confident—that he would reach it first. He was sure he would. He felt so overbrimmingly strong and active and light; so light that he knew he would just skim the ground when he ran.

Some one called to him to be ready to start. It sounded like the voice of the old headmaster. Greatorex stooped with his fingers touching the ground, ready for the first spring. The starter's pistol gave such a terrific bang that it confused him and everything swam round for a moment. (That was when the operation began.)

"He's not very deep," the surgeon growled.

"Well, his heart!" the anaesthetist protested; also rather testily. "I'll give him some more, if I must, but——"

"No, I'll try what I can do—I'm pretty keen on this case, Smith. I don't mean anything, if I'm snappy, you know."

"That's all right, chief. Rather a forlorn hope, isn't it?"

"Yes. Sharp with the clips, Stevens."

GREATOREX seemed to bound into confused space at the cannonlike report of the pistol. Then, after some lost moments, he saw things again, and found himself running hard across a green field. The other boys were running hard, too. He was level with the foremost, when they reached a long hurdle, which, somehow or other, he thought of as a "form." He caught his heel upon the top rail, when he leaped it, and fell. Some one picked him up, and pushed him forward. Why, it was the head! The same foxy-looking little man, wearing the same brown suit. Just the same after forty-odd years.

But the old man was twenty years dead. How did he come here? Greatorex pondered, and then suddenly understood. He was running his life race over again. That was it! Of course that was it. Didn't Evelyn say that he ought to!

"You have run a sack race all your life, dear; always carrying the burdens of others. If you could run it again without the sack. O! I wish you could!"

And he was running it again; and without the sack. Good! Good!

"Now, laddie!" the head cried. "Now! You'll do it yet!"

Greatorex clenched his hands and vowed to catch the lads who were now in front of him. He was gaining . . . gaining. One caught and passed. Another. Another. He was in front. Heavens! There was a great ditch to jump. He'd never do it. He hadn't wind enough left; and his legs felt like lead. He almost stopped; and then he saw some one frantically beckoning forward.

"Good gracious!" he cried. "Why, the old head's there now!"

Yes. It was the head. He stood on the far side of the ditch, waving his red silk handkerchief. ("The same old rag," Greatorex thought.) Suddenly the handkerchief changed to the red covered algebra. "Simplify first!" That was what the old man was calling. He always said that when he took the algebra class. No, he said, "Come on, Greatorex!"

He seemed to fly up in the air at his old master's call, and to be looking down at the water from a long way above. Then he lost things. Presently he found himself across the ditch, lying on the ground, panting and panting.

"Now you're in the upper school, laddie, you must make a man of yourself! And I'll make a great scholar of you some day."

That was what the head said, when he won. When he won? What was it that he won? Lower School Exhibition. That was it. He had won it again; but he couldn't get his breath; not enough breath. He didn't think he could go on.

"Here!" the surgeon raged. "What the devil! Keep it open, man! Keep it open!"

"Doing my best. You said you must have him deep."

"I know, I know! I don't like his breathing, Smith."

The surgeon paused, instruments in hand.

"He's all right now. How does it look?"

"Pretty bad! Well, here goes."

ing." This must be it. And he was lost in it, helplessly lost. Ah! Here was the old head again! He was running and puffing and as excited as Greatorex himself.

"This way, my boy," he called. "This way! Catch hold of my coat, in this dark place. Keep close to me. I know it. Ah-ha! I know it! There's the way out. See!"

He pointed to a slit of light ahead.

Greatorex ran to the light, and through it, and found himself out on a white road, with a wood on one side, and a green field on the other, sloping down to a brook. He was running like a mad creature. He heard the head behind him, clapping his hands, and talking to some one.

"He'll have an open scholarship, too, mark my words. Brilliant boy! Best I've turned out."

Why! That was what the head told his father, just before his father died. "There isn't very much, except what he'd set aside for your education." He heard the old law-

But the sister held the "little, pale, middle-aged lady"—she never looked like that to Greatorex—right around the waist.

GREATOREX did not remember getting his breath and starting off again; but he found himself running once more. The new race was through close country. He had to push his way among the brambles and bushes. There was one very thick clump which he thought he would never get out of. Oratio Obliqua, he fancied it was called. But the head came and showed him just where the opening was, and he got through so easily that they both laughed.

Next he had to mount a steep slope covered with loose stones. He thought that place had a name, too, but he couldn't remember it. "Science" perhaps. He was never good at science. He kept slipping back; but Forbes shouted to him from above. Forbes was fifth form master then; but he died a missionary in China, he recollected. Well, he had come back again; and he looked just as jolly and fat as ever. He threw down a rope, and Greatorex got up by clinging to it. There was a fine view from the top of the slope, and Forbes chuckled, "You've got to get outside things to see them!" He was always saying that.

Some way further Greatorex entered a huge maze; a maze that was all turns and had several paths to choose between at every turning. The sides were close thick yew hedges that one could not see through. The head used to talk about "the maze of learn-yer telling him that; noticed that the queer little man was watching him curiously. Then he was running again. Then he was back in the lawyer's little office. Mr. Grimes sent for him to come and have a talk. Yes, that was how he got there. And old Grimes was talking again. "Heavy losses of late. They will fall upon the provision he had intended for your mother. She is a delicate woman, my boy! A delicate woman."

He lost the lawyer again—he seemed to go in a flash—and was running his race once more, on the hard white road, under the wood; but round the corner he came upon his mother; the same little mother. (Ah! Mothers do not change much!) She was in widow's weeds, crying and wringing her hands. She urged him to leave her and go on.

"You have such a future before you, Harry," she cried. "Father left enough to complete your education. I shall manage somehow. I shall manage, dear. You go on."

She tried to smile and picked up a big bundle, and was walking another way with it. And then Greatorex noticed something lying in the road. It was a great sack. And somehow he knew that the burdens of his life would go in it.

His eyes blinked for a moment; but he picked it up without hesitation.

"I've got to run a sack race after all," he when she would come back. And the latest is that Breck has just gone into town—he walked out of the house here quite openly, carrying his satchel, and at the station he took a ticket for New York."

"Could they be leaving for good?" Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent asked quickly.

"He may not appear again," Haslett answered, "but I believe we have not seen the last of her."

"There's another bit of news," Willetts said with a touch of amusement. "I've located the puppy. Mrs. Smith's servants have it. They sleep above the garage, and they told Jones that two o'clock one morning—from the date it was the night the pup disappeared from our garage—they were waked by a puppy's yelping. They went down and found the animal inside their garage. How it got there they couldn't imagine, for the garage doors were locked."

"Some stray Allen picked up and gave to Marie, I suppose," West said with a touch of impatience. "Is Allen at Colfax Hall now, Willetts?"

"He's been away for over a week, so the servants told Jones. We haven't seen him about this last week and the place looks deserted. But it always looks that way—he lives in one room and does his own cooking.

"Are there any particular orders for me, Mr. Haslett?"

"No, Willetts. Greene is coming out tonight. He will sleep in the house, so you will be relieved of that watch. You and Jones look after the outside as usual."

"Are you going to have Breck traced?"

"No. He may go wherever he pleases—the farther the better."

"Breck's a man who knows what he's about," Willetts said with reluctant admiration, "as smooth a one as I've ever known. Anderson just brought Miss Bella from the station and he was telling me it looked as if Breck had gone for good, all the farm accounts made out and everything left ship-shape."

When he left them West remarked, "He's not a brilliant man, but he's honest. I like him for his loyalty to Aunt Bulah."

"He and Jones and Greene all have clean records," Haslett said in his precise way. "Nothing would induce any one of them to take a bribe. Willetts is particularly valuable to us, for he is one of the best gem experts in New York—no paste pearls will ever pass his inspection. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, our wisest course is simply to wait. Go on and give your party as if you had not a care in the world."

"And West will stay here?"

West answered for himself. "Yes, for I'm anxious about Marie."

Burton Haslett was a politic man. "How is Miss Marie?" he asked.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent knew that it was not belief in Marie, but fear of Mrs. Brant-Olwin's detectives which had made him urge her to keep Marie at Kent House. But it didn't matter. When he knew Marie better he'd change his opinion.

"She was shocked by what happened this afternoon," she replied, "but the way in which she kept her head and managed our car at the crucial moment was marvelous. She can think clearly and act quickly, that child."

West drew an audible breath. He had been terribly shocked when Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had told them of their afternoon's experience. "I wish we could clear the neighborhood of that woman—whether we get the pearls or not!" he exclaimed. "She'll do Marie a harm yet!"

LOVE STAYS

Neither spoke for a few moments; she felt, too, that he was not indifferent to her nearness. When he did finally speak it was only to remark about the music, and Paula answered with a monosyllable. Yet they both enjoyed the dance. He guided her with an ease and a dexterity that were delightful, and Paula, who was herself an excellent dancer, was flushed and smiling when the music stopped with a lingering cadence of saxaphone and piano. But when Allen turned to her with a question, the old careless expression on her face belied her beating heart.

"May I see you again, soon?" he asked.

"You expect to stay in the city for some time?" parried Paula.

"I am here on business that may keep me indefinitely."

By the urge of her heart Paula knew that she wished to see him again very soon, but she remembered the snubbed little girl Paula, and hardened her heart.

"I'm sorry," she drawled. "I am leaving the city this week."

Allen stopped at the sun dial as they strolled away from the pavilion.

"I saw the counterpart of this in England once," he said abruptly. "In a quaint, quiet little town near Somerset. It bore the same inscription. I remember liking it."

THAT night in the fragrant stillness of her bedchamber Paula lay awake and watched the airy patterns the moonlight laid on the floor as it shone through the wistaria vines at the window. Again she felt the clasp of a strong arm about her, and her heart beat faster at the remembered sweetness of the proximity of a dark head.

"Silly," she said impatiently to herself, vainly trying to induce sleep. "You are as bad as you were when you were sixteen. Besides, you don't know a thing about him except that he is undoubtedly a flirt!" And she finally went to sleep.

Meeting Mrs. Cartwright the next day, however, she made it a point to turn the conversation casually to the guest of honor of the dinner party.

"Isn't he a love?" repeated Mrs. Cartwright enthusiastically. "He's here on business—organizing a new $3,000,000 iron and steel company. He is a financial wizard, though one would not suspect it. He has loads of money as well as brains. He is a friend of Martin's. We met him at Santa Barbara several winters ago."

Later in the day, answering the insistent ring of the telephone, Paula heard Mrs. Cartwright's chattering voice again.

"Paula, don't tell me you have any engagement for this evening. Jim Allen is throwing a little party tonight, and he particularly wants you. We're going to drive somewhere for dinner and come home by moonlight. There will be a wonderful moon tonight. Be ready about 7 o'clock."

Without waiting for objections Mrs. Cartwright added a hasty "Don't fail us, dear," and hung up the receiver.

PAULA argued with herself in vain the rest of the afternoon, but when a group of motors lined up before the door early that evening she was ready—plaited sports skirt of rough white silk and dainty blouse hid by a becoming Tuxedo sweater of a color that made her eyes surpassingly lovely. She found her seat was beside Allen in the first car, with the Gaynors. Allen handed her gravely to her seat, and she was annoyed to realize that she was a trifle self-conscious and that she was undoubtedly pleased at seeing him.

It was a marvelous evening. The summer wind whipped the color into Paula's cheeks and she smiled with pure joy at the freshness of it. The great husky sun was a mass of purple and gold in the west, which faded into twilight dimness as they raced along the lake road. All the time Paula was blissfully conscious of the tweed shoulder that just touched her own.

"We're going out to Brundage's for one of his fried chicken dinners," he told her. "It's not a show place, but an ideal country spot where the dinners are old fashioned and delicious. The party was really arranged for you, I might add. I was afraid I might not see you again before you left town, and I knew you would refuse to let me call so soon." Then he added, mockingly, "There was a certain distance in your manner last night that made me hesitate to ask. Any thorns tonight?"

"I feel unusually pleasant, for me," she smiled. "How a lake breeze does drive one's moods away."

It probably wasn't just the answer he wanted, Paula felt, and she knew very well that the presence of the rough sleeve near her shoulder had more to do with her contentment than the breeze.

The drive was perfect. A recent shower had laid the dust. The road unrolled before them like a typewriter ribbon and from the woods on one side came waves of coolness. At intervals the lake came into view, shining like a copper mirror in the last rays of the sun.

At Brundage's there was much laughter, much honking of horns and gay chatter as the party alighted. Allen managed his party adroitly, and Paula found him always near her. At dinner, served on one of the pleasant little screened verandas which the Inn boasted, there were great platters of chicken and duck fried a golden brown. There were corn on the cob, deliciously light baking powder biscuits, pitchers of iced tea. Paula was gay. Her laughter was tipped with malice and her sallies, quick and timely, were frequently barbed with ridicule. She felt rather than saw Allen look at her once or twice with something of disappointment in his glance, and she grew more spirited, more delicately sarcastic. There was something in his presence that made her desire to appear heartless. Perhaps it was the stirring of her blood, the unacknowledged recognition that here was the man who might awaken love in her, that she resented.

AFTER dinner there was an hour of dancing and boating, and then the party started for home. Allen took the wheel of the car himself, but he dropped back for the Cartwrights to lead the way. All the ride home Allen was quiet, and Paula, at his side, had little to say. She had disgusted him with her mockery and heartlessness, she felt sure, and was both repentant and rebellious that this man should influence her action or her feelings. A young June moon lighted their way; a fragrance of clover blossoms made her sniff delightedly. She stole glances at her companion's profile as he gazed straight ahead at the road, shining silver white in the moonlight.

If only he didn't seem so sure of himself—only wasn't so flagrantly adored by the other women of the party, she thought. He was evidently used to the attention of women. And Paula could not forget the incident of her youthful summer visit.

"Warm enough?" he asked her once in a rather strained voice.

"Yes," she answered. And they sped on in the moonlight.

He had taken a different road than the others, and as they came to a turn before reaching the city proper Paula saw one of the other cars turning from another corner. The Gaynors were deposited at their doorstep, and then Allen turned back toward the part of the city where she lived. Instead of turning toward her home, however, he drove on past and drew up, cautiously and silently, in front of the Cartwright place. Lights in the upper windows indicated that the Cartwrights were already retiring.

"What are you doing?" queried Paula sharply as he stopped his engine.

"We are going into the garden," he answered briefly. Meekly Paula put her hand in his and alighted. Silently, like housebreakers, they stole 'round the winding path and toward the garden—Paula laughed softly.

"Well—I think you're crazy," she said.

THEY had reached the garden and sank down on the seat beside the sun dial. It gleamed ghostly white and the flowers stood out like mute sentinels aghast at this boldness.

"I should be packing," ventured Paula practically. "Why did you bring me here?" Her voice was as airily icy as ever.

"Because I wanted to see you in the garden again," Allen began abruptly. "I saw you here before dinner last night. It seemed to me I saw a beautiful tenderness and idealism in you as you enjoyed the beauty of the garden, and as you traced the inscription there." He pointed to the sun dial. "I thought that perhaps I might see it again, if I brought you here—that the icy young creature with the perfect toilettes did have a heart and soul—but I see she hasn't."

Paula gasped, and Allen continued, his tone slightly different.

"Do you know, the first glimpse of you here the other evening reminded me of a little girl I met years ago. It was at a country club in a little eastern town. She couldn't have been more than seventeen, but I shall never forget the sweet animation of her face. She was tremendously alive, and such an eager, imaginative personality gazed from her eyes. I thought I saw it in your face last night. She had red hair—that little girl——"

Paula gasped again, and this time he heard her. He turned to look. Her eyes were laughing softly and he could just perceive their tenderness in the dim light.

"It was at Mountain Lake?" she asked. "And the girl was a niece of Henry Blake?"

Allen turned swiftly.

"Paula, it was you," he cried. "Of course!" His arm went swiftly about her and she did not resist.

With her forefinger she was tracing the inscription on the sun dial.

"Love stays," she repeated softly, all her senses in a tumult. The moon was suddenly obscured, eclipsed by a beloved dark head.

The Teaching of Monsieur the Marquis

upon the path. She sprang to a door, threw it open, motioned him that way.

"It is Marcel," she whispered hurriedly. "I know his footstep. And Mère Thérèse is coming. She must not see you, and I must speak, too, tell him. Quick, monsieur!"

HE caught up his hat and obeyed. She ran to the two doors she had secured and noiselessly withdrew the bolts. From the staircase old Thérèse appeared carrying a glass and soup plate; with shrill expressions of surprise at the almost darkness, she potteringly brought out and lighted candles, moving with the slow deliberation of stiffened limbs. Marcel had halted in the path; his great voice shouted a command towards the stable. Standing tense, with clenched hands, the girl waited. Would the old woman go before he came, leave her free to speak? The door opened and he entered quickly.

"The soup, Mère Thérèse—is it ready? A bowl then, at once—I have business!" He advanced, pulling the red cap from his coarse blonde hair; his face was flushed, excited. "You are here, Germaine? You have not seen—— Bah—no—he would not venture, nor did he it seems turn this way. I have news, my dear. Imagine it. He is here—in France—the aristocrat D'Aurillac."

"You have seen him, Marcel——"

"Seen him? Faith not I, or he had been safely clapped under lock and key by this. As it is he is let slip at the cross roads near to the Silver Stag by the imbecile Gaspard Dubois and his patrol. Ah, but he is a fool unspeakable, that Gaspard!"

"Did he make this way? It may be. Or that? That, too, may be. Or toward the forest? It is possible."

"Bah, idiot! So he is lost until I find him, it seems, which may be not at all!"

"You will search for, denounce him? Marcel," gasped the girl again.

He had turned to the table, was taking the soup in great gulps. Pausing, he stared at her, abashed, half sullen, obdurate, apologetic. "What else, child?" He shrugged. "Eh, you think of his sister, the little Diane—is it not so? But what would you, my dear? Faith, I have of myself no concern with him, this D'Aurillac—beyond the bounds of the seigniory he may save his life or lose it for me. But within? I am a servant of the republic—answerable to the committee, see you? If Monsieur the Marquis has a neck for the knife and a head for the basket, so, too, have I!"

HE finished the soup, went striding across to an opposite room, calling for Mère Thérèse to follow. Listening, the girl knew that he was changing into his laced coat and plumed hat of office before going to the imshadows of the forest and met no hindrances.

D'Aurillac stood still. She must come no farther, he began. Let her direct him to the right path for the Silver Stag—she stopped him. "It is impossible, monsieur. In a little while the patrols will be in the forest—in the main paths you would be side him, swiftly and deftly unfastened his clothing. The wound was probably not in itself severe, but it had bled profusely; jerked by the rough walking, the bandage had loosened and slipped. She readjusted it, making a hasty pad of her torn off and folded apron; then seated her handkerchief in the brook and wetted his forehead. He

The morning was bright when the Silver Star was reached. The Vicomte de St. Roch and M. de Merac, booted and ready for the journey, started up as the two dishevelled, pale, bedraggled figures came into the room where, uneasy and wondering, they waited. Forthwith there followed ejaculations of relief, a hail of questions—the mat-said. "Poor old Evelyn! She'll be so sorry!"

He took the bundle from his little mother, and put it in the sack, and slung that over his shoulder. "Why, you little tiny mammy!" he laughed. "It's nothing to me; and, if you're naughty, I'll carry you, too!"

He kissed his mother, and danced her round. He always thought she was such a pretty little mother, he remembered.

"I shan't fail it," he declared.

Then he started running again, turning twice to wave his hand to her.

IT was hard work with the sack upon his back, he soon discovered. He had been well ahead of his rivals before he stopped and picked it up; but now he could hear footsteps behind. Nearer. Nearer. Just as one of his pursuers was at his elbow—Archie Green. Yes, it was old Archie—he caught a glimpse of the white goal through some trees. He made a mighty effort. For a few moments he gained; but his heart felt as if it would burst. He must drop his burden—and then "little mammy" would come and pick it up—or he must give up the race. He came to a dark wood. Renunciation, it was called, wasn't it? He thought the head named it that. Yes, renunciation. He dropped out of the race there. And then he fainted or fell asleep.

"He won't stand any more," the anaesthetist cried. He wiped his forehead. "In fact, I don't know that he'll stand this."

"Best for him, if he doesn't, perhaps," the surgeon muttered. "Well, I'd better finish the job, anyhow. He's breathing, I suppose, Smith?"

"Just breathing! A little better now. Great vitality; must have been a very strong man once."

Greatorex had a faint notion of feeling sick and staggering blindly through dark places; but he knew nothing distinctly, till he found himself out of the woods, running on a very rough road; still carrying the sack. He did not know where he was going, only that he had grown into a young man and was running a young man's race. He caught several who had been ahead of him, and passed them. There was a big red house afar on a hill. He knew that was the new goal, and he believed that he would reach it first. Then some one stopped him. Why, it was his young brother, Jim! Jim was crying at having to carry some weighty parcels.

Greatorex felt in his heart that Jim was a bit of a coward, and ought to carry them without any fuss; but he remembered what "little mammy" said, before she died. Ah! Little mammy. Dead! Dead! "Be his mammy for me, Harry. You are so brave and strong, and he's only a little chap." Only a little chap. Little mammy's baby boy.

Greatorex shook his head at Jim and his parcels; but he took half of them and put them in his sack.

"That's all right," he said, "boy Jim. I can manage. See you after the race! And you buck up, you young scamp, and don't whine!"

He ran on, but now he couldn't move very fast. The sackload was too great a handicap. There were footsteps behind, and they were gaining upon him. He ran harder—still gaining. The house was quite near, though. He would manage it, he thought, in spite of the sack. He could just last out. He made a furious spurt.

"I believe we'll pull it off after all," the surgeon exulted. "The 'op' looks like coming out all right, if only he can stand the shock."

"His heart?" the anaesthetist doubted. He knelt down to listen to it. "He's making a great fight. Wonderful constitution."

"Good enough for two men," the surgeon muttered, "but he's been trying to do the work of three or four all his life. I've nearly finished, Smith. Keep him alive somehow, man; only keep him alive. It's coming out much better than I expected."

Greatorex thought that he would be the first to the red house, after all; but just as he could almost touch it, he collapsed. He imagined that he fainted and that he was in the faint for a long while, because he seemed considerably older when he became conscious again. He was running once more; always running, whenever he knew anything; and the sack was always weighing him down. It grew heavier and heavier, because people kept putting things on it. There was Jim again; that trouble over his debts! and there was Harry Kane's bill that he backed. Harry paid it back in after years though. Good chap, Harry. And Archie Green's widow; poor consumptive girl. He had to help her, of course. And Jim again. A good job Little Mammy didn't live, perhaps. Then there was poor old Rogers. So many of them. Somehow they all seemed to unload their burdens on to him, and none ever stayed to help him bear the sack; never one for a time that seemed very long; perhaps years. O, yes! It must be years.

"I shall not operate," he told her.

And one laid upon him a burden that was heavier than all the rest; heavier than any but he knew. He never spoke of that burden to any one, and he would not have it written of, so no more can be said than this.

There were times when he stumbled, and times when he fell by the way; but he always got up and struggled on again. He could not travel so fast as those who bore no burden; and many a younger man went by him easily, and with a look of scorn; many a man whom he could have beaten easily on equal terms; but he rarely complained, and he seldom harbored malice; and he never rested. So he caught some of them again, as they made merry in wayside inns, or lay under the cool hedges asleep, or when they grew fat after easy living.

After many years—well, they felt to him like years—there came a time when he found that the bearing of burdens had made him very strong. In those days he reached several little country places, where there were humble little races; and, even with his burden on his back he won some of these.

There is much to tell of this long time; but it is bound up with things that he never told, he would not have told; things that are in the story of the burden of which he never spoke to any then, and only to one afterwards. He was always a man to whom none denied his right hand, and to whom women trusted, and to whom little children ran! Let us leave it at that.

One day he strode out into a fresh country; a powerful man, but no longer a young man; one who seldom ran, but walked stoutly and uprightly, carrying his huge sack over his shoulder. While he walked bravely and strongly and smilingly—though smiling rather sadly—the sun went down. Suddenly he felt very tired, and stopped in his walking; and his doctor's voice—he remembered the voice—called out from the darkness.

"Rest!" it ordered sternly. "A long rest!"

"No," he cried, "no! I will go on. I must go on. Doctor, I've nothing but my work; nothing but my work!"

He struggled on a little way farther. Then his limbs failed him, and he staggered and cried out a great cry.

"It is enough!" he groaned; and his legs gave way under him; and again for a time he knew no more. That was "when he was ill." Yes, that was the time. He came to, remembering that.

It was night, and very cold and very dark. There was no light except a few twinkling stars. He felt faint and listless; and yet somehow purified.

"A weaker man, but not a worse," he told himself. "Please God, I'll go on a bit yet."

He raised the sack on his shoulder, and stumbled forward into the darkness. He felt glad to be moving forward again, even slowly; tried to laugh a little, even tried to sing. His laugh did not sound very good, but the voice—"still a good bit of the old voice," he told himself. Some people had liked to hear him sing, and he liked to hear himself. It was his one vanity; and it was mostly only great love for music.

The singing cheered him on for a little while; but the sack seemed so heavy. Or was it only that he was weaker?

"I'm not the man I was," he groaned. "Not the man I was. It is more than I can bear."

AND just then—just when first his brave heart faltered—some one stepped to his side. He could not see her face for the darkness; but she was a woman; a small woman; scarcely up to his big shoulder. She seemed to be a very fragile little creature. Nevertheless she put her weak shoulder under the great sack and lifted energetically to help him; gasped little gasps that she tried to pass off for laughs. But that was like—why, like a wonderful woman called—called Evelyn.

His heart seemed to swell in him and make him a strong, brave man again. He laughed and opened his sack.

"In with your troubles," he offered. "It's what I'm in this funny old world for; to carry for people. But I think chiefly I was meant to carry for you!"

Greatorex suddenly recollected that he had said something like this to Evelyn. Evelyn Mason! Yes, that was the name. His Evelyn. Could this be she?

The little woman laughed gayly at his speech.

"I'll tell you what, boy," she said—surely she was Evelyn, no one else would call him that, now that he was a worn old man. "Put yours in, too; and then we'll carry the lot between us. Come on—old slow-coach, aren't you? All of them, mind, boy. You're not to keep the tiniest, weeniest back! That's right. I'll have my shoulder under this corner."

"Why?" he asked.

He did not quite understand the little woman. He recollected that he never quite understood Evelyn—not quite; but very nearly.

"Why?" he asked again.

"Because it's the corner that your troubles are in," she explained.

And then he knew quite certainly that she was Evelyn.

He traveled happily and through pleasant country for many days after that. He grew strong again, and he won several more humble races at the country fairs, when she would let him run; but sometimes she would not, for she was very, very careful of him; and that, perhaps, was why he was stronger; and why the sack did not hinder him nearly so much. It was heavy still, and wearisome; but he threw out some of his troubles to lighten her corner of the burden, and she threw out some of hers to lighten him. And often she would make him put the sack down for awhile, and rest in some pleasant place of the journey.

"Let's forget all about our troubles, boy," she would say, "and laugh for a little while; because I have you, and you have me."

They laughed a good deal together, though to other people they seemed a serious woman and a serious man.

"I keep the laughing side for you," she told him.

Greatorex had some recollection that the Evelyn who had helped him in another race—a race that he was resting from—had said that, too; but she kept her serious side for him as well. Ah! There was never any one like Evelyn.

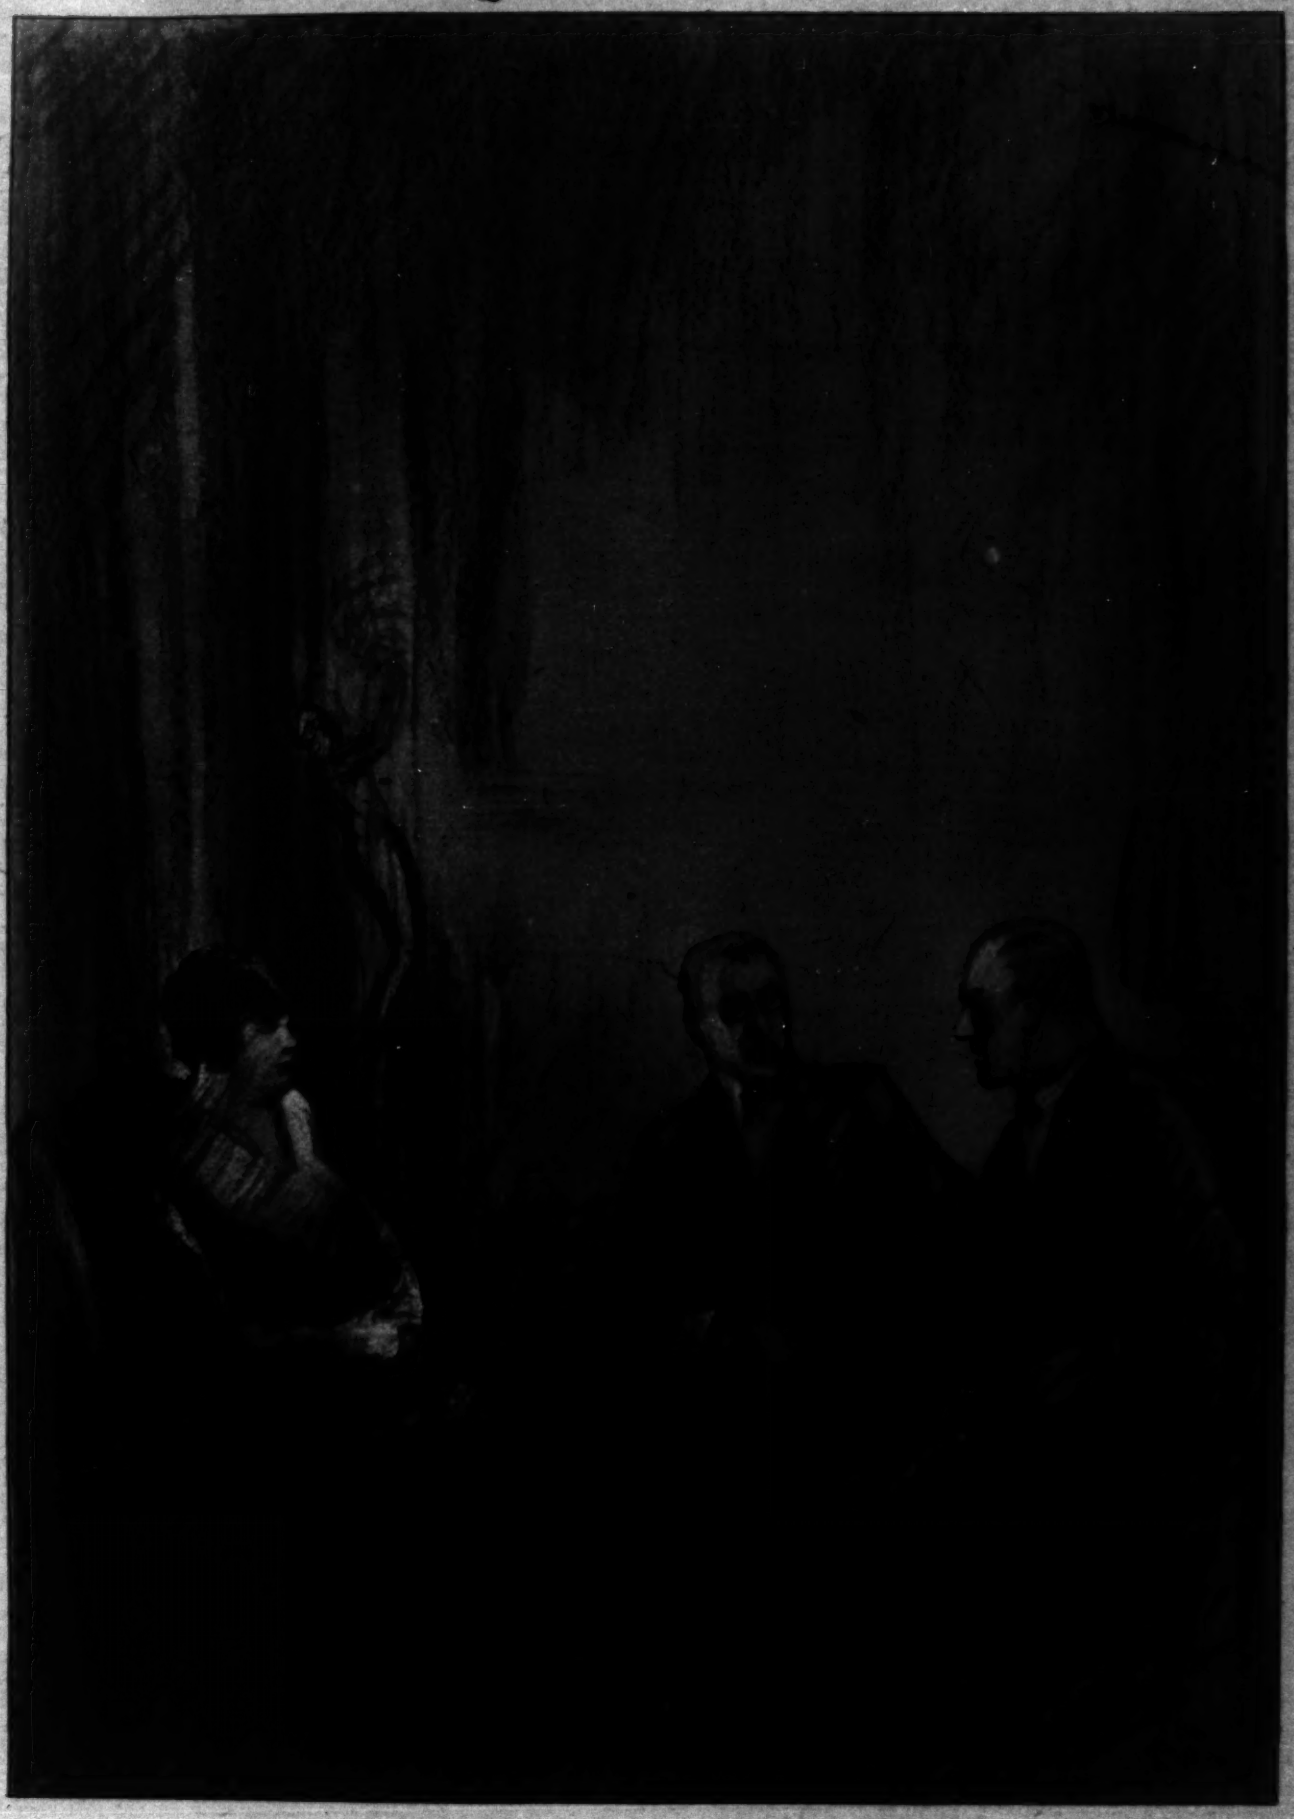
They were happy days—until they came to the great white cross roads; the roads where one goes on alone, and one stays. The one who goes leaves burdens; and other things, other things.

The signpost said that he was the one to go.

She held to him awhile and kissed him.

The Romance of a Million Dollars

By ELIZABETH DEJEANS



West drew an audible breath. "I wish we could rid the neighborhood of that woman—whether we get the pearls or not," he said.

NOT one during that week of helping Kent House. If she left, she would go mad with anxiety—that would be worse than the shame she would feel whenever Breck looked at her. Danger to herself was nothing; if disgrace fell upon the family, perhaps she could be of some comfort to them.

If anything should happen to her I don't want to live."

"I am taking care of her—that's the reason I have Willetts in the house at night."

"That makes me think of it. Hazlett wants you to ask Walter Greene to the party. It's best. He'll make himself useful." ● drive in at the farmhouse gate; then she aroused suddenly. "No, go on," she said. "Talking of the cottage has upset me. I'll send the message over to the farm after I get home."

MARIE complied in silence. Her heart ached so that she felt ill. They came out on the high road, and Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent told her to take the first cross road which would bring them down into the lower road. Unconsciously Marie drove fast, but she did not forget to give warning before they reached the lower road, for they were between high banks, which hid them from cars that might be passing along the lower road. It was a dangerous spot, marked "Danger" on the signpost for all autoists to read, but the driver of the car which was exceeding the speed limit along the lower road apparently neither heard nor saw. Marie's skill and quickness alone saved them from a crashing impact. Instead of jamming on the brakes, which would have made an accident inevitable, she jumped the road and the other car cut across their rear, missing them by a bare six inches. She had measured the speed and the distance of the oncoming car, and had noted the shallowness of the ditch across the road and the level space beyond. They cleared the ditch with only a bump, and on the bit of level Marie whirled her car about. She brought it back into the road and then she looked at Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent. The speeding car had not stopped. It had disappeared around the curve.

They looked at each other, both white and trembling, but neither of them exclaimed over their escape.

"Madam! It was she!" Marie said.

And Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said, "She has come back!"

For in those few moments they had seen distinctly: It was a roadster, with top down, and on the nose of the car was a gold eagle with wings spread, and the driver was Mrs. Smith. A veil enwrapped her, its ends fluttering in the breeze, but the regular features, high color, and raven hair of the woman could be glimpsed through the veil. And the way she sat, as if her fingers were on the keys of a piano and her body arrogantly tense.

"It was she," Marie repeated.

"Yes," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent returned thickly. "She's on her way home. Drive on, child. You saved our lives and hers."

"FAR better to gamble on the chance," West said. "Mr. Haslett and I talked it over on the way out."

It was nine o'clock and West and the lawyer were with Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent in the library. As soon as Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent and Marie had come in from their drive, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had telephoned to Haslett and he had said that he would come out to Kent House that evening. He and West had dined together in town, then West had brought him out in his roadster.

"I shouldn't call it gambling on a chance," Haslett objected quietly. "It's not merely the fact that it's risky to approach her, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, but it is one of my rules in practice not to force my opponent's hand. Nine times out of ten a waiting game is more effective. I know that Breck would not risk his uncle's millions by accepting our offer, but as soon as I felt certain that he had a confederate, it was good tactics to indicate to them that we were willing to pay. Now I advise sitting still—let them make the first move."

He spoke slowly; in speech and manner Burton Haslett was a deliberate man, a handsome man of fifty-five, with iron gray hair and deep set dark eyes. He was a capable office lawyer and an indefatigable worker; for many years he had been Mr. Dunbarton-Kent's legal adviser. "Haslett works too much by rule and precedent and too little by instinct—he's not a good judge of character," Mr. Dunbarton-Kent sometimes complained. "Haslett couldn't be a criminal lawyer—he lacks imagination and he has too conventional a viewpoint. But he's a safe adviser in financial affairs—I know of no one who is a safer guardian of property."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had thought often of her husband's criticism; certainly Haslett had been altogether wrong in Marie's case. Both he and Walter Greene had erred in their judgment of her: Walter Greene had pronounced her "A girl who thinks she knows it all, but is being used by the Brant-Olwin people just the same. She's their tool and doesn't know it." And Haslett had gone further. "She's an innocent looking girl only. Either she is in their employ, or she is connected with Breck in some way." West had been the only person who had been right about Marie—and she herself; her instinct had told her that Marie was honest and nobody's tool.

So Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent appealed to West. "And you really think, West, that we should do nothing—just wait?"

"I do, and mainly because I think that they are desperately anxious to be safely rid of the jewels. I believe that you will hear from them soon."

"What do you call 'soon'?" Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent demanded irritably. "I wish it were over with—no matter what it costs!" She looked ill; the barely averted accident, coupled with the return of Mrs. Smith, had been a shock.

West looked at Haslett. "I think, as West does, that we will hear from them—perhaps in a few days."

"I hope so!" Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said, tensely. "I shan't be able to endure the sight of that stone image at my table much longer! He has more nerve than she—she must have been having a nightmare of capture as she drove along the lower road this afternoon. But for Marie she'd have killed herself and us. And, West, I think they have met at the cottage. It occurred to me today that, as soon as Breck came to Kent House, he asked if he might use the cottage. He stopped spending all his time there only after you and Bella began to use the place. But you were never there at night and he has a key—think of the little cottage being used for such a purpose!"

Again West looked at Haslett, but he did not tell his aunt of Marie's discovery. "It's possible," he said soothingly. "Mr. Haslett and I have talked of its being a possible meeting place, and we think that perhaps it's as well for us that they have had an unsuspected place in which to meet. Aunt Bulah, I beg you not to worry so much. You had a trying experience this afternoon and you have the strain of this party in addition—it would be terrible if you were seriously ill. You have a deal of self-control—do use it."

"West is right, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent," Haslett supplemented. "So much depends just now on nerve and cool judgment. It would never do for you to have a breakdown. I often think of what your husband used to say of you: 'A highly nervous temperament kept well in hand. My dear wife always rises to an occasion—the sun or the moon might fail us, Bulah would fret a little, but she would stand firm, nevertheless."

The tears that rushed to Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's eyes were a relief to taut nerves. She wiped them away, then said resolutely: "Outline your program—I have no intention of taking to my bed."

They did not answer, for some one knocked on the door. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent jumped, but West said quickly: "It's only Willetts—Mr. Haslett telephoned him that he was coming out."

It was Willetts. "I wanted to tell you that Jones has brought me some news," he said. "First of all, that Mrs. Smith stayed in her house only about an hour, then drove off again. Her servants told Jones that she didn't tell them where she was going or

Then she set his feet upon the broad, smooth, white road; the road for the one who is done with burdens. They say there is a great guest house at the end; but none has ever returned to tell.

"Perhaps, dear," she confronted him, "it is for the best. You see, you will be free from the sack that you have borne so bravely for so long. Ah! I know! The great unknown is surely not to fear; not for a good man like you."

"Why!" he cried in astonishment, "I have never been good."

"You have been very, very good to every one," she declared, "and you have been all the world to me! God keep you, dear, in the Great Beyond. Some day I shall travel this road. If there is nothing upon it, we shall rest. And if there it—I wonder—we shall find each other somehow. O, yes! We shall find each other. The infinite cannot be ridiculous. It cannot be that! Anyhow, it is best for you, dear. You see, you will leave the sack. I am glad for that, though—though—I've helped you all I could, haven't I?"

She hung round his neck for a long time. Then she took the sack from him, and gently pushed him upon the lonely road.

HE tried to turn back to her; but there was a fierce flash; and when it was gone a great chasm had opened between them. Across the chasm he saw her sobbing and holding out piteous hands. He called and called, but she did not seem to see him or hear. It was the chasm, he thought, which they called The Great Divide. And one way none can see across it; and the other—who knows? Who knows?

Presently she wiped her eyes, and tried to smile. O! It was such a pitiful smile.

"I ought to be glad," she murmured. "I ought to be very glad. He hasn't to bear it any more, not any more, my dear!"

She picked up the great sack—the corner where her troubles were bulged so now—and put it over her shoulder, and staggered into a stony, thorny lane; the pathway of the One Who Is Left. It was such a big burden and such a little bearer. He tried to leap into the chasm toward her; but unseen hands held him back—kind hands, they seemed; but so strong. Yet they could not restrain him entirely. When they could, he thought, he would be dead; but he was not quite dead yet. No, not dead, so long as he could struggle to get back to Evelyn. He struggled till the veins on his forehead stood out.

"I will not die," he said. "I will not die!"

"My god!" the anaesthetist cried. "He's gone!"

The surgeon dropped the instrument he was about to hand to his assistant, and it rattled on the floor.

"His heart!" he groaned. "His heart. And"—he almost sobbed—"the operation was going to be a success."

"You've done your best," his assistant tried to comfort him. "Your wonderful best."

"Are you sure he's gone?" the surgeon asked. The hands which had been so steady shook, and he tore the India rubber glove which he was pulling off.

"Not quite sure. You listen, chief. A strychnine capsule, Tomlinson. Sharp! Eh, chief?"

"Yes. Give it to him. What a constitution he must have had. It's fighting still!"

The surgeon knelt down with his head to Greatorex's heart.

"What do you think?" the assistant asked.

"I—don't—know. . . . Not actually dead yet, but dying, and won't die without a fight. He was a chap like that. He can't last long. I shan't tell her that the operation would have succeeded. It would only make her feel worse."

"Her?"

"There's always some one—if you find her. He did. Thank God for that."

"O! The little, pale, middle aged lady that——"

"You may call her that. There's a faint beat, Smith."

"Ye-es. Reflex action, I expect."

"Finish the dressing, boys, and get him covered up. Make him look comfortable. If he revives for a second, I shall have her in. Smith, I believe the heart is going. There's quite a chance he may be conscious for a moment. Go and fetch Miss Mason, sister. Mind you give her your arm to hold."

But the sister held the "little, pale, middle aged lady"—she never looked like that to Greatorex—right round the waist.

When Greatorex found that he could not leap into the chasm, he ran along the edge, to keep Evelyn in sight, and in the hope of eluding the unseen hands which guarded him from the chasm.

He could not escape them; and the chasm grew wider; and Evelyn's path sloped away from it. He shouted to her to stay, but she did not hear; or perhaps she could not stop. "The wheels of life always turn on." Somebody said that once. "Evelyn!" he shouted. "Evelyn!"

"You mean I am dead?" "There is no death."

He fought madly with the hands, and seemed to be drawing away from them; but, all at once, a noble white angel stood in front of him, holding up a hand. Greatorex thought that the angel was old and wise, though in face he was young. Along the great white road of infinity they never grow old, he had heard, and never carried burdens. But he would rather be old and burdened with Evelyn.

"Friend," the angel said, "do not be afraid to die. The after life is not to fear."

Greatorex stared at him.

"I wasn't thinking of that," he stated.

He pointed to Evelyn staggering along the bitter path of the one who is left.

"She's so little," he pleaded, "and not strong. She was never very strong after she was ill that time; and the sack—the great sack! I want to carry it for her."

"In life," the angel told him, "we have all our own burden to bear."

"I used to bear some of hers," Greatorex claimed.

"Yes. You bore some of the burdens of many. Therefore there will be forgiveness for other things; even reward."

"I do not want reward," Greatorex declared. "I want her."

"In time," the angel assured him, "she will come here, to you. She has not been judged yet; but she is a good woman; very good as living women go. O, yes! I have no doubt that she will come to you; but she has to bear her burden in life for a while yet."

"It is more," Greatorex cried, "than she can bear."

"No," the angel denied. "It is never that. When it is too great it is taken away. As yours has been."

"You mean I am dead?"

"There is no death. The nearest to it is what you call life. You are upon the threshold of your new being. It is a greater life than any dreamed of by you. Come with me, and you shall learn."

"I don't want anything greater than Evelyn," Greatorex declared.

"I think she will be part of the greatness, some day. You can ask to wait for her. It will be granted, I think. You loved her and love is the greatest thing in what you called life; the part of life which is most alive. You shall ask the reward you most wish for the good which you have done. The ill shall be blotted out."

"Can I ask here?" Greatorex cried.

The angel looked at him thoughtfully; seemed to read his mind.

"You can ask here," he said, "but—well, you can ask."

"I ask," Greatorex said firmly, "to go back to life——"

"It isn't life. This is."

"I mean I want to go to her. That is the reward I ask for; to go back to—whatever you call it—to be with Evelyn; and carry the sack for her."

THE angel drew a deep breath, and shook his head; but, Greatorex thought, not entirely in disapproval.

"You would not be quite what you were," he warned Greatorex; "not able to carry as much as you did. You would never be a strong man again; and you would suffer sometimes."

Greatorex wiped his forehead.

"I'll put up with that," he said, "but—should I be only a burden to her?"

"No," the angel told him. "Not that. Sometimes a burden to yourself, perhaps."

"O!" Greatorex found himself smiling. "That! Well, that's the reward I ask. To carry for her!"

The angel bowed, and pointed to the great chasm.

"It is called suffering," he announced. "There is no other way to go to her."

"Thank you," Greatorex acknowledged. "If you'll tell these hands to let go?"

"God will bless you, Greatorex," the angel said.

The unseen hands released him. He leaped. The first thing which he knew again was pain.

"Don't be too hopeful, dear lady," the surgeon warned her. "He may be half conscious for a little while—even that is not certain—but the chance that he will live is very, very small. I will not say there is none. I have learned not to limit God's mercy. Give him a little morphia, Smith. There is likely to be some pain. Yes, you may hold him. It must be very gently. But it would be—he may be able to hear now. Speak to him."

"Harry! Harry, darling! Harry!"

The second thing which Greatorex knew was that the pain lulled.

The third thing was that somewhere Evelyn was calling. He rallied to the voice as a soldier to his flag.

The fourth thing was that he saw her face for one instant—the loved face! Near, but yet seeming far off.

He lost the sight directly. His eyelids seemed to fall with a noise, as if they were heavy lids of big boxes. But he heard her cry out; felt her kiss him. He gathered himself together for a great effort to speak. He wanted to tell her that it was "all right"; that he would carry her burden.

"He has opened his eyes. The One Who Loved Him cried, "Harry! Harry, my darling! It is Evelyn!"

A slow, slow smile began to spread faintly over his face.

"Chief!" The anaesthetist clutched the surgeon's arm. "Upon my word, I believe——"

"The greatest 'op' that ever was!" the assistant cried enthusiastically. "Good old chief!"

The sister clasped her hands and lifted a laughing face to heaven; a laughing face with tears running down it!

"Who," the surgeon said, "shall limit the mercy of God?"

Greatorex opened his eyes again for half a second. Presently he found a faint voice and muttered.

"The—sack!" he said. His fingers clutched for life's burden to take up again—found Evelyn's hand. He sighed contentedly and fell asleep.

"He will live, my dear," the surgeon announced. He put his hand on Evelyn's shoulder, "And whatever he has to bear—not so much, I hope; not so much as I feared—you will lighten the load for him. Now let him sleep. Yes, yes! It is only sleep."

Greatorex slept and dreamed; dreamed that he was still running the race; and still bearing a burden. But it did not feel very heavy. There was a pale little woman who ran beside him and her brave little shoulder was under a corner of the sack. . . .

People will call the story an allegory; but, thank God, it is truer than that!

The Romance of a Million Dollars

by ELIZABETH DEJEANS

THE STORY THUS FAR

DUNBARTON-KENT'S millions are held in trust by his widow for two nephews, Breck and West, and a niece, Bella. They are to divide the fortune provided none commits a crime—and Breck has been named a thief! Mrs. Brant-Olwin's jewels are stolen, and $100,000 and some guns disappear from beneath Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's pillow. Breck and a mysterious "Mrs. Smith" are suspected, but he denies all. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent centers her efforts on recovering the guns and protecting the family name. Into this atmosphere of mystery and suspicion walks lovable Marie Angoulême to become chauffeuse for Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent. Gradually Marie learns the family secrets and is attracted despite herself toward the despised Breck. She discovers a love affair between Bella and Allen Colfax, a third nephew; herself receives a proposal from West, and is invited by Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent to become a member of the family. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent reveals she has offered Breck $100,000 for the return of the jewels. After a sharp encounter with Bella, Marie visits West's workshop, which also has been Breck's, and which adjoins Mrs. Smith's "spite house." She finds a hair from a sable fur and concludes Breck has been meeting Mrs. Smith in the workshop. She betrays her love when she confronts him with the evidence and flees as he taunts West. West renews his proposal. Servants' gossip indicates the mystery is nearing its climax.

INSTALLMENT XII.

The Woman of Mystery Again.

"WHERE is Marie tonight?" Mrs. Granveston asked. "I'd like to see her."

"Upstairs with a headache," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent answered, and proceeded to angle for an invitation to tea.

Urged by curiosity, Mrs. Granveston said finally, "If you're out driving tomorrow afternoon stop in for tea, both of you." Then she added with caution, "There'll be just the three of us." Mrs. Granveston did not take people up except after due consideration.

Then Mrs. Granveston—and Gibbs—heard more about Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's call upon Mrs. Brant-Olwin. Mrs. Granveston had received with such frigid silence Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's announcement that she intended to give a dinner dance for Mrs. Brant-Olwin that Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had turned to the subject of Marie Angoulême. That matter satisfactorily settled, she took up Mrs. Brant-Olwin again.

"I like her," she said decidedly. "I haven't entertained her before simply because I'd never troubled to discover what a good sort she is. You know that most of the younger set like her and go to her house."

"They'll go almost anywhere where they're given a good time, but that's not the way you and I were reared," Mrs. Granveston retorted severely. "I've never had any desire to know Mrs. Brant-Olwin."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent proceeded. "Well, I had a delightful call on her. She told me all about her life at the Nevada mines, and it was interesting. She makes no pretenses and I like her for it."

"I've never talked to her, but I've heard her talk," Mrs. Granveston said. "Most women of her sort get the roughness smoothed off before they attempt society."

"The bigheartedness and honesty taken out of them, you mean, Lucille. Her grammar doesn't disturb me. I haven't given a big party for a long time, Kent House is growing dull, so I'm going to stir things up a bit, a party for young and old, the sort of thing we used to have at Kent House in my dear husband's time. West has always liked the little widow and he's pleased over it—he telephoned me from town this evening that Mr. Haslett and Ward Wakefield and half a dozen other men are coming. I have Marjorie and Bess Caswell on my list—why don't you have them out for the week-end and some of the fun that's sure to follow the party?"

This was bringing pressure to bear upon Mrs. Granveston, for Marjorie and Bess were granddaughters. Mrs. Granveston's daughter had married a Caswell, who afterward lost his money, and the two girls had few opportunities of meeting eligible men. Then, too, Mrs. Granveston was intrigued by the possibility that there might be something between West and Mrs. Brant-Olwin—that would be a good reason for Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent giving the party. West was regarded as noncapturable, but Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was a healthy sixty, and, though well off, West might not object to the Brant-Olwin millions as a stop gap. When he came into his fortune the combination of fortunes would be stupendous. Engaged to a Dunbarton-Kent, there was not a north shoreite who would not pay court to Mrs. Brant-Olwin.

LATER on, seated beside Marie's bed, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent told her about it and chuckled. "I'll make them swallow her whole. Mrs. Brant-Olwin is a good sort, Marie—she has that big house near the country club, you know. She's not our kind, but she's genuine, and I want her for a friend. I think you'll like her and I know she'll like you."

Marie slipped her hand into Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's and clung to it. "I have not seen Mrs. Brant-Olwin, but if you like her, madam, I know that I shall also," she said softly.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent did not tell Marie that when she had told Mrs. Brant-Olwin that afternoon about Marie—the same history which she had imparted to Mrs. Granveston—Mrs. Brant-Olwin had shown no telltale self-consciousness, even when Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had said, "Some woman she met casually in Burton Haslett's office building told her that I wanted a chauffeur, but wouldn't give her name, so Marie's as ignorant as I am of who did us a kindness. I suppose it was meant as a joke, but it has turned out a blessing." Mrs. Brant-Olwin had listened interestedly, but all she had said was, "She sounds good to me. I call her a lucky kid."

"I'm going to have them all here, the little set that's held out against Mrs. Brant-Olwin," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent told Marie. "They're going to meet you, too. Between us we're going to bring them around."

"I will help you all I can, madam."

"Tomorrow morning we'll have breakfast in my room, then set to on the invitations," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said vigorously. "We'll have two of the disaffected in for lunch, and when they're gone we'll go for a ride and stop for tea with Mrs. Granveston—she wants to meet you. I'll have some one for dinner, too. Breck has his meals in his room whenever there's company, so we won't see much of him," she added.

"Yes, madam," Marie said, with as little expression as possible, though she was immensely relieved.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent knew that Marie had had an unhappy morning. West had not looked cheerful when he had bidden her a hasty good-by, and when she had gone into Marie's room afterward and had found her asleep she had seen that she had been crying. She had covered her up, reflecting as she did so that, in matters of the heart, men were "perfect fools!" But she asked no questions. She kissed Marie good night and told her to go to sleep and sleep soundly.

When she had gone Marie wrote to West:

"Dear Monsieur West: I have thought, and I must tell you that I cannot leave Kent House. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent I love too dearly to do it, and this seems my home. I beg of you not to feel frightened about me. I shall be careful and be only with Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent until you return. This I promise. It is only a short letter I write, but one which is full of gratitude to you for all your kindness to me. Affectionately, MARIE ANGOULÊME."

She had been thinking about it all evening and had decided: She could not leave Kent House. If she left, she would go amid with anxiety—that would be worse than the shame she would feel whenever Breck looked at her. Danger to herself was nothing; if disgrace fell upon the family, perhaps she could be of some comfort to them.

NOT once during that week of helping to launch Mrs. Brant-Olwin and—quite unconscious of any efforts in her own behalf—of helping to launch herself, not once did Marie see Breck. She did not even hear him pass through the hall, though often she listened intently. He was at Kent House, for every night she saw the line of light beneath his door. But he moved so noiselessly; Marie shivered when she thought of the way in which he went in and out of a door.

In twos or fours Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's guests came to lunch or dinner and left converted. Marie saw the big woman at a different angle, as an entertaining and skillful hostess and justly a leader in her set. Marie admired her. She was so interested in the way in which Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was making "the disaffected swallow Mrs. Brant-Olwin," that it did not occur to her that she herself was a success.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent did not need to repeat Marie's history; Mrs. Granveston had done it for her, for, at her cautious tea for three, Mrs. Granveston had taken a fancy to Marie. Attempting conversation in rather bad French was a fad of Mrs. Granveston's.

"Speaking with you in French has given me great pleasure, madam. I hope we may speak together often," Marie had said with such a genuine desire to please that Mrs. Granveston became her advocate.

"She's a wonderfully sweet, pretty girl," Mrs. Granveston declared to her friends. "Such an interesting history, too, and authentic. I hope Bulah will adopt her, if she hasn't done so already. She needs a devoted companion."

By no means all of Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's friends took Mrs. Granveston's view of the matter, but those who came to Kent House during that week were first surprised, then charmed, by Marie's quaint courtesy, soft accent, and her unassuming wish to please. Without her realizing it, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent drew out of her vivid descriptions of the Hudson bay country and of ambulance work in France, tender recollections of her childhood in St. Felix and of the good aunt and the dear father who had gone. She chuckled over her successful campaign, but the chuckle was always followed by a sigh. When the telephone rang she jumped and she scanned her letters as if under a life sentence and looking for a reprieve. Several times Gibbs brought Willetts to Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's room and Marie knew that they talked earnestly together. Frequently it was West who telephoned, and then Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent would send for her and the usual questions would follow:

"How are you, little Marie?"

"Very well, thank you, monsieur. I find myself busy and happy with Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent."

"That's right. Nothing has happened to frighten you?"

"O, no, monsieur! Please do not be so anxious about me."

Marie could hear him sigh. "I think about you night and day. Take good care of yourself—perhaps better days are coming. I hope so."

"He is waiting also," Marie thought to herself.

MRS. DUNBARTON-KENT had long talks with West over the telephone. "I am consulting constantly with Haslett," was the gist of what he told her. "We're doing everything we can to locate that person. We have agents in all the cities. We have decided on the limit sum we thought you should offer for the property you want—in case we can approach the owner. Haslett is writing you about it. I suppose there are no signs of a return?"

"No. Jones says the servants tell him they have not heard a word from her since she left. But, West, Willetts is certain that he is never in his room now, after late at night. Willetts is in and out of the house now at night—I thought it was safer to have him. How he makes his exit is a mystery to us."

"I don't know that it matters—even if you find it, I wouldn't interfere. But about Marie—take care of her for me, Aunt Bulah. If anything should happen to her I don't want to live."

"I am taking care of her—that's the reason I have Willetts in the house at night."

"That makes me think of it. Haslett wants you to ask Walter Greene to the party. It's best. He'll make himself useful."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent sighed. "Whatever you and Haslett think best."

"Don't be downhearted, Aunt Bulah. I believe it will come out as we want it. I know I want to see Marie. It's all I can do to keep away. Is it of any use, do you think?"

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent administered what comfort she could. "She said to me this morning, 'It will be nice when he comes back.'"

"She said that!" West exclaimed. "Bless her heart!"

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent turned away from the telephone with a sigh. She hoped that Marie was not merely persuading herself into marrying West; that would be a poor foundation to build on. The child looked so grave sometimes. Still, all that was in the future; the present held troubles enough without imagining others. Bella had written from Philadelphia that she would arrive at nine o'clock on Wednesday night, and the announcement had not raised Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's spirits. It would end the tête-à-tête breakfasts with Marie, which she had enjoyed, and Breck would appear again in the dining room. Then two days of tiring bustle over a party in which she felt only an anxious interest. It was an intolerable state of things! Every time she and Marie drove through the park entrance and she glimpsed Mrs. Smith's house her face burned.

Marie experienced the same discomfort. Her eyes were drawn to the Smith house. She believed Mrs. Smith was still there, keeping herself hidden; that she and Breck met in the cottage. They passed Colfax hall entrance every day, but they never met Colfax. Marie was certain that somewhere he and Bella were together.

IN the afternoon of the day on which Bella was expected, Marie drove Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent to the farm by the road they had taken on the day of Marie's arrival at Kent house. She said she wanted to leave a message at the farm, but Marie suspected that she wanted a closer view of Mrs. Smith's house. Hitherto Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had avoided the road that passed the cottage, but today she was particularly depressed; time was passing and nothing had been accomplished; the storm might break at any moment. She was thinking grimly that the party would be a good setting for an expose—Breck taken from their midst—the staring faces of her guests—quite a drama!

"Drive by the cottage," she said to Marie. "It's the shortest way to the farm."

Marie determined that when they passed the place she would not glance at it, but she did, and at the house that topped it. Mrs. Smith's house presented a smiling appearance, its window shades up and smoke curling from its chimney. It was a contrast to the grimly forlorn stone cottage; the shades of its casement windows were down, and the windows themselves were streaked and dusty. Marie had a vivid recollection of how the interior looked.

They passed it in silence, but after a moment or two Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said with suppressed feeling, "Poor little cottage! Many's the evening I've spent there with my dear husband, he reading aloud to me. He had a wonderful voice." Then she added with an indignation that would not be suppressed, "I ought to have torn it down when that woman built her house, but first I let Breck use the place. He slept there all summer. Then Bella with her clay——"

She had paused so abruptly that Marie was startled into looking at her. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's lips had fallen apart and her eyes stared. They were in the roadster, and she leaned out and gazed back at the cottage. Then she sat back, silent and grim. "How convenient——" she muttered.

Marie guessed the suspicion which had flashed into her mind. It had occurred to her for the first time, as it had occurred to West when he saw the hair he had found, that the cottage had been the meeting place of those two. West had said that he would not tell Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent about it, but she had come upon it herself.

She was silent until Marie was about to drive in at the farmhouse gate; then she aroused suddenly. "No, go on," she said. "Talking of the cottage has upset me. I'll send the message over to the farm after I get home."

MARIE complied in silence. Her heart [illegible]

BEAUTY AND THE BEACH

BY W. E. HILL

Chicago Sunday Tribune

The picnic lunch. It takes a lot of finesse to nibble the leg of a fried chicken as daintily as Caddy is doing, and she isn't losing a bit of her magnetism with the boys while so doing.

Dawn of a horrid doubt in the mind of Ethel, the beach flapper. A lifeguard has just come along, and Ethel is wondering if brains are everything after all. Her young man is awfully good and awfully kind, and all that—but, O, what a gorgeous shape (we quote Ethel's thoughts) that lifeguard has!

Back to normalcy is Jessie May's motto. Jessie May is having just as much fun as any of those awful beach flappers who show everything they have to show—the brazen monkeys!

The lass who loved a sailor. However, the sailor's hat may have been a present from a girl friend. You never can tell.

Beach siren drying the permanent wave in the warm breeze. It may not be quite as permanent after a day on the beach.

All we could learn of the way was that somewhere after Bunyoni, two days or two hours, according to differing informants, we would come to Kabale, the English outpost. It was after two hours of the wide road that we saw on a high hill a cluster of roofs against the sky and the flutter of red and blue bunting—the Union Jack.

On one hill was the Church of England mission and on another that of the white fathers, and on the middle hill the government boma and the bungalows of the officials. Commissioner Adams and Capt. Persse divided our party for luncheon, and in dusty khaki and mud stained boots we lunched among the roses of California and chints and china and silver of old England, then scurried for our tents and hot baths and the white raiment in the airtights.

The porters for whom we had sent a runner ahead were ready for us, and next morning after the customs formalities—and the formalities were solemn ones here, listing every bit of foodstuff we were bringing into the country!—we sent them on ahead, following at 1 o'clock after more sociability.

After the first downward plunge of the road we could ride our wheels, and the fact that our first day's march was estimated at twenty-six miles did not daunt us.

For six days we journeyed through a beautiful country, mountainous, though with none of the great single peaks that we had grown accustomed to in the M'Fumbiro volcanoes, but a continual succession of ranges and ridges and valleys. Water continued scarce, and we guarded our precious pails of it in our tents, as the boys used it with the same prodigality as if the land were flowing with it. Their unconcern, when they knew the facts in the case as well as we did, was a marvelous application of the "Take no thought for the morrow" admonition.

At Lubando, where water was scarcest, I saw a little black tent boy, the "boy" of one of our boys, calmly empty out one of the two pails of jealously hoarded water, in order to use the pail to stand on to arrange the bed nets.

We had heard that there was water five miles away and we thrust that empty pail into his hand and sent him forth to verify the rumor.

Natives everywhere had been eager for "dower"—medicine, that is—but on this march they were simply clamorous, and we could never get settled in camp an afternoon before the procession of chiefs and cohorts and private citizens would begin to trickle in and come to attention before the tents.

"Natake dower, mama" ("Want medicine, mother,") was the invariable request, accompanied by illustrative showings of scratches and ulcers and rubbings of the stomach and various seats of pain. For really serious cases we consulted the medicine book and Mr. Akeley's experience, but in general our remedies did not vary much and our prescription rule was simple—we gave a chief three times as much of anything as we gave a minion.

I drew the line at wives. When they began on the ailments of the dear ones at home I said "Quaheri" (Good-by), for the dear ones were unlimited.

Cattle and wives were a man's wealth—the cattle were a luxury and the wives an asset, for the wives worked. A private citizen, if he was sadly impecunious, could only afford one or two wives and those perhaps in succession, but a really thriving chief would have a lot of them scattered about his village. Old Rhakadiga informed me he had sixty-five. He wanted to know how many Herbert had, and I, knowing my husband's caste would live or die in my words, made answer—and I have never yet revealed, to Herbert or another, just how many wives I told that chief Herbert possessed!

In Uganda you do not shake hands, even with a chief. The natives greet you with a ceremonious clapping, squatting down for greater respect. White gowns were prevalent among the natives, signs of the Arab influence, and we saw a good many Arab and Indian traders marching along the highways, with their goods on the heads of native carriers. We had seen few Arabs in the Congo and no Indians are allowed to enter.

Jan. 10 we reached Mbarara, a British post, where we had arranged for automobiles to come out and meet us and carry us and our two hundred loads the hundred and eighty miles to Kampala and Victoria Nyanza. Our walk was over. We had walked a thousand miles in all. And there were perpendicular miles that I felt ought to be counted as two.

We did the next hundred and eighty miles in two days, and then we waited two weeks for the last car, which had broken down, to be found and brought in. It was, of course, the ear with the gorilla skins and all the things without which we could not leave. At our former pace of fifteen miles a day we could have marched the goods in in less time—and those seven cars for two days cost us $2,400.

Kampala is built on seven lovelier hills than Rome; a thriving place of about two hundred whites and thousands of Indians and natives in the teeming bazaar streets. At Kampala our safari was really over. Here were shops and hotels and clubs and telephones and ice tinkling in tall glasses—that ice we had dreamed about on the Ruindi—here were movies and private dramatics and dances and everything.

Ahead of us now the tourist trail stretched again—across Victoria Nyanza, that lovely inland sea, up to Jinja, where from the Nyanza flashes down a cataract that is the very birth of the Nile, to Kisumu, where twenty-four hours on a most comfortable train through a wonderful country brings one to the flat tin roofs of Nairobi—Nairobi, whose wide street of shops and rickshaws add so foreign a flavor to us, but where the old timers gather at the Norfolk bar and "Them days is gone forever" is the burden of their song; Nairobi of stone country houses and private racing stables, and tea and terraces; Nairobi, where a motor's ride away lions are roaring and the glistening Kikuyus, naked but for leaves and paint, are dancing beneath their sacred tree.

Down from Nairobi the tourist trail stretches on to the sea—through a game preserve where giraffe and zebra, and antelope stare in your compartment windows or gallop past, and there from Mombasa, that island of native quarters and Portuguese ruins, of English country clubs and golf, of long rows of cocoanut palms and beaches, where the Indian ocean rolls lazily in and painted junks rock in the tide and the cattle bellow in the holds—from Mombasa the trail streams out across the seas to home.

Behind us was the old Africa that we knew and had learned to love, the Africa that had been going on from the beginning of time, the wild and lovely land untouched of man; lost to us were the wild spaces, the splendor of waters, the mad glory of volcanoes, the fairy isles of hidden lakes, the enchantment of cloud wrapped heights; lost the solitude and the beauty and the freedom that make our civilization seem a prison and a market place.

Gone, too, was the kindly security of the wilderness, the open tent flap, the money box left carelessly without, the unguarded ways. I was sorry, sorry to take the littlest explorer back to streets of charging motors and houses of barred doors—I was sorry enough to face again with her the once familiar perils of civilization.

Africa had been so worth while. All of it—or almost all of it—had been worth the price. And no after years can take the memories from us—the black outline of a lion against the moonlight . . . the sheen of the golden crested crane . . . women with water jars crossing the opal sands of Tanganyika . . . the throbbing of drums through the night . . . gorillas slouching through their sun flooded meadows.

The Teaching of Monsieur the Marquis

"What do you say, child? He is pledged as the servant of this accursed republic? Marcel Tissot?"

"But yes, monsieur. He is guardian of the seigniory and——" She broke off, meeting his eyes, reading them and his meaning. "Ah!" she cried, "you think he would betray, denounce you? No, no, monsieur!"

"Would he not? Is it so sure? He owes nothing to the d'Aurillacs, your cousin. And there is a price upon my head, Germaine."

"What then, monsieur! He is rough, Marcel, and he loves the republic, but he is honest. Betray you? No—never, never! He will help you. I will get the jewels, monsieur."

Absolute confidence was in her voice. D'Aurillac, it seemed, accepted it; he stood silent, watching as she went to a great press in a recess and unlocked it; once he put his hand to his side with a wince and gesture of pain that she did not see. She put the jewels upon the table, a little pile of worn cases, and closed and relocked the press. He touched them and looked at her; a sudden flush turned his pale face red.

"My sister is to owe you her dowry, it seems, Germaine. And I, my life, since, did you choose, you could with a word send me to death. As you well might do, child, remembering—tush—what is done is done, and I your debtor. Take my thanks, and believe them gratefully spoken if you can."

"There is no need of them, monsieur. I remember nothing. For the rest—you are a D'Aurillac and the brother of Mademoiselle Diane," the girl answered coldly.

CRIMSON and white, and crimson again, she looked away. Regarding her, the face of the marquis was flushed and gloomy. In the old days of the château it had happened often that the gentle curé had found himself with a third pupil—Monsieur the Marquis had had eyes ardent and eager for the budding loveliness that had now bloomed into this glorious rose. There had been stolen moments of which the gay little Diane knew nothing; whispers of flattery and fondness into shy ears that scarce grasped their sense; once a sudden embrace and kiss upon red, trembling, childish lips.

But no more until the day of his departure for Paris, when, carried away by a passion real enough, dazzled by the girl's beauty, he had caught her in his arms with a torrent of words that there was no mistaking—words that, rather, were brutally plain, and savoring more of force than persuasion. For a moment she had yielded, looking with great eyes bewildered and wide; then with a sound of horror, comprehension, misery, had struck both hands upon his breast in a blow that made Monsieur the Marquis stagger.

"But no!" she cried. "Never—never! Sooner you shall kill me! Sooner will I kill myself, monsieur!" A knife was upon the table—she snatched it up. In no vain threat, for it was as her arm descended and the blade was at her bosom that he had caught and wrested it away. She had flung herself upon her knees; shamed, shocked, sobered, he had watched her young body shake with the violence of her sobbing.

That was the picture of her which he had carried to Paris—Paris, from which, at the bursting of the storm to whose premonitory signs and mutterings he had, like a thousand others, been obstinately blind and deaf, he had fled with his sister to England. Now he stood here, exiled, proscribed, in a sense her suppliant; certainly at her mercy. If he possessed a sense of humor he did not smile. He turned presently to the jewel cases and began to bestow them in the inner pockets of his coat. The last was in his hand when Germaine started, turned swift and alert. Together there came the sounds of a creaking upon the stair, of an approaching step

BY W. E. HILL

Copyright 1922 by The Chicago Tribune.

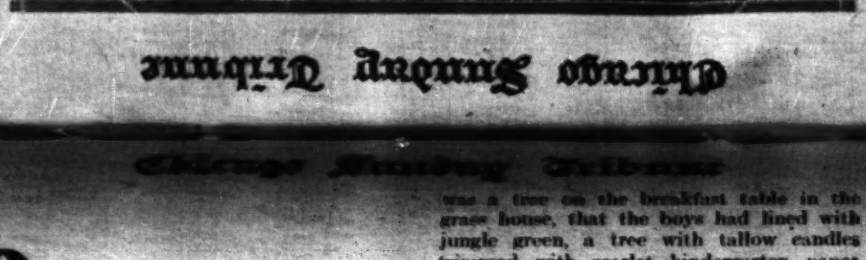
Just a beautiful beach mamma watching to see that little Bently doesn't go too near the wild, wild waves.

The little tease. Harriet is just one of the boys. As soon as she finishes splashing some one who doesn't want to be splashed, Harriet will join the picnic party on the beach and put a stuffed egg down Cousin May's neck, maybe, or play at leapfrog with Uncle Arthur.

Two modest and retiring beach flappers, with everything on but placards labeled "Follow Me."

Something pretty nifty in fringe for beach wear.

Ruthie and Bonnie May love nothing better than a good athletic romp on the beach. They are having such a spirited game of catch with a rubber ball. Ruthie is pretending she is Babe Ruth and Bonnie May is making believe she is Carl Mays, so you can easily see how much in earnest they are.



All we could learn of the way was that somewhere after Bunyoni, two days or two hours, according to differing informants, we would come to Kabale, the English outpost. It was after two hours of the wide road that we saw on a high hill a cluster of ropes against the sky and the flutter of red and blue bunting—the Union Jack.

the car with the gorilla skins and all the things without which we could not leave. At our former pace of fifteen miles a day we could have marched the goods in in less time—and those seven cars for two days cost us $2,400.

How Santa Claus Came to a Little American Girl in Africa on Christmas Morning; a Thousand Mile Walk, and Good-by to the Dark Continent.

LAST INSTALLMENT.

Out of the Jungle.

THE Ruindi plains had been reported so hot and feverish that we had left Alice with Miss Hall at Ruchuru, but as soon as we saw the Ruindi we realized that its reputation had merely suffered like so many other reputations in Africa and succumbed to slander, and that it was no more unhealthy, at least our particular place in it, than a Colorado plateau.

Hot it certainly was, hunting at noon under the down pouring rays of the sun a few miles from the equator, hot with a dry, burning, brazen heat that made the dream of tinkling ice in a glass of grape juice—at least I thought of grape juice!—an irresistible mockery, and the mention of it a criminal offense, but one could always be comfortable in our tents or grass houses, even at noon, so as Christmas approached and our departure was postponed, we sent a runner in to Commissioner Van de Ghinste asking him to try to find a white escort to send out with Miss Hall and Alice, to reunite the family.

He had a hope the agent territorial or the chef de poste might be abstracted from his duties, but it was not a strong hope, even for the honorarium we were only too glad to offer, so we were tremendously exhilarated when a runner brought news that "la petite" and Priscilla Hall would be sent out to us with a white escort unspecified.

It was a three day march, and we did not expect them until the 22d, but on the 21st the boys' cry of "Toto hapa!"—"Baby here!"—brought me out of my tent, and there across the plain flashed the green and scarlet of the machila—the hammock—of the littlest explorer. Through the glasses we caught the dark line of the porters and then the gleam of a robe—and there came the white father, the father superior, gallantly walking in new shoes, too, it developed—with Priscilla mounted upon his donkey—and a donkey is the most priceless animal in the Congo.

In this wise they had made the journey in two days, the only difficulty having been to keep Alice in her hammock. She loved to walk with the rest, though her small legs could not keep up a hurried pace, and as fast as we changed porters and languages she learned the new words for "Put me down," and used them vigorously.

But, though Alice made Christmas for us, the problem remained of how to make Christmas for Alice. We were a month behind our plans. We had expected to reach Nairobi in British East Africa by the holidays, and now in Nairobi there were Christmas letters and Christmas packages and stores and shops—and here in the heart of Africa we had only two trifling toys, long cherished for emergencies—and a 6 year old's unfaltering trust in Santa Claus.

Laboriously she spelled out her letters to him, detailing the things she longed for, and dismayedly we read them to each other. Then diplomatically we began to explain. Santa was so far away. . . . Africa had no snow for his sleigh. . . . He could get only to Nairobi. . . . We would find things there. . . . Later . . .

But Alice would have none of that. "He'll get as far as he can and then send a runner," she announced, and as our explanations grew more pessimistic her trust grew more passionately clinging.

"O, Mummie, let's hang up stockings anyway, and see what he can do!"

We hung up the stockings and Santa did a great deal. It was the most exciting Christmas the small girl remembered. There was a tree on the breakfast table in the grass house, that the boys had lined with jungle green, a tree with tallow candles trimmed with scarlet kindergarten paper shining away among piles of packages—and the stocking was bulging.

There was father's long hidden candy and there was some of Martha's modeling clay, and Martha's own gold chain and locket, and mother's sacred pastels, and homemade painting books, and picture books, and story books, and ivory bracelets, an elephant's hair bracelet made by Uncle Akeley, and there were native stools and baskets from Priscilla, who had been preparing a bountiful Christmas for every one—and we all managed to produce and exchange a great many surprising and chaffing gifts.

And later another runner came from Santa Claus—this time by way of Luofu, where the father superior was now with Monsieur Flamand, the administrator of the Ruindi—bringing gifts from them both to all of us—rare spears and unusual ornaments and feathers, baskets, and bells.

The boys entered heartily into the occasion. Each one of them, down to the cook and the last grinning little helper in a dirty towel, presented himself at each tent on the first call for hot water, each with an offering, a cluster of the red gold flowers of the place thrust in a can or bottle. By the time we were through dressing every tent looked like a flower show, and the boys were expectantly awaiting the returns.

Previous counsel had decided upon a lump sum to each boy from us all. It was given, and the explanation that it was from us all was pounded in, but the boys promptly pursued every individual of us, yearning volubly for tokens. It was our continual experience that a personal gift, however slight, was much more appreciated by the native than any collective generosity.

Three days later, the 28th of December, we broke camp at dawn and started to march across the plains, taking our last look at the shadowy herds whose horns were glinting in the level rays of morning.

Three days brought us back the familiar way through Mai ja Moto, the streams of boiling water, and along the Ruchuru river to Ruchuru, where our porters were already ordered to take us out of the Congo. For two days camp was a furious activity of packing, casing the gorilla skins in waxed cloth, and winding the skeletons with straw, listing trophies and ivory for the obliging customs, and seeing to the sealing of the guns, for we were going east into British territory, where we had no license to hunt.

The Belgian officials were more than kind in helping us off; they were amused at our lack of time, the commodity which is so universal in Africa, but their hospitality did everything in their power. We were much impressed by the fine type of official we found everywhere in the Congo, by their sense of responsibility towards the native and the seriousness of their colonization. Far from perpetrating "atrocities," the Belgian government is now considered to err on the side of leniency, favoring the black against the white.

Toward us their hospitality was the sort that would have put the early days of the open hearted west to shame, and never in any dealing, official or business, was there the slightest attempt to profit by us.

We had an instance of the scrupulousness of their attitude at Kivu. There we had been allowed the government boat for an excursion to the lava fields if we would pay the price of the gasoline. We paid the presented bill without remark, for the gasoline cost did not seem excessive for the heart of Africa. Nearly two months later a black runner brought out to us on the Ruindi a packet of francs from Kivu—the chef de poste had discovered that the gasoline had been billed to them at a less price and sent on to us the benefit of the reduction. Our next experience with gasoline, in Uganda, was less heartening.

New Year's morning we started to march out of the Congo, leading our two hundred porters east on a way that could only be vaguely outlined by the Belgians into the British protectorate of Uganda. Some time that day, high on the interminable mountains, we crossed the eastern frontier of the Congo, and our first night's camp, by a water hole in a plain, could be designated only as somewhere in Uganda.

In Uganda, for the first time, water was both scarce and bad. We always boiled it, and that night we put in alum in addition, and carried several jars of it with us in case the conditions were worse ahead.

The roads in Uganda were superb, old native roads, improved by white man's oversight, and the bicycles would have been tremendously useful if the roads had not insisted upon a continual climb. Our second night's camp was on a mountain peak — Behungi, 8,000 feet up, space swimming about us and the solitudes of Africa streaming out from every side.

Down went the wide road the next morning, and then up again, winding along the mountain sides, through forests of bamboo and marshes of papyrus—a marvelously beautiful country. And then we came to Lake Bunyoni.

I still think that Kivu is the most beautiful lake in the world, but if there were another lake more beautiful than Kivu, Bunyoni would be that one. It is a fairy of a lake, with indented shores fringed with papyrus and bamboo and lotus—the only place in Africa where those three meet. In and out the papyrus flashed birds that seemed a thousand colors, blue and purple, gold and scarlet, black and orange; white ducks drifted in flocks upon the waterlike white clouds, and all along the shore ran the purple line of the lotus of the Nile, sweet with a heady sweetness.

It was the southern shore of this lake that had been depopulated by the pygmy raids and no natives lived there now, but here, in the middle of it, were little clusters of grass huts, perched so picturesquely on the highlands that it was hard not to believe in the artistic feeling of the builders. But inaccessibility in case of war counted for a great deal in those high locations.

We had sent out for canoes and the men paddled along the shores, sending out ringing calls until a flotilla of twenty-seven was assembled. The canoes were dug out logs and the paddles had long straight handles and heart shaped blades.

We sent most of our goods over that afternoon and the next morning we got the rest of them and the two hundred porters over, and then we had a desperately hard time getting a tribe whose only knowledge of money was of rupees to accept francs in payment. Finally a chief mediated for us and the francs became quite popular.

LOVE STAYS

By JUNE PROVINES

She Might as Well Go to Mrs. Cartwright's Dinner Party, She Reflected; She Was in No Mood for Solitude; and So—

IT was too hot for dinner parties. Paula thrust a high comb into her shining hair and sat, hesitating, at her dressing table in the cool intimacy of silken negligee, going over the matter in her mind. But she had promised Mrs. Cartwright to come, and it might upset her plans to be minus one guest. Anyway, might as well go, she reflected; she was in no mood for solitude.

"And I do hope she doesn't have that insipid Jimmy Mills there," she added petulantly, as she took from its hanger a pale-colored frock with a jerk that threatened its delicate frailness. The young man, the memory of whom aroused such indignation on the part of Paula, was a young man of the town who had been boring her for some time past with his ardors. The white roses which scented the room with their fragrance even then were his tribute, and Paula smiled disdainfully into the argent of her mirror as she selected the loveliest of them and fastened them to her gown with a jeweled pin. They adorned her fittingly, but the smile was neither for the enchanting reflection that smiled back at her nor for the roses.

"It's inconsistent to wear his flowers and snub him," she was thinking. "But they add just the final touch of coolness." She was right; they did. From the crown of her burnished hair to the tips of daintily shod feet, she was exquisite. Eyes the color of Lake Michigan on a cloudless day assured her from under alluring, up-curving eyelashes.

PAULA arrived a few minutes early at Mrs. Cartwright's. As she passed under the pillared portals, she thought of her hostess' garden, and, suddenly audacious, she fled lightly down the steps and followed a flagged path that wound around the house. The thought of the garden had been distinctly pleasant.

"I'll go there just a second," she thought, lifting dainty skirts to avoid the risk of catching them on the hedges. "I don't want glaring lights and chatter just yet!"

The Cartwright garden was English, and was a place of old hedges, masses of hydrangea, purple and pink Canterbury bells; of delicate primroses and four o'clocks. Paula particularly loved the yellow evening primroses, which were barely distinguishable now in the twilight. Dreaming roses burst their souls in fragrance and a delicious peace brooded over the cool garden.

With the tip of her finger Paula traced the inscription on a quaint sun dial.

Hours fly,
Flowers die.
New days, new ways.
Love stays.

Thus it read.

"Love stays," she breathed. And she crossed the walk to where an old gazing ball, held by a merry shepherd, faced the sun dial across the way.

All envious and profane away,
This is the shepherd's holiday, warned the quaint lettering.

Wandering on down the path, Paula came suddenly to a turn, and a few feet ahead of her saw a man standing. She felt a sudden, selfish sense of disappointment. She had wanted the garden all to herself for a few moments.

"But it's time to go back, anyway," she reflected, and turned quietly to go, taking care that not a single rustle betrayed her presence. Probably one of the dinner guests, she thought, but she turned suddenly and looked back. The man was standing in the same position; as mute and immovable as the shepherd of the gazing ball. He seemed to be under the spell of the garden; wrapped in its peaceful silence. Something about the poise of his head was vaguely familiar to her, and she probed her memory in vain as she went back to the house.

"So glad you've come," gushed Helen Cartwright a few seconds later. "I'm giving you the guest of honor for your dinner partner tonight. My dear, he's such a love. Be sure to be nice to him!"

Behind Paula's sweet answering smile there lay, mocking, a bit of cynicism, had her hostess enough perception to see it. Paula had her own ideas about any man Mrs. Cartwright called a love. It meant, usually, that he was a be-spatted, smooth haired darling who smoked monogrammed cigarettes; who was in his element in a ladies' drawing room at tea time. So, in spite of Mrs. Cartwright's final admonition, she determined to wound the amour propre of the aforesaid guest of honor in devious ways before the evening was over.

A FEW moments later a handsome dark head bent slightly in acknowledgment of Paula's indifferent greeting, and a pleasantly deep voice murmured a conventional phrase or two.

"Be nice to him, my dear," warned Mrs. Cartwright again, pausing to shake a tapered forefinger at them before she hurried to more arriving guests.

Paula glanced up at the man who had just been presented to her. Again there came that fleeting sense of recognition as she recognized in him the man she had come upon in the garden. She had not seen his face then, but it was obviously the same man. He didn't look exactly like a man who would relish being called a love. Tall, lithe, with a face that looked as if it might have been tanned by prairie winds and a beating sun.

"Aren't you in the habit of being nice to people?" The man at her side interrupted her reflections with the question.

Paula started; and he went on:

"Anyway, I don't think you are being particularly nice to me. You have half finished your oysters and you haven't said a word."

Soft lips curled mockingly, Paula answered him, vouchsafing him only a careless glance.

"But the oysters are awfully good," she said.

To her surprise she saw a faint red creep up in her dinner partner's face. It was almost imperceptible under the brown of his skin.

"Why, he's blushing," Paula ejaculated mentally. Who would have thought that one of Helen's loves could blush so easily? But perhaps her remark had been nastily rude. To make up for it she turned and, with swift contrition, started to say: "So, you see, I did need to be told to be nice"; but before she opened her lips she saw a mocking light in his eyes that belied the sensitive blush.

"He doesn't need pity," she decided, and instead asked carelessly, "Didn't Mrs. Cartwright tell me you had just come from the west?" Her tone was painstakingly polite and was more unpleasant than her previous sauciness. He answered in like tone:

"From Wyoming yesterday afternoon." His tone and his glance across the flower filled epergne to where Sally Blair, entrancingly blonde and flowerlike, was merrily holding forth in animated conversation with the men on each side of her, piqued Paula. But she made no attempt to draw his interest toward herself. She turned to the man on her left and began chatting in friendly fashion, favoring the westerner with an intriguing view of a white throat and the top of a shell pink ear, showing beneath the glory of her hair. All during her conversation, however, Paula was turning over in her mind the puzzling familiarity of the man on her right. Going by devious ways through the mazes of past days of dining and dancing in a frivolous girlhood, Paula suddenly remembered.

"Oh-h!" she breathed suddenly, lips forming an enchanting pucker. Robert Gaylord, whom she had known for many years, stopped in the middle of his animated description of the enchantment of Cuba, from which country he had recently returned, and said impatiently:

"For Heaven's sake, what is the matter, Paula? I don't see that that was the proper place in my story for such an exclamation." His tone was irritable.

"Don't mind me, Bob," answered Paula, soothingly. "I just thought of something." And without waiting to hear the rest of the tale of the joy of driving on the Malecon and of certain liquid delights of the country, which had impressed young Gaylord deeply and pleasantly, Paula turned again to her dinner companion. He had just turned from the lady on his right, a rather sharp nosed young woman of excellent family, and was again watching the blonde beauty across the table.

"Of course," she decided. And her mind traveled back to a certain summer when she was sixteen, and had during a visit met a handsome young man whose dark eyes and clean litheness of limb had attracted her girlish fancy. The man on her right was he; she was sure. A little broader; decidedly browner; but the hair, the eyes, the poise of the head—there could be no mistake.

BUT Paula remembered something else besides the handsomeness of the man who had captivated her youthful fancy. Sitting there at the gay dinner table, she remembered he had snubbed her. O, not deliberately; but with the disinterested politeness that a man of twenty-some gives a little girl of sixteen. She had seen him first in golfing clothes at the country club, she remembered, and to her, with her highly colored sense of romance, he had seemed like a young woodsman, a young god of the forest—a hero who was the personification of all that was manly and noble and to be desired in one's dream knight. She smiled over her youthful and vivid imagination which had seen a woodsman in the sophisticated golfing togs he had worn. Across the clubhouse piazza she had seen him first, and liked him with all the ardor of impressionable sixteen. Later, after dinner, her uncle, at whose home she was visiting, brought him to her and said smilingly:

"Allen, this is our little niece who is visiting us." And Paula, with pulses hammering wildly, had vouchsafed a timidly eager hand and a prim "How-do-you-do." Then her uncle had left her with the adored one, thoughts scattered, tremulously pleased.

With irreproachable disinterestedness he had asked her to dance, and had mechanically whirled her about the dance floor. Addressing a timid remark to him at various intervals, Paula remembered how she had followed his gaze as he indifferently answered, and saw the reason for his abstraction. He was watching a beautiful girl whose dark eyes and beautiful, rounded figure marked her for a beauty, and whose red lips and provocative laughter had ensnared more than one young man that summer.

Paula herself had been no beauty at that period of her girlhood. The hair which was now the envy of her woman friends was then merely red hair dressed in careless, school girl fashion; a crescent of pale freckles over the bridge of her nose and the consciousness of angular elbows had further made her awkward and timid. But adoring him with all her ardent heart as she had at first sight, she was miserable over his indifferent politeness, though in spite of it he had dwelt in her dreams for many months.

"Allen," that was the name, and it was the name of the man at her side. Then it had been a vivid brunette who had attracted his gaze, and now it was a blonde! Paula's lips held a faint touch of scorn. The memory of the little incident of her girlhood accentuated the contrariety of her mood. She turned to Allen, and found his gaze resting on the white roses of her corsage.

"They suit you," he said gravely. "One wouldn't expect them to, somehow—something more exotic would seem more fitting. The thorns are quite long, aren't they, Miss Leigh?" he added, with a trace of humor in his eyes. Paula did not miss the inference.

"There are still longer ones, invisible under the leaves," she remarked coolly.

Allen laughed—a deep, pleasant laugh which Paula liked, in spite of herself. The warmth of it almost broke down her resolution to be haughty, but she remembered the summer visit and the country club and steeled her heart.

"Is that a warning?" Allen queried. "Warnings are almost like dares, you know. And besides, what have I done to deserve such veiled threats?"

Paula shrugged her shoulders indifferently.

"I don't blame you. They are quite worth shrugging," he said gravely.

Paula looked up from her ice, to which she had devoted herself with the frank enjoyment of sixteen.

"What in the world are you talking about?" she asked, laconically.

"Your shoulders," replied the audacious westerner. "Only pretty shoulders should be shrugged, just as only daintily arched eyebrows should be used to ask questions."

Just then young Gaylord asked Paula a question, and she avoided an answer. She had none ready and was glad of the diversion. The conversation was general at her end of the table for a time, and she did not speak directly to Allen again. There was to be dancing after dinner, on a raised platform at the end of the garden, and after dinner was over the party swept out into the evening fragrance, forming cheerful groups on the piazza and in garden seats until the music started.

"Dance?" queried Allen, cheerfully, as the jazz strains rioted across the garden. Paula shook her head.

"Not now," she answered, and resumed her conversation with Schuyler Kent, another young blood of the town whom she had known since school days. However, she was not too preoccupied to notice Allen as he passed by with Mrs. Cartwright on his arm, and started dancing.

Saxophones sobbed their melodious urge; drums beat in barbaric fury; and Paula did not miss Allen each time he passed in the rhythm of the dance, with his arm around Mrs. Cartwright's plump shapeliness and his ear bent to her murmurs.

THE scene was incongruous. The dreaming peace of the garden, even the slumber of the flowers seemed disturbed by the flood of almost savage tunefulness that flooded the semi-darkness. Negro musicians swayed in unconscious rhythm to the wild melodies they drew out. The trombone stirred its barbarous appeal as it suddenly blared out the melody. The lighted windows of the big house made orange splotches in the blackness of the silhouette, and the rectangles of bold color harmonized more with the wild tunefulness than the fragile Japanese lanterns that lighted the dancing floor. Once as Allen passed she thought he was searching the surrounding shadows for a glimpse of her pale frock, but just then he threw back his head and laughed gayly, evidently at some sally of Mrs. Cartwright's.

"Jazz is vulgar," said Paula to young Kent. But nevertheless her blood was flowing faster and she was conscious of it. So to be truthful, she added—"but it does stir one up."

Her eyes were bright in the dim light and her dress took on vague shadows.

"I should like to paint you as The Lady of the Lilacs," murmured Kent suddenly. "You look lovely in this light with those pale lilacs back of your head."

Just then Allen and his hostess descended from the dancing floor and passed them. Mrs. Cartwright caught sight of them and sank down on a low chair.

"Those Negroes can play," she said, fanning herself vigorously. Other couples were leaving the dancing floor now as the musicians stopped for a rest, and Paula watched dreamily the lights and shadows on the delicate frocks and bare shoulders and arms as the women and their partners sought garden rest spots.

When the music syncopated forth again, and Allen stopped to see whether she had changed her mind, she did not refuse. The insidious urge of the drums, the sliding of feet on the smooth floor, keeping a cadence all their own, made it impossible. She was conscious of Allen's nearness as he encircled her with a strong arm and they glided off, and amazed at the tumult in her heart—her hitherto well controlled heart; at the sudden, swift, wine sweet pleasures she felt because of his nearness; the consciousness of the nearness of his dark head.

FROCKS THAT BLOOM IN SUMMER GARDEN PARTY

by Corinne Lowe

TAKING lemon with one's tea is interpreted by the lady at the right as meaning the corsage ornament of a sleeveless white organdy frock trimmed with bands scalloped ruffles and the trimming of a hat composed entirely of green leaves. Next, a rose colored organdy with pleated front panel elects sleeves slit from shoulder to wrist and edged with the ruchings of white organdy applied to hem and neck line. A girdle and cocarde of blue ribbon is repeated in the tones of the organdy hat trimmed with white wheat and with two roses of the rose organdy. A Callot model of beige crepe, second from the left, is distinguished by diagonal skirt folds and girdled in black satin punctuated by a rose of coral velvet. The accessories here match the frock. Last, a gray faille is combined with gray lace and with blue ribbon, the ends of which fall under the skirt so as to be noted only beneath the sections.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK. — (Special Correspondence.)—The uncommon or garden variety of dress! It is with due consideration that we dissociate the terms, for this summer provides us with many unusual ways of going about our summer afternoon party. Here, in fact, there is only one obligation resting upon our shoulders. This is to be feminine. Our dress must shield the observer from the knowledge that we know any more about the Balkans than its embroideries or that we were ever so unguarded as to discuss a topic. Feminine as Lydia Languish or Amelia Sedley or Edith Dombey—this is the rôle assigned to us by the summer afternoon.

Properly speaking, the real garden party frock should be in one of the distinctively summer fabrics. Organdy, batiste, tulle, voile, handkerchief linen—these are the fabrics in which to meet the garden party built on the traditional English lines. However, all sorts of crêpes and silks, both plain and printed, have found their way through the garden gate of this summer, and so I show today an intermixture of the two.

At the right is a little white organdy model which points directly to a mode now much in the foreground of style consciousness. The sleeveless frock! The authority of this type of daytime model was established abroad by the French races, where it was carried out in many different fabrics, including particularly the printed silks.

This frock is made simply. The long, slim skirt depends for its distinction entirely upon the scalloped ruffles bound in white silk. The same treatment is applied to the armholes and neck line. Regarding the latter point, a word must be said right here regarding one of the latest tendencies of the neck line. We still find the boat neck, but the boat is more apt to be a cruiser than a canoe.

In the garden party costume there is the same effort to reconcile millinery and jewelry with either trimming or the frock itself which sways other sartorial experiments. Consequently the little cluster of glossy green leaves and lemons added to the corsage of the dress is repeated more substantially in a hat of green leaves decked with the same tart fruit. And, by the way, the lemon aid is recognized today in smart Paris millinery. Both lemons and oranges have, in fact, appeared in groves on some of the summer millinery.

A number of the frocks of organdy have extremely wide skirts combined with tight fitting bodices. This mode, glorified so especially by Lanvin, is expressed most charmingly this summer by her familiar model in white trimmed with a deep hem of blue ribbon accented by a huge cocarde. However, the straight up and down silhouette is so universally becoming that many of the great designers, both here and abroad, concentrate upon the lingerie type which I show today. These models are simple as an answer book. But they demand the most exquisite workmanship to atone for their guileless line.

In the model second from the right you encounter this workmanship in the fine plaits panelling the front of this rose color organdy. The only other effort at ornamentation occurs in the ruchings of white organdy outlining sleeve, neck line, and hem.

There are all sorts of sleeves and rumors of sleeves in circulation just at present. An interesting formula is followed in the model just described. Here it will be seen that the model is slashed above from shoulder to wrist and held together by a band of white organdy permitting a little overflow of cuff.

The next costume is a Callot model carried out in beige crêpe and distinguished by the diagonal fold sweeping the skirt diagonally. A black satin sash punctuated by a rose of coral velvet affords the color contrast and the matching of hat, parasol, and earrings indicates how scrupulous is our present day attention to this sort of harmony.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

SEEN AT THE RACES.

By Mary Brush Williams.

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—This is the time of year when the winners in summer models are "coming in" several laps ahead in the race conducted in grandstands, while the contestants for the grand prix are conducting their minor race. What has won among the summer fashions? You tell me and I will tell you in a measure what the fall styles will be. These latter are not in yet, but they will be sure to bear the mark and impress of the favorites of now.

There has been a good deal of discussion as to whether our old friend Vionnet was holding her own. It was answered last Sunday at the races when the grandstand was dotted with countesses and duchesses wearing the model of the first sketch. This dress is the season's most popular. Perhaps you know it, with its sleeves like the exaggerated arm coverings of Japanese costumes, in a pattern of black and white foulard that looks as if it had been done with wood block, and the lines falling as in the conventional drawings of old Buddha—in definite folds, you know, as when they are done in bronze. The dress looked lovely against the background of a French park at the races, blowing in a gentle breeze.

One of the women appearing in it carried a little black tulle parasol edged with monkey fur—so deliciously inconsistent that it seemed to represent Paris through and through.

The hat accompanying this costume was of black satin ribbon, draped softly into a tight turban with one black brush feather standing up on the side of it and another in brilliant blue pointing down.

We chose for our second sketch a costume again remarkable for its inconsistency, with all of that black and white monkey fur in three layers forming a huge collar, on a flimsy garment, without any warmth in it, of black crepe maroccain. If you were old enough to need that fur, health would demand that you had on your flannels, with something as warm for outside wear as at least a sweater. But out of deference to the mode you would of course arrange your life otherwise. The wrap was lined in cyclamen pink in what was not a closely sewed down lining but rather like an under cape. The gown accompanying it was of cyclamen pink, too—and beaded; but why be guilty of the obvious?—of course it was, and that goes without saying.

The third silhouette is what we Parisians call "amusing," beginning with the hat and working down. It was huge and of the soft straw—the hat, I am referring to, and not the silhouette. Round the crown of it ran a barrage of aigrettes sticking out on the underneath side of the brim on one side and on the right side up of it on the other. The costume continued its black and white effect by putting on the black maroccain coat the tiniest of ermine collars. The rest of the trimming, including that of the cuffs, was not of ermine, and, I observed then, maintaining the same point still; that was because there wasn't enough ermine fur in the house for all that. And so they compromised with something newer and almost more artistic—more worthy of the high taste of Paris. The cuffs were of little loops of the material, lapping over one another, and there were two panels front as well as two back made of the same garnishment.

There is a tendency toward a perfectly straight line supplementing the enormous blousing sponsored by Renee. The present costume maintains the safe and sane middle course—which after all is the line of the moment, whatever the autumn will bring forth. The woman carried a brilliant red parasol edged with black fringe. And, while I think of it, she had on little gauntlet gloves. Everybody is wearing them. Observe the woman of the first sketch and her sleeveless arms, bare above the wrists, where her short gauntlets end. They got the style from the children, who scarcely ever play without their little gloves. Do you remember my saying how many of the styles originate with them?

I think that Jenny is responsible for the third offering. If not, she might have been, for it is exactly in the manner originated by her. Observe the braided collar, as if of heavy seamen's rope covered with the delicate crepe of the dress. That collar is running all over Paris now and shares honors with the first dress as the season's most popular conception in style. It reminds you of the seat of a heavily caned Indiana chair. This collar is clasped with two big Byzantine ornaments in front. Otherwise the wrap is simple; of cinnamon brown crepe.

The hat accompanying is awfully fetching, consisting of blackish brown straw, closely fitting, and trimmed with one of those old maid frills which spinsters used to affect at the throat, something like cat's whiskers, held in the center with a plain gold brooch. This frill has been lifted to the hat, and it is of white organdy—O, so perishable! You would say the lady would need a maid to look after it alone, cleaning it and getting it renewed. But we saw it at the races in all its perfection, drawn through a rhinestone buckle and worn by some one who was anything but an old maid.

It was a great spectacle. Never have clothes been more elegant and never more costly nor elaborate. They brought us to a generalization, and it wasn't what you are probably thinking it would be. The woman with the courage to wear a simple dress and simple coiffure, with some gorgeous pearls wrapped around her arms and falling in low ropes around her neck—the dress in black preferably—she for attractiveness and elegance led all the rest.

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh

A FRIEND IN NEED — BY SALLY JOY BROWN

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Suhtin Wants Yarn.

"I am a shutin and the only thing I can do to amuse myself is knit, as I am a cripple. I have several little nieces who need warm knitted things that it would give me great pleasure to make, if I had the yarn which I cannot afford to buy. If some of your readers have leftover yarn that they would give me I would gladly pay the postage.

"Miss H. S."

Who will give this double barreled pleasure—sweaters and scarfs and caps for next fall to some little girls and some interest in life to a shutin?

Husband in Prison.

"Could you get some clothes for my baby and me? My husband is in prison and I have come out of the hospital just lately, so would appreciate anything you or your people can do. My baby wears size 2 or 3 and needs a coat. Anything you can do will be greatly appreciated. Mrs. J. Mc."

Hard luck comes in bunches, Mrs. J. Mc., but so does good luck, and it is about time for yours to turn. I am sure we will hear that some of my readers are only too anxious to help you. Who will answer Mrs. Mc's call?

Longs for Fresh Air.

"My daughter is now recovering after having been ill for a year and fresh air would surely help her. I wonder if any of your readers have a wheel chair they could lend us for a while so she could be wheeled onto the porch? It would help her get well sooner and make us all so happy.

"Mrs. P. M."

Who will lend the wheel chair and shorten a too long period of suffering and inaction? It would be a blessing to the girl to sit in the air a little while each day.

Urgent Request.

"My husband has been out of work for some time but has just secured a steady job. We will have no money for two weeks, however, and all our money and our clothing is gone. Will some of your readers give us temporary aid? We would be so thankful.

Who will lend Mrs. G. A. and her husband some help for a couple of weeks and give them some clothing with which to get started. A little help now will keep them from needing more later.

A Few Gifts.

Please givee my name and address to any one who is in need of a metronome, a good music roll, and a Peter Burrows primer.

A. O.

A Widow's S O S.

I am a poor widow, mother of four children, ages 1 year, 7 years, 9 years, and 14 years, all girls, and hope there is some one among your kind readers who has no further use for some clothes for my four children and a buggy for my year old baby, as I am not strong enough to carry her around. Not having any relatives or many friends to help me out, I am desperately poor and hope my plea will reach some one's kind heart. Mrs. R. S.

A Deserving Cause.

I am wondering if there are some readers who might help a friend of mine who is in very bad need of clothing. She is a widow and has two children whom she must support as well as herself. She is not physically able to work, therefore there are many days that she cannot work. She is about 5 feet 3 inches in height and is not very fat. She is handy with a machine and could very easily make over anything. One girl is 14, quite stout, and the other girl is 11. Anything from household goods to books or clothing—the latter most important—would be very much appreciated. I will gladly pay the

Practical and Fancy Needle Work By Clotilde

SWEDISH WEAVING.

SWEDISH weaving is a fascinating kind of drawn work, and is not difficult, the darning or weaving stitch being used.

Embroidery hoops, a blunt needle, and six strand embroidery cotton are the necessary materials for the work besides, of course, the linen on which the work is to be done. It is decorative on fine towels, and there are many delightful designs—one of which is shown here.

This design was worked on an ecru linen, in blue and yellow. If it is to be used on a towel, pull the first thread three inches from one edge, then baste the hem in place and hemstitch across. The number of threads taken up depending upon the coarseness or fineness of the linen. Hemstitching is not absolutely necessary for a start, but makes a good foundation for the weaving. The beauty of this work depends a great deal on weaving the stitches as closely together as possible, without having a drawn look.

The design shown here measures 1⅛ inches in width, done on a linen of medium weight. The directions follow:

Each group consists of four threads. Stretch the material in the hoops after drawing the threads for about two inches. Begin at the left, and count off fourteen groups. With blue thread weave under and over the fourteen groups for one-ninth the entire distance or length of the threads. Drop one group at the left and eight groups at the right, and weave under and over the five groups for one-ninth the entire length of the threads.

Drop one group at the left and weave under and over the remaining groups for one-ninth the entire length of the threads.

Again drop one group at the left and weave under and over the two groups for one-ninth the entire distance of the threads.

Pick up one group of threads at the right, and weave over these the same as before for one-ninth the entire length of the threads. Pick up one group at the left and weave over these as before for one-ninth the entire length of the threads.

Pick up one group at the left and eight groups at the right, and weave up to the edge of the cloth. Fill the six groups at the right with the blue thread to match the left side just finished.

Fill the two groups at the center with yellow. Count off fourteen more groups at the right and repeat from the beginning.

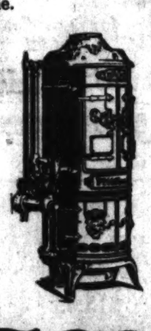
Fill the threads between the two blue figures with yellow. Refer to the illustration when working.

No sediment in this HOT WATER

THE clean hot water that flows through a Pittsburg heater contains no rust or sediment to injure baby's sensitive skin. Nor will it discolor your washing. This hot water flows as fresh and clean as cold water. And there is as much of it as you possibly can find use for.

Cold water from the water main flows right through the Pittsburg—there is no storage tank. There it is heated by intense gas flames concentrated on the clean copper coils through which the water passes.

Costs less than burning a coal fire; is clean, sure and adds hundreds of dollars to the value of your home.



Opening any hot water faucet lights the heating flame. Closing the faucet extinguishes it. That's all you have to do.

HOW I TRANSFORMED RUTH INTO A BEAUTY

by Antoinette Donnelly

RUTH AT BRIGHTON BEACH.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Bad hair? Oily hair, oily skin, blackheads, or blackheads? Flat chest or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to it. Add to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Last Sunday I told you how Miss Ruth G. was introduced to me through a pitifully disconsolate letter which one one morning five weeks ago signed "The Unhappiest Girl in the World." I told you also how her unhappiness was the result of an unfortunate belief that she was the homeliest girl who ever lived, because she was extremely thin and did not know how to dress attractively, consequently was lonely and a wallflower of the most deserted variety.

I told you, too, how I sent for her, in answer to her touching plea that I try to do something for her, and found she was not half as bad as her dejected letter had painted her; that it was principally a matter of covering up protruding bones with a few pounds of healthy flesh, turning up her mouth corners, dressing her hair more smartly, introducing a more becoming line of dress and colors, and a few other details of hygiene and beauty.

Being only 20, she had every right to happiness and to wear the badge of it on her countenance, so I extracted a promise that she would follow directions implicitly as I laid them out for her.

Five Weeks Bring Transformation.

Presto! What a change five weeks did make in the girl! You would scarcely believe her the same person. Not only do I say it with great and, I trust, pardonable pride, but many different pairs of lips have told it to her.

"What have you been doing to yourself?" her friends exclaim. "You look 100 per cent better."

Most of the glory of the transformation must go to Miss Ruth herself. She gave whole hearted cooperation to my scheme. No excuses, no backsliding on the exercises nor the food to be partaken; no resentment as to criticism I gave as kindly as I could; rather, she invited more and more of it.

She was eager to improve, and possessed the character to continue through the five weeks, daily and Sunday, with unflinching honesty of purpose.

The results in this almost unbelievably short time are a gain of fifteen pounds in weight, hollows in neck filled out, cheeks rosy and rounded, poise, lack of which was one of her main drawbacks, and a delightfully pleasing grace of manner in both carriage and speech. Happy? She certainly looks it, acts it, and is all of it! One look would convince the most doubtful Thomas in my audience! Then her doctor would bear me testimony, should it be required.

First thing I did was to send her to a physician to be reassured there was nothing chronically wrong with the girl. His pronouncement was "underweight, undernourished, nervous, but heart, lungs, etc., in fairly normal condition." He found no chronic ills, which frequently are at the bottom of the "skinny" girl's troubles. He was vastly surprised at the general health improvement in Miss Ruth when she reported to him at the end of our five weeks' experiment.

When we got down to work, which we did without delay, the beaches were not open for outdoor work. So, with the most abiding faith in swimming, as the exercise is without rival for developing a figure, I enrolled her in a gymnasium, which allowed her the daily instructions of an expert. She never had swum a stroke before.

On the fifth week we went down to Brighton Beach, where she put on a good imitation of a swimming exhibition for me. That gives you an idea of how in earnest the girl was.

Swimming Gives Mental Control.

I really do not believe any other exercise would have worked as quick magic as swimming, together with the deep breathing I ordered. But you must fill your lungs with one stroke of the arm, and empty them with the other, or Davy Jones is apt to grab you for his locker. And you need preliminary instruction on how to couple breathing with strokes in order to acquire any swimming ability at all. When you get an exercise which forces you to use your lungs along with legs and feet and every single muscle of the body, as swimming unquestionably does, and coupled with that have good haps succeed if you direct the legs down toward the pool floor. But that doesn't matter if you come right up and try all over again. During this, Ruth was told to hold her breath and keep her mouth tight closed.

The next step was to sit on the edge of the pool, with knees straight but not rigid, and "flutter kick," feet fluttering up and down alternately, allowing three or four inches' distance for length of kick. That learned, she combined the flutter kick with the dead man's float, feet just breaking surface; as they say, "making the water boil."

Crawl Supplants Breast Stroke.

The arm stroke was then rehearsed in land drill—which naturally means out of water. "One arm at a time," she was instructed, starting forward at shoulder level, pulling arm down past side and almost up to back shoulder level without turning the palm; then turn palm as arm is swept out to side, crooked at the elbow and carried forward over the surface for another stroke. After rehearsing each arm separately they were done together, starting with right arm forward and left back. These mechanical movements fairly well in mind, combining arm and leg movements was her next job.

Last of all the breathing was taught her. This in the water when the breath was taken through the mouth and exhaled through the nose. When her left arm was coming out of the water and back her face was turned toward the left side, with right cheek on water; a full gust of air was taken open mouthed, then head turned forward and, face down when the air was forced out through the nose with mouth closed.

This, you see, in the crawl, which I am told in the stroke now completely supplanting the breast stroke because it accomplishes more speed with less effort than the latter.

It took six or seven lessons before perfectly harmonious cooperation began to manifest itself. From then on it was pure, unadulterated exercise, and you may realize what this daily work of never less than a half hour might do toward developing arms, lungs, diaphragm, chest, and waists; in fact, the whole body.

Learning to Breathe Right.

This daily swimming, a walk, which was never more than two miles at the most, but done every single blessed day, and three deep breathing exercises were all in this line I asked of her. The deep breathing work was essential in her particular case, as she had been in the habit of breathing through her mouth entirely, with no excuse of adenoids or any nasal obstruction.

So the first thing mornings for several minutes and last thing at night she did these:

Before an open window, clad loosely, hands on hips, she filled her lungs with five long breaths, slowly, and exhaled slowly.

The same thing again, except she brought her hands up from sides in outward circle until back of palms met overhead, inhaling deeply; slowly returning hands to side, exhaling slowly and completely. Five times. The third movement was raising arms from sides to shoulder height, raising from heels to balls of feet at same time, and taking a slow, deep breath on upward move; exhaling slowly on return to position.

Awfully simple of execution, all three, and while she increased the repetitions to ten times each the second week, at no time did I demand more. Done morning and night, you see, it made a nice total, however.

Next week I shall tell you about the diet I put Miss Ruth on, which must take major honor over the exercise, but I spoke of the exercise first because it developed the appetite and kept it in a constant state of demand. Later I shall go into the clothes and the purely decorative features of our highly successful experiment.

That First Love Affair of Mine

MY WORLDS TO CONQUER.

Alexander was my first love. He had just come to live in the big white house on the corner, and as I walked past slowly, very slowly, I saw him in the yard throwing stones at a tin can. He had reddish hair, bright blue eyes, and many freckles, and I thought him a most superior being, as indeed he was—far too superior to notice a small female person like myself for several days. At school he strutted around challengingly, speaking very gruffly and saying "Huh!" scornfully on all occasions. One day he gave me an apple out of his lunch box. To be sure, it smelled and tasted of onions, but I ate it with joy. The other boys hooted derisively at this evidence of softness on Alexander's part, and after that he didn't speak to me for a week. I suffered in silence, as women will, and then Alexander asked me to balance his side of the seesaw and began walking home from school with me.

I remember Alexander as a hero in everything but spelling. He was a very poor speller, and I yearned over him maternally for this failing. When he was in difficulty—his face would get very red at such times and his eyes would stray in my direction—I used to form the letters with my lips, and I must say Alexander often availed himself of this assistance.

Then came the Great Day. We were playing Indian. The girls all went into the woodshed and were attacked by a yelling band of freckle faced, snub nosed Indians. The door was burst in and the squealing damsels were being dragged off to be tortured, when, with a loud treble shout, brave men came to their rescue. Alexander rushed for me, and then ensued a real fight between my Indian captor and Alexander. I can remember even yet the surge of pride and joy I felt when Alexander bloodied the warrior's nose and carried me off in triumph.

But, alas! Alexander's people decided that, after all, they would not settle in our village. It was a sad parting. I made no attempt to conceal my tears, and Alexander threw stones and said "Huh!" and left me abruptly.

Although first love is very intense, it is not always lasting, and while I shall always remember Alexander with affection, truth compels me to state that when pussywillow and frog hunting time came I had ceased to be lonely for his companionship. D. S.

MEN'S FASHIONS

THE WHITE KNICKER, THE KEYNOTE OF COOLNESS IN A SUMMER GOLF COSTUME.

By A. T. Gallico.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — The ancient and honorable game of golf was originated and first played up in the Scottish Highlands, where most of the year round the atmosphere clings to one like a wet blanket. Thus there grew up with the game a well founded tradition of costume of warm and heavy cloth to go with it. The British golf costume, which was imported along with the game, is a sport suit which, besides giving the player a neat and dressy appearance as he purses his way around the links, keeps the chill out of his bones. Tweeds, woolens, cheviots, all heavy cloths are used in his sport wear.

Conditions of climate in the United States mitigate against the use of these heavy materials for golf suits and have presented us with the problem of hot weather sport clothing. As the etiquette observed on nearly all of the golf courses and at the summer resorts and country clubs throughout the country frowns on shirtsleeves, the vacationist who takes his rest in July or August clubbing a golf ball about under a blistering sun must either wear his coat or a sweater. Add to this now woolen stockings and heavy woolen knickers and you can prepare for a warm afternoon.

A practical solution has been arrived at through the medium of white or natural linen knickers which satisfy all the requirements of informal day sport wear at a summer resort or club. These knickers are light in weight and hence are cool, and are so well within the limits of even slender pocketbooks that the average man who can afford to go away for the summer will be able to take with him two or three pairs and thus always be assured of a clean, fresh pair almost every day in hot weather.

Manufacturers have already placed on the market lightweight slipover sweaters which are perfectly correct on a golf course, but those who like to wear a coat when they play will find that knitted cloth coats are cool and comfortable. At a prominent maker of vests and sport coats I saw some of these knitted cloth coats of Australian wool, in tan, brown, greens, heather, blue, gray, and mixtures. The coat is quite long, with belted back, four patch pockets, and three buttons (leather).

The reason that these coats are cool is, besides lightness in weight, the wind blows through the loose weave and there is plenty of ventilation to permit air reaching the body surface. At the same place I noted a genuine camel's hair coat, made up in the same style as the knitted ones, but in the natural color. These coats—the knitted ones and the camel's hair—have much to recommend them. Besides being cooler than the regular cloth coats of tweed, etc., they are dressier than are the sweaters, and have plenty of room for the play of one's arms and shoulders. They never need pressing and can be thrown around or squashed in a locker without losing their shape.

The other day I saw some good looking flannel coats of big check design which would look very well with white or natural linen knickers, but which would probably go better as a coat just to be worn during the day at a summer hotel or a beach resort, where you are not planning any sport requiring exertion, as flannel is not as cool as some other materials. Tropical worsted coats go well with white linen knickers, or you will find that you can purchase whole sport suits of this same tropical worsted which is both light and very cool.

If you wish to wear a vest with your sport suit, as a great many do, natural linen vests are both cool and in good taste. Light weight wool stockings which you can procure in summer will aid in keeping you comfortable.

It is an excellent idea, if you are a person of discrimination, to choose your costume with an eye towards harmony. Matching of colors rather than contrasting seems to be the style this year, and you can arrive at some very pleasing effects by matching your stockings with your coat, camel's hair stockings with camel's hair coat (and perhaps a camel's hair cap if your funds have not given out) or tan stockings with a tan coat. This matching becomes especially effective with the white knickers in between to break up what might otherwise be a little monotonous. It is generally possible, and not much more expensive, to get a cap that will match the coat and stockings.

On the other hand, if you do not wish to wear a cloth cap in the hot sun, and cannot afford a camel's hair cap, you can get a different combination which is both inexpensive as well as pleasing to the eye by matching your knickers with the white duck hat previously mentioned in this column. This last has proven extremely popular with golfers because of its lightness and because it may be washed and always worn clean.

For the man who does not play golf and does not wish to expose his calves in knickers but desires a cool country sport suit there are whole suits of white or natural linen. It should be remembered, however, that this is not a city suit and that its place is only in the country. There are also suits of shantung silk for country wear. With the all white suits, plain white oxfords or white sport shoes are required. It should also be added here that with white linen knickers the white sport shirt must be worn.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

THE PIONEER SPIRIT.

Dearest Clara: You have doubtless heard of my intention of going west next month. Though surrounded by my relatives and all the many friends of my boyhood, I have an intense desire to try my fortune there. I shall leave with some regret, but to commence my business career I must make the sacrifice.

Dear girl, of all my farewells, none will be so sad to me as that I shall bid to you. Clara, my love, you cannot be indifferent to the fact that I have long devotedly loved you, and at the hour of parting I feel that I cannot go without showing you my heart and asking if I may not have your love in return.

Dearest, I am going to be yet more urgent. Will you marry me now and go with me on my journey? I know this must seem sudden and I have no right to ask the sacrifice; yet I do want you.

Dear one, if you will accept my future as your own and come with me, accepting the sorrow and the joy that are in store, you will make me most happy.

My heart bids me be brave. I feel with you beside me I can and will accomplish great things.

Do not decide hastily. I shall anxiously wait for your answer.

Ever, dear Clara, your affectionate HENRY.

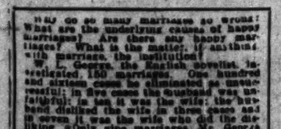
IS MARRIAGE A FAILURE?



'Not in Our Stars, but in Ourselves.'

Marriage is not a failure. But why is marriage? To raise a family and to evolve one man and one woman into two useful and happy beings.

If the wedded ones would remember these twin reasons back of the marriage ceremony—back of the calf love and romance, back of the "showers" and orange blossoms, back of the mounting anniversaries, the monotony and the contempt which familiarity too often mothers—they might not feel inclined to rail at matrimony. If they would clutch these two principles with a grip like dead game sports, they might find themselves too busy for anything else and in the end would awake to find that they were unselfishly and happily married.

It is not marriage that is a failure; it is the silly boys and girls, the foolish men and women, who embark in the matrimonial canoe. Ignorant, idle, gross, and selfish, of course they rock the boat. But the boat is all right; it is the people in it who cause it to rock and who suffer or become callous when their expectations spill and sink.

The misfits in marriage do not realize that eventually they must evolve from selfishness and materialism into usefulness and happiness, and it were better to start now. Like it or not, believe it or not, prostitute the two principles of marriage, the marriage wheel grinds out no other grist for those who start it turning.

Marriage is like fire, food, emotion, and a million other good things, it is from God. Used properly, it leads back to Him, through usefulness and happiness; abused or ignorantly mishandled we call it failure, when the fault lies in us.

B. McN.

Love+Sense=Success.

Is marriage a failure? No, most emphatically. When Dick and I were married, people all shook their heads and solemnly prophesied but a few months of happiness, ending in a divorce. I was 19, an only child, much spoiled, and accustomed to plenty of money. Dick was the same age, also spoiled and likewise used to spending his money as fast as he got it.

We eloped after a nine days' acquaintance. We rented a small apartment and started giving up things. Whenever our financial condition threatened to envelope us in gloom, we laughed; we were young and youth's optimism is a wonderful thing. We managed to take in two or three dances and plays a month, so as not to become too antiquated, immediately. I urged Dick to have his men friends of bachelor days come over for a game of cards at least once a month. On these occasions I made myself conspicuous by my absence. In short, we try to keep in touch with outside things so we won't resort to small talk about the poor meat the butcher sent or how noisy the family next door is.

We have been married five years and we are still enthusiastically in love—pretty good for these times, we think. But let me add right here that my husband has the greatest asset a man can have, better infinitely than looks or money—a considerate and loving disposition plus a keen sense of humor.

So here's my advice: first, marry the right man, treat him well, and you'll come out all right.

Take Mastin's Vitamon To Build "Stay-There" Flesh and Clear Skin

Easy and Economical To Take—Results Quick

This run-down folks should find this simple test well worth trying: First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take MASTIN'S Vitamon—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking MASTIN'S Vitamon regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight, "pep," energy and improved appearance. MASTIN'S Vitamon Tablets contain highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the two other still more important vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C) combined with free organic iron and the necessary lime salts all of which Science says your body must have to keep you strong, vigorous, well-formed and fortified against the germs of disease. By increasing the nourishing power of what you eat MASTIN'S Vitamon helps supply just what your body needs to feed the shrunken tissues, strengthen internal organs, clear the skin and renew shattered nerve force without upsetting the stomach or causing gas. Pimples, boils and skin eruptions seem to vanish as if by magic under its healthful, purifying influence. But it is not only a question of how much better you look and feel, or what your friends say and think—the scales and tape measure will tell their own story. A two weeks' test will surprise you.

Of what use are rich, fashionable complexions as ugly, mottled skin, blotchy from sunken cheeks, pouches under the eyes, or a sunworn, sickly-looking face? MASTIN'S Vitamon Tablets quickly help to clear your skin, put firm, healthy flesh on your bones, and increase your nerve force and power. Try them yourself and see.

WARNING! Your safety and protection depend upon getting MASTIN'S Vitamon Tablets—if it isn't MASTIN'S it isn't the Original and Genuine VITAMON—the World's Standard—now used by millions and recommended by doctors. Beware of imitations, cheap substitutes or so-called "yeast vitamine tablets." Insist upon MASTIN'S. At all good druggists.

Patterns by Clotilde

1420—transfer 602—Women's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 36 inch material.

1393—Women's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 40 inch material.

1423—corset cover—Sizes 36 to 50 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires ⅜ yard of 36 inch material with 2¼ yards of edging.

9545—women's drawers. Sizes 24 to 36 inches waist measure. Size 28 requires 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material and 2 yards of edging.

How to Use the Patterns

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

MERCERIZED poplin, linen, or pongee would be fine materials for the one piece dress pattern No. 1420. The dress and sleeves are cut in one and there are just the front, back, pockets, and cuffs to the pattern. Nothing could be more simple, and yet, if handled well, the result should be a smart looking frock.

The transfer embroidery that is suggested for using on this dress has a number of different designs, any one of them attractive and not difficult to use. If the pockets, sleeve, and neck edges are finished with binding in some contrastic color and a design used on each pocket, and at the left of the neck opening, no further trimming will be needed.

If the material is rather heavy—say pongee or linen—the seams should be stitched, leaving a ⅝ inch margin, bound with silk binding ribbon, and pressed open. If one of the thin materials is chosen, French seams—not too narrow—will be the best finish.

At each under arm where the seam curves the most a bias strip of some kind should be carefully hemmed down over the seam to prevent its tearing. If the seam is one that is pressed open, it will have to be carefully clipped in several places so it will lie flat, and in that event a narrow bias strip could be hemmed down over the opened seam, laying it on so it comes an even distance each side of the stitching.

Another wise precaution against tearing is to hem small turned in pieces of tape on the under side of the skirt so that when the pockets are stitched on the stitching will go through these pieces of tape at the upper edges of the pocket.

Patterns No. 1243 and No. 9545 are for a tight fitting corset cover and drawers. Stout figures require a gloss fitting corset cover, and a reasonably heavy muslin will be best. If you wish to take real comfort in it, be sure to thoroughly shrink the cloth before cutting into it.

It buttons down the front and there are no under arm seams. There is a seam each side of the front and back, and the best one to use on lingerie is the felled one. Baste and stitch the seams, then trim off one edge on each, leaving a safe margin; then hem the other edge down over the trimmed one. Have the seams an even width when finished—say, one-eighth of an inch—and do the hemming down by hand.

The neck and armholes may be finished with narrow bias strips, stitching in a narrow seam on the wrong side; then clip the edge at intervals, so it will be possible to turn the facing down smoothly on the wrong side. Baste and stitch close to the edge. Of course the front hems should be finished before doing anything with the neck facing.

Sew the peplum to the bottom of the waist, having the seam come to the right side, and be sure the peplum is set on a little fuller than the bottom of the waist. If both edges measure the same the peplum will not set well. It has a more or less circular edge, and is sewed to a reasonably straight one, and it is necessary to allow a little ease. Turn the seam up toward the waist, and cover with a narrow band stitched over the seam and stitched to the corset covcr on the upper edge. Before stitching the band on turn it in neatly at each end and overhandgo the corset cover. It makes a much better finish.

In using the drawers pattern, see that there is ample room through the hips and that, when finished, the length will be what you want.

Pattern No. 1393 is a pretty design for a rather dressy frock. Charmeuse, crepe de chine or satin would look well. One material could be used for the dress, or two could be combined with good effect. The skirt is in one piece, straight, and is gathered to the waist at a normal waist line. Where the upper part of the waist and sleeves joins the lower part fagotting or hemstitching would be very attractive looking. Or, if one preferred, a bias band, embroidered in floss or beads, would be effective. The dress opens down the back and the fastenings of whatever kind should not be over ¾ inch apart and put on so that the dress does not separate any place, even slightly. Nothing is much more unsightly looking, and the most beautiful gown would be spoiled by such carelessness.

The sash, as it is arranged at the left side in the picture, with soft looking loops and ends, is dressy and smart looking.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Lee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Mary called on the lady next door, who had just moved in, saying, "I come to introduces myself." The lady greeted her with a hug and then called her little dog Keno. The dog sniffed Mary's dress. The neighbor said, "Now, you and Keno go out into the yard and have a nice time playing." Mary replied, "No, we ain't been introduced long enough yet to be good chums." Mrs. L. S.

Little Joy was very much interested in the opening of the eyes of our little puppies. After making a tour of the back yard yesterday, she came in all excited with the news that three of the flowers by the fence had their eyes open. L. K.

Betty's twin cousins visited her last summer, and were very rough with her toys, breaking a number of her dolls. When she heard they were coming again this summer, she gathered her dolls together and took them to a neighbor next door, asking permission to let them remain there for a while. When asked the reason why, she said: "Those damaging twins are coming again." J. J. H.

One day while awaiting my turn in a drug store a small boy entered and told the clerk that he wanted a nursing bottle. When the man replied that he could give him two for 25 cents he replied with his large eyes opened wide, "But we haven't got twins!" C. M. O.

Little Mary was easily excited, and it didn't take much to make her sick. She got over excited at her birthday party and had to go to bed when the fun was at its height, having developed a temperature. Next day she said to her mother: "Parties don't digest very well with me. Do they, mother?" S. M. K.

Marty has a sister just a year younger than herself, whom she frequently quarrels with, as she is a quick tempered child. It was in the midst of a chattering "scrap" that mother strove to quiet them. Marty, who seemed to be to blame, upon questioning, said: "I guess Betty and me don't fit good." B. H.

My little nephew had never seen any animals except those in Lincoln park. He was having his first visit in the country, and when his Uncle Will took him out to the barnyard to see the cows and pigs he gave one look and, pulling his hand away, ran back to the house, where his mother was sitting on the porch. He cried excitedly: "O, mother, mother! Do come out and look at the animals that ain't caged!" L. W.

Margaret was taking an automobile trip with her parents. They were going to Starved Rock. After they had covered about fifty miles Margaret became tired.

Finally she said, "Mother, did we come to the hungry rock yet?" B. D.

Jane went with me to visit a friend who had long hair that she wore in puffs at the sides and back of her head. Jane was used to seeing bobbed hair and she looked at the girl for a minute and then said: "Did your mother cut your hair that way?" H. M.

A new house is being built near us. The other day Billy came in late to lunch and I asked him where he had been.

"O," said the child, "I was just watching that house grow up." C. C.

It had come to little Frank's turn to be served with dessert, which happened to be two flavors of ice cream. "What can I do for you, Frank?" said the uncle, who was serving.

"A lot of both please," was the reply. M. N. T.

FOR EVERY FLOOR EVERYWHERE

Bidding Welcome to Your Family and Friends

In halls and on stairs Kimlark Rugs are perpetually bright and fresh. They bid a wholesome welcome to the home-comer and visitor.

On stairs, where wear is unusually hard, the fine quality of Kimlarks is appreciated because of their long and satisfactory service.

Pliable
Soft, pliable and do not crease or break when crushed, bent or folded. Three-ply thick comfortable and noiseless.

Reversible
Both sides finished, giving two rugs in one. One side has beautiful design, the other is plain with solid or variegated colors. A feature giving double wear and double satisfaction.

Soft
Kimlark Rugs are soft and smooth. No wiry barbs, harsh surfaces or broken strands are ever found. Tender hands and feet are never harmed by Kimlark Rugs.

Durable
Subjected to constant wear, they wear with leather-like durability. These rugs are in use in public buildings under the most severe wearing conditions. After years of use they retain that original quality.

Washable
Waterproof and odorless. Easily cleaned by sponging with soap and water, which renews their original freshness. So closely woven that dirt cannot sift through.

Fire-Resisting
Tests have proved that Kimlark Rugs will not ignite. The carelessly dropped cigarette or match does not harm or burn holes through them.

KIMLARK RUGS

Combine new features in fine floor coverings never before known. They are suitable for every floor of the house indoors and out. The rich colorings and handsome designs harmonize with any decorations. Note the features. Read the descriptions. Do you know of any other rugs at any price offering such unusual advantages?

Most Reasonably Priced

The patented process of manufacture makes possible the highest quality rugs at prices less than half you would expect for such value. Kimlark Rugs enable you to have new rugs for two rooms at the price you are accustomed to pay for one.

This Is the Time to Buy

See Kimlark Rugs at leading stores. Consider the prices asked for rugs of such marked beauty and high quality. Select Kimlarks to replace your worn rugs and you will be assured of long wear and continuous satisfaction.

The Label on the Back Identifies the Genuine

Since Pharaoh's Time
The Sign of Happiness and Good Fortune
SINCE the earliest writings of man this symbol, ☥, has been a mystic omen of good luck and contentment. Chosen as a trade mark 30 years ago by the world's leading wedding ring maker, it has since come to signify authority in wedding rings. Wedding rings so stamped are correct in style, finish or carved, and are excellent in quality. Ask to see the above emblem design at your local jewelry store.

PROLOGUE.

There is a haunting similarity in the flower boxes that cling to the ledges of countless apartment house windows and the gay roses which the parading soldiers carry so jauntily in the muzzles of their guns . . . it is as if the city were flaunting tiny banners of beauty, ashamed of the monotonous tiles of ugly buildings marching up and down her streets and leering at each other through a thousand brazen windows.

Scene I.—The Birth of a Notion.

Just about this time of the year Ma Potter feels a stirring and a muttering within her, the beginning of an urge toward esthetic activity, and it usually takes form in the making of numerous window boxes . . . there are some who would be blind enough to believe that Ma's urge is born of a jealous contemplation of neighboring boxes, but this is not so . . . after all, Ma has lived a city life but a few years, while behind her are countless generations who came out of the soil, wrung a living out of the soil, and after a brief song in the sun went back into the soil . . . and the fruits of all this are Potters and window boxes.

MA (to Pa, who is exhibiting toward it all, as toward every improvement around the house, a calm and Buddhalike detachment):

You've gotta help with this window box, Pa . . .
Go get a hammer and nails and a saw.

PA (retreating behind the sporting section):

Whaddye want with a window box, Ma?
Mud and spiders and trouble . . . blah!

(Slides farther down until he is poised restfully on his cervical vertebrae . . . Pa is like Mandy, who says, "When Ah works Ah works, but when Ah rests Ah sits deep.")

MA (turning to Bill, but feeling instinctively she is wasting her time):

William, go get a hammer and saw—
You make the box and shame your Pa.

"You've gotta help with this window box, Pa."

BILL (who is getting to the age where any form of sentimentality like window boxes seems rather old fashioned):

Let Pa do it; I gotta go out . . .
Go ahead, Pa . . . you're a good old scout . . .

MAMIE (with spirit):

If I was Pa I'd hand you a slap
For talking to me like a snippy sap.

"Has her got a mad on here poor 'ittle bruvver?"

BILL (turning on her):

Talk about saps . . . say, how about you,
Talking to Miller the way you do?

(Mimicking, with exaggerated soprano):

Is hims got a mad on with him's poor little Mamie?
Has hims?

MAMIE (with crimson indignation):

Not only a sap, you're a little sneak.
If I was a man I'd bust your beak . . .

BILL (with an infernal girlish tone and gesture):

Has her got a mad on hers poor little 'ittle bruvver?
Is her going to bust him on his beakie-eakie?

MA (feeling that all this isn't getting her anywhere with her window boxes):

If it's hanging a picture or making a shelf,
Every hand's turn, I must do it myself;
If it's wrong, how you holler and yelp and squall;
If it's right, not a word, not a peep from you all . . .

(With a sudden gust of temper):

I'll fix 'em myself . . . you make me sick;
Clear out, the lot of you . . . outta here, quick!

(Which, of course, has the desired effect—namely, of stirring Pa into a choked, muttering rage which he transmutes into a succession of curious futile fumblings out of which, with Ma's dubious assistance, gradually emerge two long, heavy, and unbelievably awkward window boxes . . . at last the crude and cumbersome chrysalis from which will delicately wave the fragrant banners of Ma Potter's dear delight.)

Scene II.—A Surprising Finale.

And since it is with only a kindly and sympathetic regard we should contemplate the infinite absurdities and futilities of life, let us not dwell at too great length on the steps that intervened between the budding of the window box thought in Ma's mind and its burgeoned fulfillment beneath the Potter windows . . . let us not linger on the struggles of the Potters to find fertile soil to fill the window boxes nor speak of how Bill went out into the vacant lots at night and carried back breaking pail loads of almost rich soil to fill incredibly spacious boxes . . . no circus elephant ever held as many buckets of water . . . we will merely pause now and view the boxes as completed and filled, standing on the back porch in all their ponderous beauty, and we will take note of the proud light in Pa's eyes, the tender smile on Ma's face, and Bill's air of rugged satisfaction over a duty well done.

MA (gayly to Pa and Bill):

You men folks carry them in, if you will,
But not too fast, or the dirt will spill.

BILL (getting a sudden glow from being referred to as "men folks"):

C'mon there, Pa, we'll snake 'em in . . .
Be careful, now, don't bark your shin.

(Reaches down, grabs hold of box, and starts to rise with it . . . box doesn't rise . . . Pa tries his end . . . box doesn't move . . . Pa and Bill tug and struggle with box until their faces turn red . . . suddenly realize the horrible fact that they can't move it . . . Ma flutters around giving good advice . . . Pa straightens up and gives box a dirty look . . . box smiles back with impassive good nature.)

PA (savagely):

We'll have to take the dirt out now
Before we can move 'em . . . holy cow!

BILL (inanely):

Ya oughta have thought of that first instead.

PA (brooding):

Course we oughta had . . . shut your head.

(Bill gives him injured look . . . that's what he gets for offering good advice; he'll keep it to himself after this . . . sullenly gets down and helps Ma and Pa take out plants and empty boxes . . . discover to their great surprise it wasn't the weight of the dirt at all that made the boxes so hard to move . . . Ma merely, in her inexperienced way, had nailed them to the floor.)

Scene III.—The Afterglow.

The window boxes are installed and the flowers are blooming—geraniums they are, with an insidious vine that creeps and droops and covers the boxes sparsely and a bit untidily . . . it is evening, and the Potters are in their living room, regarding their window boxes with mixed feelings.

PA (moodily):

They fill the place with bugs and dust
And simply ruin the screens with rust . . .

MAMIE (with a shake of her bobbed hair . . . curious how quickly all of them discovered it was a cute trick):

They don't look much, and they've got no smell . . .

BILL (hoarsely):

They've got no smell . . . say, aren't you swell . . .

"You men folks carry them in, if you will,
But not too fast, or the dirt will spill."

MA (placidly):

Well, maybe the flowers don't smell so sweet,
But they look real nice from down the street,
And even though inside the room
We cannot see each flower bloom,
It fills me full of joy and pride
To see how nice they look outside . . .

(So Ma Potter has that consolation at least, even though the flowers all bloom out toward the sun—an eventuality which is always forgotten every year—and give no hint to the Potters of their presence except the continuous parade of insectivorous emissaries which travel back and forth through the screens between the Potter living room and the Potter window boxes . . . also the complaints of the neighbors downstairs, who object to the drippings . . . but Ma is not alone in her pride . . . inside the house the other Potters may complain, but outside they, too, are proud of their window boxes . . . didn't Pa help make the boxes? . . . didn't Bill carry the dirt? . . . didn't Mamie contribute advice and moral support? . . . and, finally, aren't the neighbors just a bit envious and jealous? . . . they did . . . they are . . . and that's that—until next Sunday.)

Telling Fortunes for Amusement

by DORIS BLAKE

"Beware of a Blonde Woman."

WHEN you are on vacation perhaps the following bit of amusement with cards will help you while away a pleasant hour. If you are entertaining guests over the week-end, it may prove the sunshine for a rainy afternoon. As I have urged before, it is not to be taken seriously, but who among us would be so foolish as to take any fortune telling game in any manner but that of a light diversion?

Then get out the pack of cards and eliminate all under seven—the sixes, fives, fours, threes, and twos of each denomination, retaining aces, kings, queens, jacks, tens, nines, eights, and sevens. Shuffle the cards to be used and spread them carelessly out on the table, face down. Or, if there are a number of guests, spread them on a tray which may be passed around for each guest to draw her fortune. Or, if laid out on a table, the guests step up and are allowed a single draw from among the scattered cards. The following interpretations will explain her fate as she has gathered it unto herself:

Ace of hearts—Good news.

King of hearts—A person in high position is trying to assist you.

Queen of hearts—You will meet with an unexpected proposal.

Jack of hearts—A fair young man would seek your favor.

Ten of hearts—Gain, success and happiness.

Nine of hearts—Joy, you get the wish nearest your heart.

Eight of hearts—If married, a lucky happening; if single, you will meet with proposal soon.

Seven of hearts—A pure love will exist between you and your partner.

Ace of clubs—You will shortly hear news of an inheritance, and you will accumulate wordly goods rapidly.

King of clubs—A just and upright man is protecting you from slander.

Queen of clubs—A distinguished woman has a great interest in your welfare.

Jack of clubs—Make preparations to get married, if single; if married, a happy surprise—from your mate.

Ten of clubs—Your success will be only partly complete.

Nine of clubs—You will have doings with the law that will prove successful.

Eight of clubs—A handsome creature admires your good qualities.

Seven of clubs—Your life will be one of economy and work.

Ace of diamonds—You will receive a package or present of value.

King of diamonds—You will shortly meet a quarrelsome man whom you should avoid.

Queen of diamonds—A light haired woman with a wicked disposition will scandalize you.

Jack of diamonds—One of your trusted friends is jealous of you.

Ten of diamonds—A profitless journey.

Nine of diamonds—A bad card. Opposition and broken engagement, misunderstanding and quarrels.

Eight of diamonds—Another bad card. Full of anxiety and mortification.

Seven of diamonds—Slight sorrows and small vexations.

Ace of spades—Trouble.

King of spades—A male hypocrite is trying to do you an ill turn.

Queen of spades—Some woman will put obstacles in the way of your wishes being fulfilled.

Jack of spades—A worthless, dissolute young man will prove fascinating to you, but beware of him.

Ten of spades—Only small difficulties will bother you.

Nine of spades—Worst card you could draw disappointment and trouble.

Eight of spades—You are going to feel much hurt and aggrieved.

Seven of spades—Quarrels with wife or husband; or between sweetheart and maid.

Cruel Truth.

One night my fiancé and I attended a dance and there I met an old friend of mine.

During the next dance I told my fiancé I would introduce him to one of the smartest as well as beautiful girls.

"I don't want to dance with any smart nor beautiful girls," he replied. "I want to dance with you."

MRS. C. T.

Brightening Up the Corner.

It was the day of my first appearance in the business world. There wasn't much to do, and when the boss went out I sat at my typewriter, just playing the keys and wondering about my work.

I struck up "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater" on my "piano" and was singing as loudly as I could to enjoy my solitude.

When I finished I looked around and faced my employer, I, who was supposed to be a model secretary.

PETE.

A Leap Without a Look.

One day my mother told me to inform my sister, a young lady of eighteen summers, that she was wanted.

I, a young man two years her senior, started out to inform her with but little hope of ever finding her. There stood upon the corner a girl of my sister's size, who wore exactly the same dress that my sister wore. Thinking her to be my sister, I quietly stole up to her and quickly caught hold of her arm, wishing to surprise her, when suddenly she turned, and I, to my amazement, found that this young lady whom I had so sudely offended was not my sister.

"And By Thy Feet——"

It was during chapel hour at college. The sophomores had charge of the day's program. Four of us freshman girls decided to take a cat into the attic and make it meow during services.

No floor had been laid in the attic, so it was necessary to walk the beams. Fate was against me. I slipped. There was a crash—a roar of laughter!

In my fall I had straddled the beam, each foot breaking through the laths and plaster of the ceiling to the chapel below. And there dangled my white stockinged legs for minutes and minutes amid the roaring laughter from below, before I could extricate myself!

M. Y. B.

Welcome, Stranger.

Having been raised in the country, I had never heard of tag days.

Upon arriving in the city for my first visit, I was stopped on my way from the station by a girl who smilingly asked if I would like a tag, at the same time holding one out for me to accept, which I did with a "Thank you" and walked on. It was an embarrassing moment when the girl followed me to explain that the tag must be paid for, and I felt that every one around me was having a laugh at my expense.

Distress after Eating

may follow eating your favorite foods.

To relieve this condition promptly try one or two

STUARTS Dyspepsia Tablets

after each meal.

They neutralize the acid stomach, giving the alkaline effect, the same as when in normal working order.

These tablets are sold in every drug store in the U. S. and Canada at 60c a box. Known to a host of people for 25 years as the one thing needful in an attack of indigestion.

Summer Comfort:

Cantilever Shoes

Hot weather tests human resistance. We have learned to take almost every precaution to make the strain of summer bearable—we eat cooling foods, wear light clothes and straw hats—and neglect what is most important, comfortable footwear.

Warm days make the feet swell and perspire. Few shoes can stand this test of comfort. If you change now to Cantilever Shoes you will find great relief in their perfect ease.

In Cantilever Shoes the body relaxes, walking is no longer an effort, you feel cooler. Cantilever Shoes are made on lasts designed from the natural outline of the foot. The normal inner sole line, and the slightly tilted heel, encourage easy carriage without undue strain at any point. These are good looking shoes.

There is ample toe room, and such freedom do the feet enjoy from the flexible shank of Cantilever Shoes that muscles and cords grow strong from exercise and fallen arches are corrected.

Try Cantilever Shoes for summer comfort. You will become an all-year-round enthusiast.

Made on trim lines, of fine leathers and white Egyptian canvas.

Genuine Cantilever Shoes have the name "CANTILEVER" stamped on the shank. Avoid substitutes.

JUTTING KITCHEN KEEPS ODORS FROM HOUSE

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

REMINISCENT of an earlier period is this stalwart, upstanding colonial residence with its commodious porch at one end, where one's imagination can easily picture a pleasant, quiet evening. Lovers of simple dignity will be enamored of the delicate lines of the front entrance, with the doors of many glass panes and the flanking trellises entwined round about with climbing roses. The colorful blinds and double hung windows upstairs are artistic.

Interesting also is the separate one story kitchen jutting out from the house proper and the railing which makes a balcony of the roof. The placing of the kitchen to one side is a custom handed down from a past generation. On a hot summer's day, when the heat from cooking and baking in the kitchen discommodes the occupants of most houses, no discomfort is experienced in this, with the kitchen set apart. Nor need those in the kitchen itself be unduly troubled by the heat, because, with its direct exposure on three sides, large windows and doors, proper ventilation is an easy matter.

A walk paved with flat, irregular shaped flagstones across the whole front of the house, and we do not doubt that we shall find an old fashioned knocker on the door. But there most of the colonial touch ends.

A vestibule admits us into a large stair hall, on one side of which we find a small coat closet, and on the other a phone booth. A large living room, 13 feet by 22 feet 6 inches, with an ample brick fireplace and a tile hearth, opens out onto the porch and the flagstone walk previously mentioned.

On the other side of the stair hall is the dining room with its French door opening on the walk. It is handily served from a butler's pantry with its own sink and built in drawer cabinets on each side. These are of the type which, fortunately, can now be obtained ready built from the mill, at a considerable saving under the cost of specially built equipment.

The washroom, a necessary convenience on the first floor and which most residences of the up and downstairs type lack, is located just off the stair hall. It is finished with a tile floor, and tile wainscot, placed on cement plaster, is reinforced with metal lath.

The kitchen wing includes a service porch with separate ice compartment. The kitchen itself is well lighted and has a broom closet which helps keep everything in place.

Throughout, except in the kitchen, lavatory, and service hall, which are of maple, oak floors are used.

A large bedroom with bath, two smaller ones, and another bathroom occupy the second floor. The large bedroom has its own real fireplace and a roomy closet.

Each of the other bedrooms is a cheery, corner room, well lighted and ventilated. All rooms on this floor are trimmed with birch and enameled old ivory. Floors are oak, except those of the bathrooms, which are tile.

Just a word, now, respecting a phase of home construction which is being closely watched by the careful home-

How to Make Currant Jelly from Ripe Currants

By Ann Proctor

The finest currant jelly you ever tasted—chock full of the natural ripe color and flavor—can be made at home within a few minutes. I use the "Certo Process" because I can use ripe currants and it takes only one-half minute's boiling, thus saving flavor and color; never fails; and is cheaper because I get two-thirds more jelly.

The new Certo Process for making Currant Jelly is very simple: Crush thoroughly about 2½ quarts (3½ lbs.) ripe fruit. Add ½ cup water, stir until boiling, cover pan, and simmer 10 minutes. Place in jelly bag and press out juice. Measure 4 cups (2 lbs.) juice into large saucepan. Measure 7½ leveled cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar in separate pan. Bring juice just to boil and begin to add sugar slowly, with constant stirring, taking about 5 minutes to add all the sugar, and keeping juice nearly at the boil. Then bring to the boil and at once add 1 bottle (scant cup) Certo, stirring constantly. Continue to stir and bring again to a hard boil for ½ minute, stirring continually. Take from fire, let stand 1 minute, skim and pour quickly into sterilized glasses.

Note: For fruit obtained during first week of season use 4½ cups juice and only ½ bottle (scant half cup) Certo, making no change in sugar.

The above recipe and many others for making delicious jellies and jams by the "Certo Process" is found in the Certo book of recipes, a copy of which will be given to you by your grocer or druggist when you get Certo. Extra copies will be sent free if you write to the Pectin Sales Company, Inc., Dept. 127, Rochester, N. Y.

Use Certo this year in making all your jams and jellies. It saves time, worry and boiling in a hot kitchen. The "Certo Process" never fails and saves money because you make two-thirds more jelly from the same amount of fruit. Jelly and jam made this way keep perfectly.

If your grocer or druggist does not have Certo, please call Leeds Brokerage Co., Superior 2361-J, to learn where to obtain it

To Give Any Room New Interest

YOU have only to add one or more Almco Lamps to any room to effect a really remarkable transformation in it. The warmth of their softly shaded light, the color accents of their rich, subdued tones, the grace of their highly decorative designs give distinction to the simplest furnishings.

An unusual amount of handwork by skilled craftsmen and deft-fingered needlewomen gives Almco Lamps an individuality not ordinarily found in lamps. Yet Almco Lamps can be found very modestly priced in any of the better stores. They can easily be identified by the Almco tag or label on both shade and base.

builder—fire safety. Unfortunately, many homes built with much attention and expense given to outward appearance have been slighted in this most important feature, because the better construction it necessitates costs a trifle more than ordinary inflammable construction.

Nevertheless, just as important as the decorations or the size or arrangement of the rooms is built-in fire protection, such as concrete walls, cement basement floors, and metal lath on the plastered underside of the stairway, in the bearing partitions supporting the floors and in the firestops between the exterior wall studs on which the clapboards are nailed.

Tile flue lining for the massive chimneys is another important fire protection feature. All of these safeguards are essential in a building of the type described today, and are a most important element in removing its only drawback, namely, the danger to life in case of fire, especially when the alarm is sounded at night when all the occupants are abovestairs.

Architect William Schwab of New York City supplied the plans of this house.

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

SPEAKING OF DOUBLE CHINS.

In a certain small college in the middle west there existed a strange system of courting. If a boy liked a girl particularly well and took her out several times she was his girl, and it was against college ethics for any other boy to ask her for a date. Any girl who encouraged more than one suitor was considered rather wild.

So it happened that Tom did not dare to ask Jane to go walking with him or to go with him to any of the college parties. Had he done so he would have been sinning doubly, for he was going with Edith, and Jane, who was popular, had as a devoted suitor one of the upper classmen, a student prominent in both athletics and social activities.

In accordance with the time honored custom, therefore, Tom and Jane saw each other only when their respective sweethearts were with them. They were on a camp supper and some one started predicting what each would look like five years hence. Tom bet Jane that by that time she would have a double chin. Jane indignantly took up the bet and the stakes were set.

Jane left college the next year and went to a university, where Tom and the foolish bet were completely forgotten in the whirl of new experiences. The war came, Tom went into service, Jane went on with her work, and finally took a position teaching in the university where she had received her degrees.

Five years passed. One spring evening Jane found Tom at her door, asking if she would go to dinner with him and let him settle the terms of the bet, for Jane did not have a double chin. From that time on they did not lose track of each other, and the friendship that had started with a bet soon turned into a real romance. Now they are married, and often wonder what would have happened if some one had not started talking about double chins at the camp supper so long ago. J. C.

My Nicest Compliment

What was the nicest compliment you ever got? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

The Sunshine of Her Smile.

One morning when on my way to work I met a tiny girl not more than 5 years old, brown eyes and winsome. I was dressed plainly, rather shabbily, and I lay no claim to beauty—in fact, I am no longer young. But when I saw her I smiled, she was so wonderfully sweet, and it may be that my smile pleased the little stranger. She smiled back, and into her eyes came the light of rapt, unaffected admiration.

"Hello, pretty lady," she said.

J. R.

Worth Standing For.

I received my nicest compliment from the traffic policeman that stands across from the bank where I go almost every day. He is such a nice, pleasant fellow that I always have a smile for him, and he always has a pleasant word for me.

One very hot day I said to him as I was waiting for him to blow his whistle, "You certainly must be tired standing here in this heat all day."

"Yes," he said, "I am, but it's worth standing here all day in this heat just to see you come by with your pleasant smile." L. R. W.

An Enviable Reputation.

At college there was some trouble concerning my credits in mathematics—the records had been destroyed. My adviser and I were attempting to straighten out the matter when I suggested that I secure the signatures of the instructors of the various courses that I had registered. He replied: "Never mind about that; you just make a list of them—what you say can always be taken without question." E. T. E.

NEW VICTOR RECORDS — PHOTO STUDIO LINCOLN AVE. STORE

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with correct market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

MORE than in winter, summer efforts in cooking and buying and caring for food, and presenting it, should be devoted to the keeping up of appetites. Endurance fades away when we do not eat enough and there is much to endure in summer, even if we eat with such care as to avoid all summer illnesses.

What have you got in the house or the icebox is a great question in summer time, and an equally great question is what use can you make of it. The supplies may be small, and the ingenuity great, or again we may revel in rather ample supplies and easy practices. Whether the center dish of our best meal is fried chicken, or stewed kidney beans, or stuffed cabbages, there are ways of preparing and serving these that will stimulate the appetite a hundred per cent more than some other ways. And with it all, we may strive for the smallest expenditure of time and effort, because it is hot.

Avoiding Anxious Moments.

There are many days of discouraging marketing in summer on account of the heat, and that housewife is most fortunate who can do her marketing in the early morning. But that woman is also fortunate who out of held staples can present attractive meals, but perhaps slightly unconventional ones. She will not worry about having angel cake to go with her fruit ice cream—perhaps the best and most attractive accompaniment for them—or have to be anxious about having all the fixings with which to serve a fried chicken to perfection.

She will know that if she has not a frill of paper for the drumstick, she can remove the bone or chop the part off from which the skin has shrunken away. She will not worry about the conventional sprig of washed and dried parsley to place just so at the breast end of the chicken. Powdered parsley may be used effectively—it is far superior to paprika—but raw parsley is a valuable staple.

Carrot Is a First Aid.

Powdered parsley is good with stewed beans as well as with meats and various potato dishes, and even on toast garnishment, and for seasoning soups and stews. The woman, in fact, who knows how to use parsley in a large number of ways can be counted as resourceful, and at small expense. A bunch of parsley washed, shaken almost dry, and put in a cloth bag, will keep fresh for days in the icebox, and the bag of washed carrots beside it will keep longer.

The carrot, too, is a first aid to the resourceful. We need it for the stew and pot roast. Carrot soup has an interesting history. Ground carrot may be used to piece out a scanty supply of salad materials.

All well regulated households have onions on hand, and the boiling onion is always at your service when the supply of other vegetables is short. It is almost as indispensable as potatoes, and the combinations that we may make of these two vegetables alone are almost medicinally restful foods, and no icebox is required for them.

Neither is ice required for the dried celery leaves, which are superior to celery seed in almost everything in which that seasoning is used. There is no seasoning that makes for greater finish than that of celery, once its finer and more obscure services are learned. Celery seasoning as well as celery cooking is artful.

The Bread Service.

The appetizing presentation of bread is something to practice on in teasing summer appetites. Long fingers of buttered bread or finger sandwiches, or fingers of toast may carry just that charm that makes eating a success instead of a mere necessity. A crust cut off, the bread cut with great evenness, or thinness, or blocked—all these items change bread from hunks to handsomeness.

Suppose we have not much in the house, some set of circumstances having kept us from market, yet there is a bottle of sour cream, some fresh milk, goat butter, a cucumber, some bagged salad and seasoning vegetables in the icebox, and fruit. The less perishable fruits, like oranges and lemons, may always be in store, and bananas rarely come amiss. There may be some cheese remnants and a small piece of salt pork. Dried kidney beans may give us something to take the place of meat, and should we have some sour milk on hand, we may make cottage cheese to serve also as a meat equivalent, which is the same thing as saying it is a protein food.

Cream Cheese.

Add from half a teaspoon to a teaspoon of salt to a cup of sour cream, whisk it a little or a good deal with the egg beater, pour it into a strainer lined with double cheesecloth, fold over the cloth to keep out the dust, and let it drip and grow firm. You can hurry it up by twisting the cloth, but this is likely to be wasteful. Use on crackers, or manipulate and season in all the ways you would any cream cheese. It is fine with some fresh currant jelly. When the sour cream is whipped so much that the cheese is exceedingly spongy, it may be called Chantilly cream cheese.

Cream Cheese Sandwich Filling.

Use the Chantilly cream cheese, mixing with it some finely chopped sweet and red pepper and any other seasoning to taste, like onion juice. Spread on little rounds of bread to make open sandwiches, which may be garnished with tiny threads or dots of the sweet pepper. These are quite as appetizing as the cheese fillings made with such pickled stuff as "India relish," and far more wholesome. Or you may use commercial cream cheese, softened a little with fresh cream and mixed with the peppers, or with a mixture of tomato, pepper, and onion, which is more piquant yet, perhaps. The juice and seeds should be squeezed out of the tomato. A little stiff mayonnaise may be added to the mixture. All sorts of elegance may be effected with it. Cream cheese of the right consistency—learn what by practice—may be piped.

Sour Cream and Brown Bread.

A loaf of brown bread is easy to make and bake, and this might be done just to utilize some sour cream in an easy way. Sweeten thick sour cream and add a little nutmeg, beating it up a little, and serve it on slices of brown bread. You will surely like it so, and perhaps you will find other combinations, although this is one of the tastiest. You do not have to wait for the cream to drip in this case, as when making cream cheese—a whole day often.

Cooking Kidney Beans.

The dry kidney bean is a great resource when its easy manipulations are learned. Any one with an artistic sense must love their wet beauty in the preparation, and if rightly cooked they are handsome as well, though the cooked bean has not the same chrysanthemumlike beauty as the dry bean. Pick over a cup of beans, wash, and add to them four of five cups of cold water. If the lowest point to which you can turn a burner is not one for the quietest of cooking, use the five cups, but for fireless cooking less than four will do, according to the age and dryness of the beans. Put the beans in the cold water over the lowest of flames and without a cover. If it takes an hour or over for the water to reach the boiling point, the effect is the same as long soaking in cold water. The long soaking of this process softens the protein of the bean, which heat can stiffen so that it will never come soft.

After the water has come to the boiling point the beans will need from two to three more hours of gentle cooking. If the water should be almost cooked away when the beans are done, add plain cream to make them delicious. A piece of salt pork from one-eighth to one-quarter of a pound in size may be cooked with the beans to add the fat element and make them more completely meatlike, or add plain butter to finish. Prepare the pork and put it in when the water reaches boiling point.

Accompaniments for Stewed Beans.

Plain leaves of romaine lettuce, young onions, plain cucumber peeled and cut in blocks, all give a fillip to the appetite when served with beans, and are incomparably better for the health than pickles. Plain tomato, too, peeled and cut in eighths, makes a delicious appetizer with a dish of beans, or if you want to get something like a chili sauce chop the tomato, onion, and some green pepper, pour a little French dressing over it, drain this off and save for salad, and use the mixture with the beans.

Or these three vegetables may be cooked together, with no seasoning except salt, strained and cooked down a bit, and you have a ketchup-like sauce for beans—you may cook them in it briefly—which will not help to kill the appetite if often indulged in, as vinegary ketchups will. It is not alone the things that hurt like an instantaneous blow, but the food accessories that hurt like the dropping of water which wears away the hardest stone hurt also and rarely as slowly as that water hurts the stone. The bean and ketchup combination is not a thing to eat if you would maintain your health over long periods of time.

Preparing a Cabbage for Stuffing.

Remove the outside and coarser leaves of a head of cabbage, cut off stem, so that the cabbage will stand squarely, and steam until tender. Take two forks and pull the leaves out and turn or roll in each after first cutting out the center so as to leave space for a cup of vegetable mince, heaped up. Some of the mince may also be put in back of the turned in leaves and over the whole may be poured a bit of melted butter, if necessary. The whole should look much like a great rose.

Cabbage Stuffed with Mashed Potato.

Instead of a vegetable, mince fine mashed potato, perhaps enriched with egg yolk, may be put into a steamed cabbage, butter poured over, and the whole browned a tiny bit under the broiler. This is something for the good cabbage cook only to concoct. The good cabbage cook cooks this vegetable gently, and can blend it perfectly with almost every other vegetable that grows, in one way or another. Cabbage rightly prepared has vitamines no end. A good substantial cabbage dish like this with potato, egg finished, with bread and butter and fruit may make a pretty meal, and enough, or have some cheese with it to supply the protein element lacking. But you do not need a lot of protein at every meal.

Fried and Powdered Parsley.

In frying bacon, sausages, etc.—anything in which the fat is not burned, the meat will be the better if not allowed to stand in the fat, and if the pan is canted up slightly, some parsley for garnishing them or for other use may be cooked. Those who have not tried frying parsley and got something dark green and crisp enough to break into a powder do not know what a satisfactory garnish and palatable one they can get at small expense. The parsley must be washed crisp and dry before it is put into the fat in the side of the pan or into deep fat. It is cooked in about a minute.

Stick to Senreco and Your Teeth Will Stick to You

Have White, Radiant Teeth That Will Compel Unstinted Admiration.

Don't neglect your gums, whatever else you do, or you'll be sorry later on.

Keep them strong, sturdy and full of life. Bear in mind that a healthy plant won't grow in foul soil. Neither will unhealthy gums produce good teeth.

Your dentist is one of your best friends—don't forget that—see him often—many thousands of men and women are enjoying health today because of the dentist's knowledge and skill.

You can have white teeth so radiantly clean and fascinating and so free from film or coating that they will compel unstinted admiration. You can have firm, healthy gums with no taint of disease if you will only visit your dentist occasionally and use Senreco tooth paste night and morning.

Senreco is a dentist's formula, a combination so perfect that, besides being the finest cleanser of teeth and the most enjoyable of dentifrices, is an active enemy of the vicious germs of pyorrhea—that all too common and abhorrent disease that attacks the gums and causes them to bleed, recede and grow soft, tender and spongy.

Get a tube of Senreco today—the good results will astonish you—in just a few days your teeth will radiate purity. Stick to Senreco and your teeth will stick to you.

Hartman's—First as Usual!

Introducing Scientifically Built and Upholstered Furniture That Is Guaranteed Free from the Menace of Germs and Moths

AGAIN Hartman's leads the way! Once more we have a big vital story to give Chicago, so important that even an entire page is not sufficient to tell it all. For the first time in the history of the furniture industry we can offer upholstered furniture that permanently banishes the Moth and Germ Evil. Now you may have in your home Rex Sanitized Upholstered Furniture, which is specially treated by an exclusive, patented process so that every particle of raw material, every fiber that goes into its construction both inside and out is forever free from the attacks of germs and moths. It is fitting indeed that Hartman's, always a step in advance in the proper furnishing of a home, should be the first to announce this epochal achievement. We have arranged for huge quantities of these suites, and our introductory price represents a big saving to you. You owe it to yourself, to your family and your children, to see Rex Sanitized Furniture. Come in tomorrow and let us explain how this special process was perfected and what it does to complete the era of sanitation in the home.

Eliminating the Invisible Danger That Lurks in Every Living Room

Complete Sanitation in the Home

THE history of the modern home is a story of a constant progress in germ repellent measures. The modern antiseptic refrigerator has supplanted the ice-box; the rug that can be taken up and cleaned at will has eliminated the germ-laden carpet tacked to the floor; vacuum cleaners collect dust and germs; sanitary, washable walls are now universally used in kitchens and bathrooms; and now science gives us germ-proof furniture to complete absolute sanitation in the home.

Germ Life Exterminated by New Process

IN this toil of progress, leaders among manufacturers of upholstered furniture have not been blind to their responsibility. Makeshift methods of spraying from the outside have not been successful. It was necessary to start from the basic materials inside the completed piece. After the most exhaustive laboratory work and hundreds of actual tests the Rex Sanitized process was perfected. Now we can absolutely guarantee that the moth and germ evil is ended.

On Display Only at Hartman's

REX Sanitized Upholstered Furniture can only be seen in Chicago at Hartman's. We have been selected as authorized distributors and can explain the process by which this upholstered furniture is rendered immune from the attacks of all germs. Think of the extra years of added service Sanitized furniture will give! Think of its safety, a big factor in any home and especially where there are children. Then remember its cost is no greater than ordinary furniture.

Enormous Production Brings Price Down

BECAUSE of the tremendous wave of public interest the announcement of Rex Sanitized Furniture aroused, the manufacturer is devoting an entire factory to the production of the type of suite pictured above exclusively. Volume production in building furniture means a real saving exactly the same as any other line. The manufacturer gives us this saving and we are passing it along to you. See this wonderful suite tomorrow! It establishes a record for real value-giving!

Speaking of Titles, Camera Men, Horses, and Dogs

By Mae Tinee.

If you don't mind, there are several things we would like to get out of our system this morning.

To begin with—did you see "Birth Control"? If you did, did you notice anything in the picture that had to do WITH birth control? Wasn't the picture just the same old stuff about the girl who goes wrong, with hideous clinical illustrations on the side?

So many letters come to this department protesting about deceptive titles. The writers claim that, to a certain extent, they have to go by the title until they have seen the film. They have to go ENTIRELY by it if they have not read reviews on the film. Therefore titles and advertising matter should be honest. The people behind mayn't WANT them to be accurate, but some power BEHIND the people behind should compel them to label their goods properly. Mr. Hays, please answer.

MR. HAYS, PLEASE ANSWER.

If the subject matter of the picture lived up to the title, it would have to be a clinical demonstration which would probably cause the producer to be ridden out of the country on a rail. (Or given a medal.)

We're growing up. We want what we want, and the one thing we do want is to be recognized as thinking human beings. Producers on the whole have discovered that they've got to do considerable brain work to live up to the demands of their optiences. They used to put over a lot of things because they (a lot of times) themselves didn't know any better, and they trusted to the gods that our public would not.

But time brings changes. SO—avast (isn't that what they say in shipping circles when they want to get rid of anything?), avast with the deceptive movie title.

Let it talk turkey!

The above is ONE thing that has been irritating the department. Here's another:

Why on earth don't some of you now and then show an interest in the camera men who take the pictures of stirring events?

Oftentimes the camera man is called upon to take the greatest of risks. A star may buy another human to double for her or him. The camera man has to be on the job ALL the time. If anything happens to him, it means, perhaps, that a few scenes will have to be retaken. But it also means the same risk for another camera man.

HAIL THE CAMERA MAN!

Now, go ahead and write in and ask how tall some of them are and if they have blue eyes and if they weigh enough and if their wives love them. ANYhow, realize when you see a daring stunt portrayed on the screen that probably the camera man is taking a lot more chances than the star.

And THEN, said she—(this isn't a grievance): Did you see Queenie, the horse star of Century Comedies, in "Horse Tears"?

If you didn't—Do! And after you've seen her tell me what you think of her work. If ever an animal THOUGHT, that horse did while making that film. The things she accomplishes are almost unbelievable.

Stoutheart, the dog, and Queenie, the horse! Ah, THERE are a pair of Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:

"Memoirs of a Midget," by Walter de la Mare.
"Peter Whiffle," by Carl Van Vechten.
"Maria Chapdelaine," by Louis Hémon.
"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.
"Up Stream: An American Chronicle," by Ludwig Lewisohn.
"The Mind in the Making," by Dr. James Harvey Robinson.

INSPIRED—shall we say?—by the intrepid English explorers who come to America month after month, during the open season for lecturers, braving all the dangers of American sleeping cars, American chambers of commerce, and American home brew, who count as naught their spiritual discomforts at the American accent and the American gaucherie, spurred on, may we say, by the self-sacrifice and stoicism, not to say altruism, of the brave band of visiting British literati—who are willing to be stared at rudely by the American bourgeoisie at a mere nothing of two dollars each hour, effulgent with a spirit of reciprocity, with a longing to do England as her lecturers do us, Stephen Leacock made a lecture tour of the land one of whose chief literary outputs is speakers for the more extravagant women's clubs of the United States.

STEPHEN LEACOCK.

Then he wrote a book about it which he calls "My Discovery of England."

He went, frankly, as a humorist. He does up the country of his birth as no American ever could. He discovers England as thoroughly as any of the visiting novelists and poets have discovered America, and even more rapidly than some of them. Whereas a few of them have taken at least three months to gather their impressions of America, he has been able, in some instances, to formulate theories about the soul of the English in as many hours. The book is a series of papers, written in Mr. Leacock's favorite vein of humor, which somehow makes you feel that he is always punning, though he is not.

"The export of impressions has now been going on so long that the balance of trade in impressions is all disturbed," he says, and he proceeds to restore it more nearly to normal. Some of the nuggets that he dug from England are:

The difference between our politics and English politics seems to be that our politicians will do anything for money and the English politicians won't; they just take the money and won't do a thing for it.

In Scotland prohibition is not coming; if anything it is going. . . . In Ireland prohibition will only be introduced when they have run out of other forms of trouble.

I never on any occason saw whisky made use of as a beverage (in Scotland). I have seen people take it, of course, as a medicine, or as a precaution, or as a wise offset against a rather treacherous climate, but as a beverage, never.

From the paper on "Oxford As I See It," which contains much sound educational truth:

If I were founding a university I would found first a smoking room; then

Thirty-first Paper—"The Prisoner of Zenda"; or, Perfection in Its Kind.

Good families are generally worse than any others.

This heredity we hear so much about is the finest scandalmonger in the world; it laughs at discretion, and writes strange entries between the lines of the "Peerages."

"The difference between you and Robert," said my sister-in-law, who often (bless her!) speaks on a platform, and oftener still as if she were on one, "is that he recognizes the duties of his position, and you only see the opportunities of yours."

"To a man of spirit, my dear Rose," I answered, "opportunities are duties."

"You should always trust a man," observed Sapt, fitting the key in the lock—"just as far as you must."

A real king's life is perhaps a hard one; but a pretended king's is, I warrant, much harder.

I had already developed one attribute of royalty—a feeling that I need not reveal all my mind even to my intimate friends.

Ah! but a man cannot be held to write down in cold blood the wild and black thoughts that storm his brain when an uncontrolled passion has battered a breach for them. Yet, unless he sets up as a saint, he need not hate himself for them. He is better employed, as it humbly seems to me, in giving thanks that power to resist was vouchsafed to him than in fretting over wicked impulses which came unsought and extort an unwilling hospitality from the weakness of our nature.

For my part, if a man must needs be a knave, I would have him a debonair knave, and I liked Rupert Hentzau better than his long-faced, close-eyed companions. It makes your sin no worse, as I can see, to do it a la mode and stylishly.

I spoke a little sternly, for there is seldom harm in infusing a little fear into a woman's liking for you.

Cold not only saps a man's courage if he has to die, but impairs his energies if others have to die, and, finally, gives him rheumatics, if it be God's will that he lives.

("The Prisoner of Zenda.") ANTHONY HOPE HAWKINS.

RESPLENDENT scenes; brave men and bad and good fighting a-plenty—fights for honor, for love, and for a throne; the clang and clank and clatter of cuirassiers escorting their sovereign on an illustrious day through the streets of an ancient capital; a cathedral resonant with the thunder of a coronation march and a cardinal archbishop bending low to place in majesty's hands a letter from the pope; a princess with a pale face and glorious golden hair; a solicitous chancellor and an old faithful marshal; cannon roaring salutes and bugles snarling and rows of lackeys lining the broad marble staircase of a palace; a sequestered hunting lodge and a grim castle where bad business is afoot, and sinister peasants, and servants who know too much; a dissolute king and a bonnie pretender playacting kingship for the king's sake; and a veritable Iago, loving mischief for mischief's sake, touched fleetingly to life and laughter.

And over all the bright face of danger, and no man in the tale caring much, for each was more in love with living memorably than living long.

This is no tale that is merely told; it gallops, now by open roads stretching away from a city gate, now through forest glades and through storm, and then, for our men are closing in on danger, it moves cautiously. You can hear the horses panting, and the whispering of one man to another:

Making a circuit, we avoided the town, and in an hour found ourselves slowly mounting the hill that led to the castle of Zenda. The night was dark and very stormy; gusts of wind and spits of rain caught us as we breasted the incline, and the great trees moaned and sighed. When we came to a thick clump, about a quarter of a mile from the castle, we bade our three friends to hide there with the horses. Sapt had a whistle—

Like a celebrated romanticist of an earlier time, Anthony Hope knew the theatric value of the furtive whistle sounding out of darkness and peril. The

Of Daylight Saving and Mr. Pollock's New Play

By Sheppard Butler.

TIMES are dull in the theaters. From the Chicago amusement marts no tidings emanate, except those concerning the departure of players from shows that remain, with substitutes. Nothing new is in immediate prospect, unless Arnold Daly realizes his thought of coming sometime soon to reveal Crane Wilbur's mystery play, "The Monster." Elsewhere, too, affairs are approximately at a standstill. New York subsists languidly on a paltry two score of entertainments—maybe less, if the roster of overnight closings were known. Mr. Archibald Haddon cables from London, via The Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service, that "more theaters are closed at present than ever during this period for many years past."

Plans for the future, of course, engage the attention of the hopeful showmen—interesting plans, some of which may be carried out. For example, it may thrill you to know that they have declared war upon the institution known as daylight saving. Tampering with the clock, they find, is grievously inimical to business; no more meddling Joshuas will interrupt the course of the sun if the puissant overlords of the theater have anything to say about it.

Thus the agricultural bloc has found a new ally in championing a return to horological normalcy. Canvassing the country for reasons why the playhouses were not doing so well, the theater men found that they had been overlooking a bet in the way of things to worry about. Scores of theaters, they were told, have been closed because somebody set the timepieces ahead (or is it back?). Too much daylight at 8 p. m., it seems, suggests golf, motoring, and kindred distractions. It is bad, therefore, and must be abolished.

The cohorts have been marshaled and a manifesto has been issued under the seal of the International Theatrical association, a new organization headed by A. L. Erlanger and Lee Shubert, which comprises the membership of virtually all the lesser managerial groups. These have pledged themselves, individually and collectively, to fight daylight saving to the death.

Christ on the Stage—a Perilous Expedient.

If this does not interest you, perhaps you will care to hear of Channing Pollock's new play, "The Fool," which Richard Bennett will soon act experimentally in Los Angeles. The news about "The Fool" is that it employs the rare and perilous expedient of introducing Christ as a character on the stage. This has seldom been ventured in the purely commercial theater, and Mr. Pollock has never been rated as one of the playwrights from whom anything so daring might be expected.

To be sure, he is not without his precedents. There is such an apparition in Rostand's "La Samaritaine," played not so long ago by Mme. Bernhardt. On the screen Mr. Griffith achieved it with lovely dignity and no hint of offense in "Intolerance." And there are several instances of appearance by indirection, such as the shaft of light in "Ben Hur" and the implication as to the central character in "The Servant in the House." But these are works wherein the reference is historical or at least wholly indigenous to the theme.

In the Pollock play it is neither. Christ appears in what is described as "one short flash," at the end of the first act. The rest is modern, secular, and not at all mystic, being propounded as an answer to the old question, What would happen to a man who, today, tried to live according to the teachings of Jesus Christ?

"I've had this play in mind for ten years," says Mr. Pollock, "—have, in fact, been working on it off and on the whole time. The idea came to me one night when I was reading my Bible. It's a thing, I'll admit, that I had never done before. Perhaps that is why I was so immediately impressed. It struck me then that the real Christ was a very simple, living personage, dwelling by truth alone, and that he had been very much befogged by his followers.

"Perhaps 'The Fool' won't attract the usual crowd to the theater after the first curiosity is worn off. But what of the people who don't usually go to the theater because they don't care for the usual plays? Perhaps some of them will come to see my play."

It is said that a group of Christian Scientists saw "The Fool" in rehearsal recently, read it, and offered to buy it for production under their own auspices.

News of the Theaters.

"For Goodness Sake," at the Garrick, is suffering from what might be termed a protracted exodus of principals. John Hazzard, the principal comedian, departed last night and will be succeeded this evening by John E. Young, who used to act at the La Salle in that theater's palmy days as a home of musical comedy. Miss Marjorie Gateson and Miss Virginia O'Brien left several days ago, their places being filled by Miss Ethel Wilson and Miss Edna Bates; Vinton Freedly is in a restive mood, and the dancing Astaires, highly important members of the cast, have handed in their notice, to take effect a week hence. So far as anyone knows, the effervescent Charles Judels proposes to remain.

Ed Wynn's arrival at the Illinois with the entertainment called "The Perfect Fool" may be delayed somewhat by the comedian's disturbing experience with the noble game of golf. Advised by his physician to give a badly shattered ankle some exercise preparatory to having it X-rayed and treated, he engaged a week ago in a foursome with Ring Lardner, Frank Craven, and Oscar Shaw. At a critical moment in the match he fell down a hill and broke his arm. Wynn continued his New York performances for two days with his arm in a sling and then closed the show. He expects to have his injured extremities mended in time to begin his Chicago engagement not later than Aug. 27.

Carpenters, bricklayers, and Miss Kitty Gordon are busily engaged in conferring a new atmosphere of enchantment on Mr. Fred Mann's Rainbo Garden, which overlooks the cemeteries along the upper reaches of North Clark street. Pursuing his duty of reporting such thrills as are available to amusement seekers hereabouts, your correspondent hied him thither in a recent evening to contemplate the remodeling operations, which are elaborate, and see the new show, which is called "The Passing Hour." Agreeable conversation was vouchsafed by the management, but the matter of providing the reporter with a seat from which the festivities might be visible was neglected. He has, therefore, only a vague impression of winsome ladies engaged in lively dances and Miss Gordon singing regally. It seemed a sprightly entertainment, and no doubt you will enjoy it if the table they give you is not too far removed from the scene of operations.

"Molly Darling," which succumbed recently after a brief career at the Palace Music hall, is being revised, recast, and made ready for further adventures—this time in New York.

Arnold Daly's first performance of the Crane Wilbur mystery play, referred to on the preceding page, is now set for July 26 in Stamford, Conn. Whether he will bring it later to Chicago, as promised, is not definitely made known.

"Shuffle Along," the all colored entertainment which was to have come to the Olympic this fall, will betake itself to London instead. Its record breaking New York run will end on July 22. The month of August will be devoted to an engagement in Boston, and the invasion of England will follow.

Miss Marie Tempest, the English comedienne, is due in Chicago this morning, on the last lap of a trip around the world. She is returning to this country after an absence of five years to appear under John Golden's management in a new play by Arthur Richman called "A Serpent's Tooth." Frank Bacon and others of Mr. Golden's players in "Lightnin'" will welcome her and be her hosts at luncheon at the Blackstone.

"Lilliom" is gone, but the indefatigable Miss Charlotte Learn is still busy. No sooner had the Molnar play departed, a week ago, than Miss Learn stepped into the rôle vacated by Miss Marguerite McNulty in "Lillies of the Field." The part formerly played by Norman Trevor at Powers' is now being acted by Averill Harris.

"Lightnin's" claim to the long run record for American plays is to remain, it seems, unchallenged. For a time it appeared that "The Bat" might be a contestant for the endurance title, having been performed without interruption in New York since Aug. 23, 1920, but the owners of the Rinehart-Hopwood thriller have decided to wind up its career there on Sept. 2 and move the piece to Boston. It will then have had one week more than two years in Manhattan, whereas "Lightnin'" lasted through three calendar years. No other current play gives the slightest promise of duplicating this achievement, and it probably will stand as a record in this hemisphere for many seasons to come.

London does better in the matter of long runs. Nobody seems to know why, but many entertainments have demonstrated the fact. "Lightnin's" record in New York fell far short of the mark hung up by "Chu Chin Chow" in the British capital, and "The Bat's" two year run has already been eclipsed in Hammersmith by "The Beggar's Opera," which has been in performance there since the summer of 1920. It is now proposed to keep Mr. Gay's quaint cantata going until Christmas, when it will have had a London career of two years and a half. It has been enormously prosperous in England, though the excellent company sent to reproduce the revival in America had an uncertain existence and never managed to stay long in any one place.

Hammersmith is to have another operetta soon—something having to do with the life of Robert Burns. It is being written by John Drinkwater, whose "Abraham Lincoln" first saw the light in this same outlying district of London, and is to have music by Frederic Austin, who arranged the score for "The Beggar's Opera."

This column's recent announcement that Joseph Schildkraut will play Romeo next year is confirmed in New York, though it is said that the adventure will be deferred until after his projected appearance in Ibsen's "Peer Gynt." Miss Eva La Gallienne, here with him in "Liliom," will be the Juliet. Miss Lenore Ulric also is named as a prospective Juliet, her guiding genius, Mr. Belasco, being all wrapped up for the moment in Shakespearean plans. He has the Warfield production of "The Merchant of Venice" well under way and is talking of "Richard III.," presumably with Lionel Atwill in mind. All this is as it may be. One suspects that Miss Ulric's Juliet is not likely to be soon revealed if her popularity in "Kiki" continues.

Miss Winifred Lenihan, visible at the Central last fall during the short lived engagement of "The Detour," will play Anne Hathaway in the American production of Clemence Dane's "Will Shakespeare." McKay Morris, Fritz Leiber, and some others are being considered for the title rôle.

De Wolf Hopper is back in the surroundings that suit him best, singing in Baltimore in a more or less pretentious revival of the operas of Gilbert and Sullivan. With him are Arthur Cunningham and Herbert Waterous, also veterans at this sort of thing. This week, a Baltimore paper reverently announces, "between the acts of 'H. M. S. Pinafore' Mr. Hopper will recite 'Casey at the Bat.'"

Sam Bernard is in London, spending most of his time watching the performances of "Tons of Money," a highly popular farce in which he is to appear on this side of the Atlantic.

New French Play Smashes Sloth of London Hot Spell

By Archibald Haddon.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, July 8.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—The period of inactivity has not often provided a sensation like "The Risk," an English translation of the new play by the French dramatist, doctor, philanthropist, and millionaire baron, Henri D. Rothschild, which is now playing at the Strand theatre. Rothschild's purpose is to expose the criminal practices and black sheep among French surgeons operating unnecessarily for huge fees. The play also points with scorn at those paying large percentage fees to doctors introducing their subjects at the operating table and the entertainment in operating theatres of jaded society people, especially women seeking unhealthy excitement.

British Medical Men Protest.

The theme is distasteful to British medical men, who are loudly protesting on the grounds the play is calculated to create public uneasiness regarding bona fide medical faculties in all countries. Such criticism is disarmed by the fact the play is purely French in intention and the local application is obvious.

The audiences are thrilled by the Grand Guignol atmosphere, the realism of the scenes stocked with surgical appliances, the great tragic acting of Bourchier as Doctor Revard, the conscience stricken surgeon who commits suicide after performing a fatal and needless operation on a wealthy young American woman for an extravagant fee which would free him from the clutches of usurers.

Bourchier's Acting Excellent.

Bourchier's interpretation of Revard is one of the best played parts of his career. His facial expressions in the suicide scene are wonderful. There is dreadful realism in the climax of his dying agonies.

The play is a sound and well constructed drama apart from the controversial elements. It was excellently translated by José Levy, who ran the London Grand Guignol for two years, but has just withdrawn from that grewsome entertainment.

Bobby Clark Popular.

Much regret is expressed over the fact we may soon lose Comedian Bobby Clark, whose stay is limited by the necessity of "Chuckles of 1922" returning to the States. It is a curious coincidence that Clark is an ardent Dickensian, like the last American burlesque comedian who made a great London success—Walter Catlett.

Film interest is concentrated on the visit of Mae Marsh, who entertained at a great reception in the Savoy hotel. She is starting work immediately on the big British picture entitled "Flames of Passion." Miss Marsh is heading a cast of famous British players, including Eva Moore, Hilda Bayley, and Allen Aynesworth. The latest British film triumph is Cecil Hepworth's "Through Three Reigns," consisting of disinterred pictures of national events during the reigns of Victoria, Edward VII., and George V.

'Span of Life' Exhumed; Amuses Modish Paris

By Henry Wales.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, July 8.—[By Special Cable.]—Sutton Vane's "Span of Life," which was the sensation of New York thirty years ago, just opened at the Gaite Lyrique theater under the name of "Le Pont Vivant," with Parisian touches.

One of the spectacular scenes shows an Atlantic liner, which the villain, who has just insured the vessel, attempts to wreck by tampering with the lighthouse lantern. A few minutes later the villain saws the planks in a bridge over a deep gorge and cuts off his pursuers.

The review "Canard Enchaine" at the Boulevard theater, is composed of a variety of small comedies and is strikingly successful. The Canard Enchaine is one of the best humorous papers in Paris. One sketch, "At the Telephone," shows Tramel in the comedian rôle of a son-in-law who hears over the telephone sounds of his mother-in-law being attacked by robbers. When the police arrive he swears.

Another sketch shows the members of an extraordinary family sitting around a table served by a valet who looks like a corpse. The valet hands a visiting card to the father. It is from the daughter's lover, asking for her hand. The father leaves the stage and staggers back with a bloody chopper, saying, "You asked for my daughter's hand. Here 'tis."

Newest Roman Drama Scores Great Triumph

By V. De Santo.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, July 8.—[By Special Cable.]—With the exception of one new play and one new musical comedy, the Roman theaters this week played standard dramas, among which were Ibsen's "Ghosts" and Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac." The musical comedy at the Eliso the later is called "Adollaro Regains His Youth," and is by Walter Collo. It deals with an old man who has become young by means of a monkey gland operation. It is full of humorous incidents, but is considered a failure by critics, especially because it lacks original and catchy music.

On the other hand, the week's new

NEW YORK, July 8.—[Special.]—Quite a number of Broadway theaters did not have special matinees last Tuesday, which, as some people persist in calling it, was Independence day. Their managers felt, according to report, that the Fourth of July was an out of town day, and that they could not hope to compete with the beaches, the golf courses, the motor roads, etc. So they decided not to try. But it rained. There is no dispute about that fact. And a good many people who wanted to go out of town didn't. Some of them went to matinees instead, and more of them would have done likewise, it is said, if there had been more matinees. So the question is, how much did their foresight cost the managers who failed to provide afternoon entertainments?

The Italian government, says a confident note from the press department of the San Carlo Opera company, may back an Italian theater here next season. The plan for its subsidy is being pushed in Rome by Fortune Gallo, the San Carlo impresario, it is added.

The Threshold players are scouting for new plays, especially one act pieces, which should be submitted to Clare Tree Major, managing director, Threshold Players, 571 Lexington avenue, New York City. Incidentally Mr. Major and Walter Hampden, who is also affiliated with the Threshold Players' organization, are to collaborate on a new acting edition of Shakespeare, it is understood.

Miss Margaret Lawrence is to have the leading rôle in James Forbes' new comedy, "The Endless Chain," which A. L. Erlanger will produce next fall.

"Monica," a comedy by Mrs. Christopher Wyatt, will be tried out Monday night at Atlantic City by John Golden. In the cast are Miss Grace La Rue, Hale Hamilton, Richie Ling, Theodore Westman Jr., Miss Lydia Westman, and Miss Leila Bennett. It is expected to open here the first week in August.

Gregory Kelly and Miss Ruth Gordon will play the leading rôles in "Bristol Glass," when it is tried out in Cleveland. Perhaps it will be seen in New York.

Michael Morton's new play, "By Right of Conquest," in which Miss Pauline Frederick may play the leading rôle, is soon to be produced. . . . Vera Bloom and J. B. Rethy have collaborated on a musical comedy, "Darling," with music by A. d'Annunzio, brother of the famous Gabriela. It will be presented in the fall. . . . Frank Mandel and Oscar Hammerstein II., have written a musical play for Miss Nora Bayes, "The Queen of Hearts," which is announced to come to town in September. . . . Miss Fanny Brice may be seen here next season in a musical comedy.

With the new rollicking dance records, a good song by a popular artist, or a bit of light opera, summer evenings are filled with pleasure. Music is a tonic. It enlivens a dull hour. It invites impromptu, gay parties. Parents, too, will find the Victrola presents many attractive suggestions for parties and other entertainment for the children.

Special outfits have been arranged to facilitate your selections. There are models to fit every purse and purpose. Especially appealing at the present time are the small portable models. They are so compact in size and so inexpensive that they are becoming an indispensable part of the equipment of motorists and other holiday excursionists.

Victrola "Tea Cart" Outfit
Victrola No. 9, Mahogany or Oak. All exclusive, patented Victor improvements, $75.00. The outfit at $110.50 includes Tea Cart model cabinet, equipped with a rim which is hinged at the back so that the Victrola may be easily slipped into place. (The combination when assembled appears to be in a single piece.) Two 10-inch record albums and one 12-inch record album and eight selections (4 black label, double faced records) all of your own choice.

acting. Wouldn't you LOVE to see them make a picture! Some day, here's hoping we see them co-starred!

I've been meaning to call "Horse Feathers" to your attention for the last week.

BROWSING BACKWARD

Dear Miss Tinée: In looking over your "Browsing Backward" column I am tempted to submit my idea of a real screen production. "Joan the Woman" is the one, and who that has witnessed it will ever be able to erase from memory those indelible characters, the upstanding, plausible "man child" of Geraldine Farrar, who's clear blue eyes seem to reflect the visions of "Joan"; the highly romantic "Eric Trent" of Wallace Reid, the atrocious and diabolical "Cauchon" of that sterling veteran, Theodore Roberts, not to forget the sneakling "Dauphin" of Raymond Hatton, the mad monk "L'Oeilleur" of Tully Marshall, the wondering and perplexed mother of the "Inspired Joan" by Lillian Leighton, and Marjorie Day, Cleo Ridgley, and a host of now famous screen stars. Ye gods! What a cast! Let's hope, Mae, you use your influence and urge some enterprising manager to revive it.

Yours sincerely, GEORGE DREHER.

[N. B. Note—Ah, to HAVE some influence! (Sometimes.)]

Dear Miss Tinée: I am sending the list of some movies which "stuck with me."

Billie Burke in Peggy. She was sweet enough to eat when learning to fish and telling the fairy story to the children. I still see the dear old Scotch castle.

Marie Doro in "Morals of Marcus." If ever an actress fitted a part and furnished amusement "along mit" she did.

"Hearts of the World"—The Gish girls and Robert Harron—just great—and by the way, Lillian didn't stand in a corner and yip—not entirely—while the fight was on. She did some neat work with a knife and Dorothy exploded a bomb at the right minute—don't you remember?

Constance Talmadge and Harrison Ford in "Experimental Marriage."

Marshall Neilan's "Go and Get It." —Fascinating—I didn't take a long breath till I got outside again.

H. B. Walthall in "The Misleading Lady." I'd love to see it again.

I do wish they would have more things like Richard Bartlemess dancing with his mother in "Way Down East." Didn't that just bring tears of happiness to your eyes?

So ends the amateur's opinion.

Sincerely yours,

[Mrs. E. N.] LENORA VAN SLYKE.

Editor's Note—What do you mean "amateur"?

KICK KORNER

IT'S OBJECT OBJECTION.

Dear Madam: I am an ardent "film fan" and have been for the last six years and I make a point of seeing every picture that is at all worth while seeing on an average four a week.

A few days ago, when in Chicago, I found they were showing "Smiling Through." I had read a great deal about the picture. I went in. To say I was disappointed is to put it mildly. In the first place the slowness of the action and the number of "close ups" were irritating in the extreme. But worse than that were several glaring anachronisms—forty years before 1914 was 1874, but the characters were seen in dresses that would have been a bit old fashioned in 1860. The wedding was to take place on the lawn at apparently 7 or 8 in the evening. In England, where the picture was supposed to be taking place, in 1860 and for many years afterwards no marriage ceremony was ever performed after 12 a. m. because it would not have been legal. [1.] Also in those days weddings were performed in churches, not houses or lawns. [2.]

Church of England clergymen of that period would have most likely been unfrocked if they had attempted to dress as the clergyman in the picture and if he was supposed to be a priest of the Church of Rome, it was still more absurd because even in the present day Catholics are never married later than High Mass at noon. [3.] Then, when the poor girl was shot, the doctor, beyond listening at her heart in a careless way, did nothing at all to help her. He never had her carried into the house; he never offered to do a thing for her; just shook his head and let it go at that. [4.] Also the wound never bled. [5.] H. M. C.

Editor's Note—1. Are you sure? 2. Always? 3. If they're married at mass. But they can be married in the church or any other place at any time. 4. He was probably a good doctor and knew there was no hope. 5. Lots of wounds don't bleed.

As to the costumes, I'm afraid you're going to have to argue a bit with other film fans.

THE DANCING ASTAIRES.

Sister Adele at the left, Brother Fred at the right. Their blithe evolutions contribute notably to the well-being of "For Goodness Sake," the current diversion at the Garrick.

Dear Miss Tinée: Not exactly a kick, but why are people in the movies blind? To wit:

Two people possibly conspiring together or maybe talking of love are standing near a door and the villain or husband opens it halfway and listens. These people standing sideways would ordinarily see out of the corner their eyes when the door is opened, but, alas, they're always blind to the door in the movies. N. B.

Dear Miss Tinée: As I am impressed by your impartial criticisms, I am writing to your "Kick Korner." Last night at a movie I saw a so-called comedy entitled "O'Daddy," featuring Eddie Lyons. The motif of it is, a mongrel is placed on the edge of a balcony of a ballroom and the dog shakes fleas on the dancers below. The dancers, in turn, make disgusting contortions to scratch their bodies. How any producer can insult the public by showing such repulsive and nauseating films is beyond my comprehension. I wonder if I am a crank, or are there others who think as I do!

J. C. WADE.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE CHILD EXPERT.

He was a great authority
On all that appertained
To fetching little children up
The way they should be trained;
He knew just what to feed the dears
And what was just enough. . . .
Of carbohydrates, fats, and sich
His lore was vast, profound, and rich,
But though he told them which was which,
They wouldn't eat the stuff.

He was a great authority
On pedagogic lore,
And teachers sat in silent awe
When he assumed the floor;
At training young ideas to shoot
He was supreme, he said;
He taught them C A T spells cat,
And other jolly things like that;
But one thing floored this feller flat
Was keeping them in bed.

He was a great authority,
Which he conceded, too;
He knew so many, many things,
And some of them were true;
His knowledge of the little dears
Was wide and vast and deep,
But one thing children would not do
For him or me (or even you)—
He'd make them take their naps, 'tis true,
But he couldn't make them sleep.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

DON L.: Keep right on coinciding! Don't you let your friends tack any such names on you. You are probably rather QUEER, but I refuse to believe that you are a "crustaceous" anything. You're afraid I'll die poor? Well, what is it to die poor? The catch comes in LIVING poor.

JUST ME: You're a nice little old comforter, that's what YOU are, Just Me! Not being a mag, I do not know why "men do not like Rowdy Valentino." As a matter of fact, I didn't know they didn't. Jealous? Quite likely. He DOES play havoc with the women folk, you know. Sorry you've told me "all." I was hoping you'd write again some time. Try!

AMETHYST: You can tell me anything! But there's a subtle something about your letter that suggests you'd like to CALL me something. And you can't call me anything. O, yes, I reckon you can, but please don't. No, Dorothy Dalton is not at present married to Lew Cody. I don't know who's fault it is. Nor care greatly. Do you?

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Why Is a Locust? Lake Geneva Birds and Squirrels Know

By Mme. X.

LAST week end, which included the great and glorious Fourth, I made the acquaintance of a new and rather magnificent visitor to this part of the world. He has come in cohorts that make all other great aggregations of units seem infinitessimal and paltry. He fills the daylight hours with a shrill and continuous sound like unto the voice of a winter gale keening through telegraph wires a hundred feet up in the air. The woodland paths are pitted with holes made by him and his kind. His wings splinter the glittering air as they fall from his blue body when he needs them no more.

In coloring he displays a taste both sombre and rich. A pair of intense coral eyes glare stonily at you when you pick him off some leaf or twig. The frame work of his metallic and transparent wings is of a vivid orange. His waistcoat is of brown flannel and in his vest pocket he carries a small gray drum with which he fills the land with that shrill, ear piercing din above referred to. He is, in short, the seventeen year locust.

A Feast for Birds and Animals.

He is called a pest, but he is the least pestiferous pest that ever swarmed over the country. If the birds on the Martin Ryerson place at Lake Geneva waddle about and fly as if water logged and heavy with food it is because they are gorged with locusts. If the chipmunks on the Chapin estate have lost their quondam svelt figures it is for the same reason. If the squirrels on the Walden Shaw place gaze with indifference on their diet of nuts it is because they, too, have looked on the locust when he was fat. If the cherries hang in rich, red clusters on the Charles Hutchinson's cherry trees it is because the birds and squirrels are too fed up with locusts to notice their former favorite food. Even the cats and dogs who dwell along the wooded shores of that beautiful inland sea have feasted to such an extent on these mysterious insects that their regular meals have no interest for them.

Never in recent years have the fruit trees hung so heavy with fruit, nor the bushes been so thick with berries, all because it is seventeen years since 1905 when this year's crop of locusts were sown in the earth by the preceding tribe.

What signal woke them from their long sleep?

Yerkes Observatory Is Feature.

The sixty-two foot telescope, the largest in the world, at the Yerkes observatory overlooking Lake Geneva, tackles and solves no more profound mystery than this. The Yerkes observatory is a most picturesque feature of the landscape surrounding Lake Geneva. It gives a decidedly Mohammedan air to the scenery with its big dome and two smaller ones. It is an objective of pilgrimage to formidable throngs on Saturday afternoons when it is open to the public. As many as between 1,300 and 1,300 persons have visited it in a single afternoon.

It was first conceived in 1892 by George Ellery Hale, Chicago's very distinguished astronomer. It was made possible by Charles T. Yerkes, the famous street railway magnate whose name was not always associated with such public spirited services to mankind. He gave the money necessary to build the house and purchase the great lense and mighty tube. Ever since the telescope was installed in 1895 it has nightly searched the heavens for the answer to many secrets.

Do your like statistics? I do. The telescope is, as I said before, the largest in the world [there is no statement that so captivates an American as that]. It is 40 inches in diameter; 62 feet long, with spectroscopic attachments which add 10 feet to its length. It weighs 20 tons in all, and yet can be moved by a touch of the hand in its pursuit of the stars. The cast iron column which supports it rests on a solid concrete foundation which in its turn is set in the gravel which underlies the hills and lakes of that region like a vast, tessalated pavement. It has a driving clock which keeps it turning with imperceptible speed that just matches that of the whirling stars or can be regulated to follow the swifter sun and the hurrying moon.

The reverberating dome that roofs it creeps around and around on a lot of little wheels like a gigantic turtle. The floor beneath it rises, at the will of man, with a curious air of stealth that reminds one of Edgar Allen Poe's gruesome tale, "The Pit and the Pendulum."

Introducing Prof. Frost.

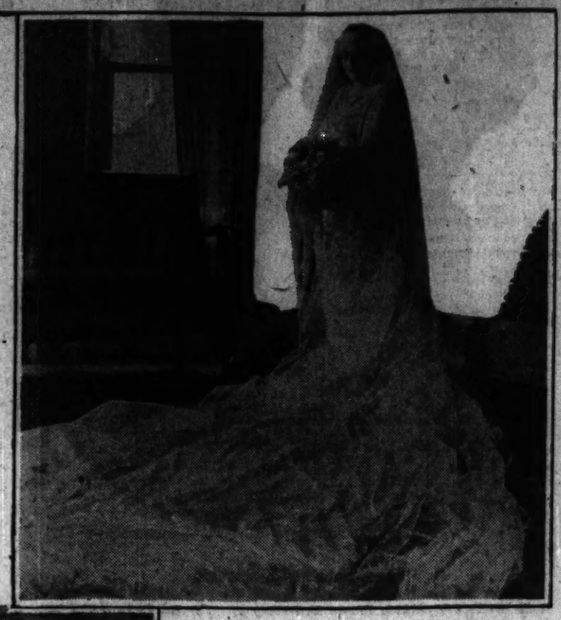
The whole place is one of wonder and fascination and its presiding genius, Prof. Edwin Brant Frost, is not the least of the attractions there. It is probably his long companionship with the starry firmament which has given him a certain spiritual sublimity hard to match. Fate has inflicted on him the hardest cross that an astronomer can suffer, almost total blindness. From his darkness he smiles out and says, "I have seen more than most people. I can afford to accept this that has come to me."

MRS. HERBERT LLOYD ZIPF.
[Koehne Photo.]

Miss Ruth Bogle Gilmore, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wood Gilmore of 2126 Lincoln Park West, became the bride of Herbert Lloyd Zipf, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Zipf of Winnetka, Wednesday evening, June 21, at St. Peter's Episcopal church. Mr. and Mrs. Zipf will make their home in Winnetka.

MRS. GERALD FRANCIS RAINEY.
[Baymor Studio Photo.]

Miss Elizabeth Fentress, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Fentress of 4400 Greenwood avenue, was married to Gerald Francis Rainey Wednesday morning, June 28, at St. Ambrose church, Mgr. William M. Foley officiating. Following the ceremony there was a breakfast at the Chicago Beach hotel.



MRS. GEORGE HANNEGAN BURNS.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

The wedding of Miss Isabelle Cook, daughter of John F. Cook of 512 Oakwood boulevard, and George Hannegan Burns, son of Mrs. Thomas Burns of 2236 East 70th street, took place Wednesday morning, June 28, at Holy Angels church, the Rev. William D. O'Brien reading the marriage service. Mr. and Mrs. Burns will be at home after Sept. 1 at 2236 East 70th street.

He can still work out astronomical problems and lectures on this science and, being blessed with a remarkably retentive memory, whatever is read to him is immediately stored up for use when needed. He talks to scholars and to the visiting public as no one else can, explaining the wonders as if he saw them. He has a large and highly trained corps of assistants who are on the watch every clear night of the year so that the night skies can't get away with anything without their knowledge.

Among the important achievements of the astronomical laboratory, which is an important part of the observatory work, was the successful measurement of the heat of the stars, first accomplished in 1898 by Prof. Ernest F. Nichols. Astral photography done here has led to many discoveries which have influenced the development of the study of astronomy all over the world. The observatory is part of the equipment and curriculum of the University of Chicago. It is one of the really interesting things to see in this part of the world.

Cast your bread upon the waters and it shall return unto you. Mr. Yerkes was seeking financial codperation in England for some of his enterprises in this country and was waiting for a hearing long denied to him, when some one remarked that he was the Yerkes who had given the observatory which bore his name. Immediately those who had until then left him to cool his heels in their ante-rooms, invited him in and gave him the desired opportunity for conversation, a privilege that his relationship to the Chicago street railway service had not been able to secure him. He was one who hitched, not his wagon, but his street car, to the stars.

The Noisy Aviator.

The brooding peace, which is so great an asset to Lake Geneva, is rudely broken these days by a hydro-airplane that outroars even the locusts in its continual flights up and down the valley which holds the lake. Its aviator delights to graze the tops of the trees. Some day he will catch one up in his propeller, whisk it out by the roots, and trail it along behind him. That is, he will if the tree doesn't catch him by the tail and finish his flights entirely. Meanwhile, the aviator and his airplane are not popular with those of the residents who sought Lake Geneva because of its prevailing soundless calm.

His is not the only flying machine in that community, however. William Wrigley Jr. has one hanging up in his boathouse. The Wrigley place is as well equipped as any in this part of the country with aids to an active summer. A neat little yacht lies out on the mirroring lake in front of the house. A speedy motor boat hugs the shore. Row boats chafe at their anchoring ropes. Automobiles and sidecar motorcycles are visible in the offing as the pedestrian makes his way along the foot path by the lake.

All the estates bordering on the lake are strung together by this pathway. It is one of the institutions of Lake Geneva. No one can, at least no one does, prevent the public from making its way by this route from one part of lake edge to another, though the other shore rights are protected. Newport's famous case, wherein a similar footway along the ocean border of the great places there was declared by the courts to belong to the public, has been taken as a precedent by the owners of Lake Geneva property.

Junkin's Home Closed.

One of the well known summer homes on the northern shore of the lake which is closed this year, and is likely to be so for some years to come, is that of Col. and Mrs. F. T. A. Junkin. The Junkins are sailing July 18 for England and expect to be away for several years. They will make a leisurely tour of Europe and return to America in the course of time by China and Japan.

Another of the large houses which is closed is that of the late A. C. Bartlett. This is one of the most beautiful in that region. Its most striking feature is a charming interior court, around which the house is built. This is a place of brilliant flowers with a central pool, whose clear, pale green waters shimmer in the sunshine.

Brick paths, marble terraces, and steps, vine covered trellises, an exquisite wrought iron gate, quaint garden seats, and curious inscriptions all combine to give the place an old world flavor unlike anything else hereabouts. It is, in fact, Bavaria, and, especially, Munich art translated into American landscape garden architecture by Frederic C. Bartlett, the well known artist and the only son of the builder of the house. The delightful pavilion, which encloses the court on its north side, was the summer home of the Frederic Bartletts during the life of the first Mrs. Bartlett, and had one of the most attractive interiors I ever saw. Later Mr. Bartlett built a studio for himself up in the woods behind his father's place, a retired shrine, where he sought and found that solitude and freedom from interruption so necessary to any real, creative work.

It is said that Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the sitting room table with her family gathered around her most of the time. There's many a writer would like to know how she did it. In the later years of his life Henry James retired to a small house in the southern part of England to get away from the world so that he could be undisturbed in his work. London, with its roar and the many claims on his time and attention, was no place in which to write. Painters often require equal seclusion and liberty.

After his second marriage Mr. Bartlett built still another and more remote studio, a charming little pavilion, also with a strong Munich flavor, a fifteen minutes' walk through the woods of his father-in-law, Hugh T. Birch's place, on Lake Como (otherwise known as Duck lake), five miles from Lake Geneva. This, too, is now closed, as the Bartletts and Mr. Birch are in Venice for the season.

O, O! We Americans!

Are there anywhere else such restless folk as we Americans? Continual change is the rule in every community. Nothing remains the same from one decade to the next. One generation plans and builds as if for perpetuity, or at least for the next generation. Hardly is its work finished and the time for enjoyment come, when its successor is on the wing and designing new houses, new gardens, new surroundings. We have not yet learned that there is no architect who can give the charm to a house that one or two generations of occupants gives; no gardener can impart the delicious quality to a garden that is the result of many years' tenancy by people with differing ideas of what makes for beauty, people long dead, yet still living in the trees and shrubs and blossoming plants. There is no place where the personalities of departed mortals linger so manifestly and potently as in gardens. It is this sense of personality which cannot be copied or imitated in any new garden.

Amateur Actors Have Good Time.

The actors and those occupied in presenting the peripatetic melodrama, "The Heir of Manville Grange," which is to be given, fates being propitious, next Wednesday afternoon at the Howard Shaw Lake Forest place, Ragdale, will be almost sorry when their task is over, they have had such fun in getting it up. It is more like constructing a "movie" than anythig else to prepare this piece for producing. As the settings for the different acts are scattered all over the Shaw place, rehearsals of the various scenes can take place simultaneously. On these occasions the place has the appearance of a cinema company in the agonies of creating a piece.

In case the heavens, which up to now have been as dry as Pussyfoot Johnston could ask, should change their habits and let down the long pent up waters, the piece will be given on Thursday at 5 o'clock instead of Wednesday.

Many young hopefuls will make their first stage appearance on that occasion. Among these will be Mrs. Chase's granddaughter, Mary Chase Boyden, whose mother and grandmother are both filling important rôles in the play. Young Jackie McCutcheon will be one of the youngsters who will appear in the barnyard scene. His famous father, John T. McC., depicts the tramp, who is so important a character in the drama. Others among the very young who make their debut that day are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Akers of Lake Forest and Miss Frances Shaw, youngest child of the Howard Shaws. Let us hope that the good ladies who are given to the rescue of the very young from the perils of the stage—a most excellent work—will not feel it their duty to step in on this occasion and remove the infants of Lake Forest's first families from their rôles in Mrs. Howard Shaw's delightful and humorous parody. And let us also hope that the Lake Forest hospital, Alice Home, will have the most up to date heating plant possible as a result of the attendance on "The Heir of Manville Grange."

Ravinia Opera Delightful.

Such delightful opera as they are giving at Ravinia, were it presented anywhere else in this or any other country, would draw crowds. The weather, too, has up to this writing been made to order. The presentation of Massenet's "Manon" last Wednesday, with Claire Dux playing the title rôle, and Leon Rothier that of the hero could not be excelled anywhere. It was perfect. The lovely setting, the exquisite voices, the tuneful piece, the fresh costumes, the incomparable orchestra, the night moths fluttering about, the moon shining in the surrounding garden and groves made a combination which should woo the residents for many miles around to assemble there for such a thoroughly artistic performance.

Those who do go are extremely enthusiastic, but not numerous enough to make certain the continuation of opera after this year. If the inhabitants of the north shore want their nights torn with the wild blare of jazz bands and the shouts of the joy riders who delight to congregate where merry-go-rounds and Ferris wheels are to be found, they are going to get just what they like. To us it seems like poor judgment.

Louis Eckstein, who is practically responsible for Ravinia opera, has been as much a benefactor in his way to the people living along the Northwestern railway as the Harold McCormicks were to Chicagoans during the years when grand opera was getting acclimatized in Chicago. He has ever since opera came to Ravinia footed the bill, a not inconsiderable one, too. Such delightful opera in such delightful surroundings you will find nowhere else in the world.

Is it a case of pearls before—tush, tush! Of course it isn't.

Hark! I hear rumors of a horse show in the not too distant future on the north shore. Polo and hunting are growing in favor in the district about Chicago. In the city parks the bridle paths are fuller each year of equestrians. Visiting Britishers look askance at the many unconventional riding habits which are to be seen. Just why we should be expected to follow their styles in this sport is not entirely decided. We have departed from their conventions in many directions. For instance, it is almost unknown for a woman to ride in a London park in riding knickerbockers and astride her horse. English women never do it. But they have not had the delightful experience of riding among our western ranches on our gay little broncbos. This has given a dash and informality to our women riders which they do not abandon in city riding.

I think they are wise. Don't you?

WEDDINGS

No wedding or engagement announcement will be published in The Tribune unless it bears the signature, address, and telephone number of a parent of either the bride or bridegroom. More About Music on the North Shore—By Edward Moore.

Ravinia's Rate, a Dozen Operas to a Fortnight

WITH tonight's "Rigoletto," the Ravinia management, conductors, and singers will take a six days' let up from the stimulating task of unfolding repertoire, and devote themselves, while not engaged in repetition of operas already heard since June 24, to the equally stimulating work of thinking up new things to do. Nobody can fairly accuse them to date of shirking: twelve operas, each with its distinctive and individual problems of music and of drama, is not a bad fortnight's chore, and takes on added bulk when it is recalled that the singers have had Mondays off for the good behavior of the orchestra and here, incidentally,

GRAZIELLA PARETO.
[Copyright: Underwood & Underwood.]

Coloratura music is well liked at Ravinia these summer evenings, chiefly because a newly arrived member of the company, Graziella Pareto, surrounds its brilliant episodes with grace and charm. She will be heard this week in "Rigoletto" and "Lucia di Lammermoor."

indulged in two repetitions, while Miss Sarova and Mr. Danise, being friendly persons, dropped in last Monday night to help out the orchestra. "Rigoletto" will make the thirteenth opera, and "Fedora" on Saturday, the fourteenth.

Meanwhile, the second-time-this-season fare will be what the first Ravinia fortnight has proved to be most delectable to the clientèle-at-large, with another hearing for "Boris Godounoff," the subject of some extended remarks in this place last Sunday. For those who regard no opera as completely absorbed in all its permutations and possible changes of aspect, there will be changes in two of the week's casts. Thus, Claire Dux will sing Mimi in Tuesday night's "La Bohème," thereby resuming the rôle in which, in the late autumn of last year, she made her American début here in Chicago. Among the sufficient reasons why Miss Dux will replace Miss Mario for the repetition is that Miss Mario will on Wednesday have two rôles to sing in the repetition of "Hoffmann." A second reason is that Miss Dux's contract calls for a Mimi at Ravinia. A third and all-sufficient reason is that Intendent Eckstein is no believer in exclusive rights to any one rôle.

This is a good place, perhaps, to insert the information that, if he were such a believer, the Ravinia clientèle would probably have missed the opportunity of making acquaintance with such good things as Alice Gentle's Carmen, Morgan Kingston's Canio, Orville Harrold's Rodolfo, Anna Roselle's Musetta, Edith Mason's Gilda, Mabel Garrison's Lakmé, and Claudio Muzio's Nedda—a list of worthwhile impersonations in the unrolling annals of our al fresco opera.

Having made this arbitrary détour, return is made to the main road of the discourse with the information that Mr. Kingston will replace Mr. Harrold in Tuesday's "La Bohème," and for at least one of the reasons already given in the not-yet-celebrated case of Dux-cum-Mario: that is, that Mr. Harrold also must sing in the next night's "Hoffmann". Then, in the second "Lucia," Thursday, Mr. Ballester will give his prime Iberian impressions of just how a titled Scotsman like Sir Henry Ashton would behave toward a rebellious niece, Miss Lucy Ashton, as Mr. Eckstein is of the opinion that we already know all about Mr. Danise's Italian attitude in the matter. All who were at "Lucia" a week ago liked Mr. Danise's so well that we carried home the impression that it was easily the best we had ever met; and, if Mr. Ballester be as good in Donizetti as he has so far been in Rossini, Verdi, and Mascagni, we shall probably carry away the new impression that he, in turn, is the best.

Words from Mr. Eckstein.

In thanking this department of THE TRIBUNE for calling attention to the innovation of not charging for seats at the Ravinia concerts, Mr. Eckstein asks for further aid in spreading the information that there is no essential consonance between the richness of the 1922 roster and the scale of prices. Now, this department is not interested in the finances of opera-giving; but, as Ravinia is "not for profit," and as the rise and fall of the price of seats is public news at any time, his words may be entitled to publication. They are:

"We are giving opera at Ravinia for less per seat than any other opera house in the world. This applies even to the subventioned theaters of France and Germany: in none of them may you get seats, even if we figure at the normal rate of exchange, for so low a sum as $1, or with the best seats only $2. This for all performances and without regard for the number of per-pers engaged in the cast."

We may conclude by explaining that "per-pers" is opera house argot for singers engaged by the performance rather than by the week.

This is the new week's complete list of concerts and operas:

3:15 today—"Favorites" concert, under Hasselmans.

8:15 today—"Rigoletto," with Danise, Pareto, Harrold, Gentle, Rothier, Falco, and Papi.

8:15 Monday—Concert, with Peralta (singing Isolde's "Love-Death"), Ballester, and Jacques Gordon as soloists, under Hasselmans.

8:15 Tuesday—"La Bohème," with Dux, Roselle, Kingston, Ballester, Didur, Malatesta, and Papi.

8:15 Wednesday—"The Tales of Hoffmann," with Harrold, Mario, Sargya, Falco, Rothier, Danise, Didur, and Hasselmans.

3:15 Thursday—Children's concert, under Jacques Gordon, with Mr. and Mrs. Oberndorfer.

8:15 Thursday—"Lucia," with Pareto, Chamlee, Ballester, Falco, D'Angelo, Paltrinieri, and Papi.

8:15 Friday—"Boris Godounoff," with Didur, Gentle, Harrold, Falco, Rothier, Roselle, and Papi.

3:15 Saturday—"Pop" concert, under Hasselmans.

8:15 Saturday—"Fédora," with Gentle, Kingston, Roselle, Danise, Falco, Rothier, and Papi.

Word from the Opera Downtown.

If, in the words of Patrick Henry, we may judge the future by the past, the Chicago Civic Opera company made a step in the right direction last week when it added Richard Hageman to the corps of conductors. He is known and liked here for his six seasons at Ravinia; he is known and liked in New York for his thirteen seasons at the Metropolitan. He is a coach and accompanist of high rank; a composer also—his "At the Well" is up in the list of best sellers.

Mr. Hageman was born in Leewarden, Holland, the son of Maurice Hageman, former director of the Amsterdam Conservatory of Music, and of Francesca de Majowski Hageman, Russian soprano and former court singer of Holland. His operatic career began at the age of 16, when he was appointed assistant conductor of the Royal Opera of Holland. Later he served for five years as first conductor of this institution, and still later he had a two years' association with Matilda Marchesi, the famous singing teacher, in Paris. For the past year he has been a resident of Chicago.

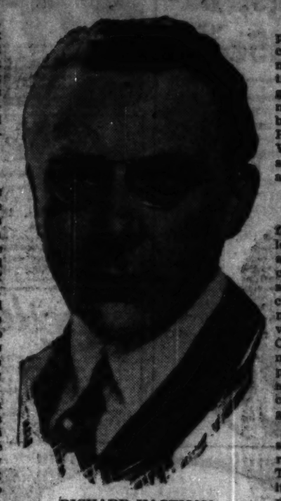
An Achievement Worth While.

Four members of the Civic Orchestra of Chicago have been promoted from their semi-amateur status there to full professional standing at desks of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. They are Domenico De Caprio, clarinet; Hugo Fox, bassoon; John Wessling, viola; and Carl Rink, second violin—he was concertmaster of the Civic orchestra. The word of their transfer adds that they make a total of twelve players who have gone into the Chicago Symphony orchestra after having received training under Frederick Stock and his assistants in the Civic orchestra. In addition, graduates of the Civic organization have been engaged by the symphony orchestras of Minneapolis, Philadelphia, Cleveland, and St. Louis. In this case the record tells its own story, and comment as to the value of the Civic orchestra is superfluous.



RICHARD HAGEMAN.
[Ira L. Hill Photo.]

A recent bulletin from the Chicago Opera names Richard Hageman as the newly appointed associate musical director and first conductor of French repertoire. To those who take their opera in the time of warm weather he will be an old and valued acquaintance, since he conducted at Ravinia for six successive summers. Five years as first conductor in the Royal Opera house of Amsterdam and thirteen seasons on the staff of the New York Metropolitan has given Mr. Hageman a wide acquaintance with the operas of all ages and all countries. He enjoys a country-wide reputation, in addition to his gifts as a conductor, as coach, accompanist, composer, and linguist.

Miss Partington and Miss Peralta.

A line or so in the formal schedule of Ravinia for the third week starts another memory—going back a full decade. Mr. Woods of the Chicago theater bearing his name, had lured Marguerita Sylva from the Chicago Opera, that he might star her in an operetta by Lehar, and had put her at the head of a notable cast. The Chicago newspapers logically figured that their readers would like to know how one of Campanini's divas made out in her Gotham première, and asked the correspondents for reports. The reports came—to say that Sylva did not appear, and that a handsome unknown named Phyllis Partington stepped into the chief rôle without notice to the public, and held the audience to the end. Miss Partington performed like service for Sylva when, later, the operetta, "Gypsy Love," was sung here.

The "association" here is that Miss Partington is to sing Wagner rôles in the Metropolitan Opera, and that her first public singing of that genus will be done in tomorrow night's Ravinia concert; for Miss Partington is become Frances Peralta, and is the dramatic soprano of the al-fresco opera "out north." Her medium will be the Liebestod finale of "Tristan and Isolde." She is come well along since, in 1917-18, she Leonora'd and Santuzza'd and Elvira'd for Mr. Campinni, and has acquired or awakened a temperament which fits her Italianate nom-de-theater. Young Señor Ballester, in this concert, will get his first chance to sing the "Pagliacci" prologue.

With the Melody Makers.

Glenn Dillard Gunn, pianist, pedagogue, and former music critic of various Chicago papers, including this one, sends word of having organized a new school of music to which he has given his name. The Glenn Dillard Gunn School of Music will open its doors at 1364 Lake Shore drive Sept. 11. Among the faculty associates are found the names of Guy Woodard, Prudence Neff, Florence Scholl, Albert Goldberg, Ward Wright, Eva Jack, Alma Reed, and Mme. Swanstrom Young.

Dr. Fery Lulek, baritone, will appear in recital of the fifth summer recital at the Ziegfeld theater Tuesday morning. He will sing "Vision Fugitive," from Massenet's "Herodiade," groups of songs by Schubert, Schumann, and Brahms, and another group by selected American composers. Miron Poliakin, violinist, will appear on Wednesday morning with the Mendelssohn Concerto, the Bach Chaconne, and some shorter pieces.

* *

An item published in this column a few weeks ago referred to Henry Hadley's opera, "The Garden of Allah," as a possibility for the Metropolitan the coming season. Charles Henry Meltzer, who wrote the libretto, sends a correction to the effect that Hadley has not composed the score, though there were prospective negotiations with Cleofonte Campanini with his music in mind. Isadore de Lara was later approached by both Herbert M. Johnson and Mary Garden in their incumbencies with the Chicago Opera, but negotiations failed here as well.

"So," says Mr. Meltzer, "what I, speaking impersonally and critically, regard as a perfectly good libretto—Tito Ricordi and Polacco had approved it, by the bye—is still awaiting a composer."

Mr. Meltzer adds that Albert Wolff, composer of "The Blue Bird," and for some seasons conductor at the Metropolitan, now general musical director of the Paris Opera Comique, is now putting music to another libretto of his. It will combine drama, dancing, symphony, and choral singing, and is on an oriental theme. Also, Carl Ruggles, really Charles Ruggles, a composer beginning to attract attention in New York, is finishing the setting of Gerhard Hauptmann's play, "The Sunken Bell," to the Meltzer translation.

Cubs' park on Wednesday night will turn from the activities of baseball to those of music, the first of a series to continue on successive Wednesday nights until Aug. 16. An orchestra of 100 will play, under the direction of Eric De Lamarter. Cyrena Van Gordon, mezzo-soprano of the Chicago Opera, will be the soloist at the opening concert. The series is under the auspices of Ramah lodge of the B'nai B'rith, and the proceeds will be turned over for the benefit of the orphans in the famine district of eastern Europe.

Emanating from officials of the city itself, it has been proposed that the Metropolitan Opera company sell its present headquarters at 39th street and Broadway and invest the proceeds—some $4,500,000—in New York's proposed $35,000,000 municipal music and art center at 59th street and 7th avenue, making that location its future headquarters. Close attention fails to notice any favorable response to the proposition from Metropolitan officials.

She is now Dr. Schumann-Heink. The famous contralto was made a doctor of music by the University of Southern California June 15, "in recognition of her unselfish work for the good of the public and the enjoyment of music loving people in the innumerable free concerts she has given both during and since the war."

The Squelch Courteous.

It was June and the moonlight was soft and alluring. They had been sitting in its mellow glow for an hour or so.

He turned to her and said with a great deal of feeling, "Do you think you could ever love a fellow like me?"

"O," she replied, "if he wasn't too much like you." V. G.

Wanted to Know.

One day Robert rushed into the kitchen and asked his mother what kind of pie she was making.

"Lemon meringue pie," she answered. The little fellow disappeared, but presently returned.

"Mother," he said, "what did you say is the pie's middle name?"

C. M. G.

Not to His Taste.

A washwoman applied to a man for work and he gave her a note to the manager of a certain club.

It read as follows: "Dear Mr. X.: This woman wants washing."

Shortly afterwards the answer came back: "Dear Sir: I dare say she does; but I don't fancy the job."

E. W. R.

Not the Slightest Objection.

An innkeeper was disturbed in his rest one night by some one knocking at his door.

"Who's there?" he asked.

"A friend," was the answer.

"What do you want?"

"I want to stay here all night."

"All right, stay there, by all means," was the reply. C. T.

Not So Far Wrong.

A little London boy was visiting Scotland for the first time. One afternoon he suddenly left the hotel window in great excitement as a highlander came down the road playing the bagpipes.

"Mother, mother," cried the little boy, "come quick. There's a man outside with a dead pig that sings."

PITY THE POOR POET

By Guy Lee.

The newspaper poet
Must go it and go it,
Helbent for election each day;
He must grind out the verses
In spite of his curses,
Forever and ever and aye.

His lilt and his ditty
Are frequently witty,
And often they're very much not;
But they've got to be written,
If rotten—no quittin'—
For you see they're a part of the plot.

So, friends, do not pan us,
For the boss then might can us,
And our jingles bring vittles our way;
And you don't have to read us,
Although you do feed us
Forever and ever and aye!

Because a Corset Is Only as Good As the Fitting Service That Goes With It

Third Floor—Dearborn Street

Because a corset is only as good as the fitting service of the store you purchase it at, we are selling more of the Nemo self-reducing corsets at $4 than any other two stores in America—for here the fitting service is not alone courteous and efficient, but scientific and hygienic as well, which means that we can fit your figure to bring out your figure's fashionable lines and still you'll be comfortable as ever before. For this fitting service no extra charge is made.

Once you have noted carefully how thoroughly well made this special Corset is—how it embodies the famous Nemo Self-Reducing features, you'll understand why the sales have been so tremendous and why a widening circle of women are demanding it day after day.

The scientific reducing and figure reshaping features of the Nemo corset have thousands of friends among the women of America—these features are found in this splendid model at $4. It is a model that is ideal for the figure that has the thickened diaphragm or bulging thighs—will not push up the bust nor allow flesh to accumulate around the shoulder blades—the model that so many women need. Here we help you choose the model you need and see to it that it fits your figure absolutely correctly. Our corsetieres are famous for their intimate knowledge of all Nemo models and features. Sizes 24 to 36,

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Summer Ministerial and Bible School Opens in Indiana

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Winona ministerial and Bible summer school will begin tomorrow at Winona Lake, Ind., continuing to Aug. 5. The Rev. George W. Taft, D. D., president of the Northern Baptist Theological school, Chicago, will be the acting head of the faculty. The Rev. J. J. Ross, D. D., pastor of the Second Baptist church, Lincoln street and Jackson boulevard, and the Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon, D. D., pastor of St. James Methodist Episcopal church, Ellis avenue and 46th street, will be among the prominent Chicago pastors who will speak. The general subjects which will be presented will be the Bible, missions, religious education, denominational programs, the devotional life, rural work, and pastoral problems. At a similar conference last year there were eighty ministers and more than 1,300 registered Christian workers present.

On the same grounds, at the Bethany Girls' camp, the seventh annual older girls' conference will be held beginning tomorrow and continuing through next Sunday. William A. Peterson of Chicago is president of the board of directors and Mrs. Peterson is secretary and a member of the faculty. Mrs. Carrie Stewart Besserer, the founder of the Bethany Girls' organization, is the first named member of the executive committee and of the faculty.

Other religious gatherings at Winona Lake for the rest of the season are: The Christian Citizenship institute, Aug. 6 to 17; the Interdenominational Association of Women Preachers, Aug. 15 and 16; the international and interdenominational Bible conference, Aug. 18 to 27; the Interdenominational Evangelistic association, Aug. 22 to 24, and the international convention of the Disciples of Christ, Aug. 28 to Sept. 4. The Billy Sunday camp meeting, which began at Winona last Wednesday, will close this evening.

The speakers today at the Des Plaines camp meeting will be Bishop Thomas Nicholson at 10:30 a. m.; Bishop W. O. Shepard, Portland, Ore., formerly of Chicago, at 2:30 p. m., and Prof. Edmund D. Soper, Northwestern university, at 8 p. m. There will be special meetings for children and for young people. A meeting for speaking and praise, called a love feast, will precede the morning preaching service. The camp meeting will continue every day and evening this week, closing next Sunday night.

The Rev. P. H. Matimore, D. D., has been appointed by Archbishop G. W. Mundelein associate superintendent of schools of the archdiocese. He will reside at Holy Cross church.

THE REV. GEORGE C. CODE.

The Rev. George Cornelius Code, pastor of St. Veronica's Catholic church, Whipple and School streets, will celebrate today and tomorrow the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

Father Code will celebrate high mass at 11 o'clock and will be assisted by the Rev. Thomas F. Farrell as deacon and the Rev. Fred Cannell as subdeacon. The Rev. Charles McClellan will be master of ceremonies. The sermon will be preached by a brother of the jubilarian, the Rev. John J. Code, pastor of St. Edmund's church, Oak Park, who likewise preached the sermon at the first mass of the jubilarian twenty-five years ago.

Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock there will be a public reception at the church school auditorium. Among the speakers will be the Rev. John Webster Melody, D.D., P. J. Rowland, B. O. Mulligan, and John D. Shea. Mr. Shea will present a purse. The children will sing.

Father Code was born in Boston. He came to Chicago when two years of age. He graduated valedictorian from St. Ignatius college, studied theology at St. Mary's Baltimore, and was ordained in Chicago at the Holy Name cathedral. During his eight years at St. Veronica's the parish debt has been paid and many improvements made.

The Rt. Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church, will preach today at 11 o'clock at the Church of Our Savior, 530 Fullerton parkway. Bishop Tuttle has appointed the Rev. Frederick L. Graitot, rector of the Church of Our Savior, as his chaplain during the general convention of the Episcopal church, which meets in Portland, Ore., beginning September 6. When Bishop Tuttle passed through Chicago fifty-five years ago as a missionary bishop he wrote his wife that Chicago "was a busy little city by the lake." He has been an active leader in the religious development of the west.

The corner stone of the new $75,000 building of the Mayfair Methodist Episcopal church, the Rev. W. J. Hyde, D.D., pastor, will be laid today at 2:30 p. m. The church is located at North Kilpatrick and West Wilson avenues. Bishop Thomas Nicholson will make the address ceremony.

The daily vacation Bible schools which are conducted this season as a department of the Chicago Church federation are meeting with greater success than ever. A total of 225 schools are reported. Churches hitherto regarded as outside the class of those needing special summer work because their membership is supposed to be out of the city on vacations have found the schools as helpful as churches and social centers in the more congested and less highly favored neighborhoods. Another training school for teachers and workers will be held tomorrow at the Northwestern university building, Lake and Dearborn streets. Inquiries concerning the schools may be addressed to the headquarters of the Chicago Church federation, 19 South La Salle street.

The Rev. R. L. Sawyier, pastor of the Avondale Presbyterian church, has been elected to have charge of young people's work in the Chicago presbytery. He is one of the counsellors of the daily vacation Bible schools of the Presbyterian church.

Through researches conducted by the Rev. W. E. Barton, D. D., pastor of the First Congregational church, Oak Park, the place of burial of the Rev. Jesse Head, who married the father and mother of Abraham Lincoln, has been located in a cemetery at Harrodsburg, Ky. Dr. Barton suggests that all who are interested in erecting a simple monument at the grave perpetuating the name of the minister and the marriage of Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks should send $1 to Miss Mary A. Stephenson, Harrodsburg, who will acknowledge the receipt.

The Rev. A. Glade has the distinction of having been pastor of one church since the beginning of his ministry twenty-five years ago and of never having missed a service because of ill health. His silver jubilee anniversary will be celebrated today by the Nazareth Evangelical church, Talman avenue and Altgeld street, of which he is pastor. He will be presented with an automobile in appreciation of his services. Last evening a dinner with 500 guests was served at the church. He was ordained at Hanover, Ind., July 11, 1897. He spent four years at Elmhurst, Ill., Theological college, four years at Eden Theological seminary, St. Louis, from which he graduated, and one year at McCormick Theological seminary, Chicago.

The Rev. Floyd I. Beckwith, pastor of the First Baptist church, Boise City, Idaho, will preach today at 11 o'clock at the North Shore Baptist church, Leland and Racine avenues. Dr. Beckwith was formerly pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist church, 2300 West Monroe street, and served overseas in the world war.

Archbishop G. W. Mundelein, the Rt. Rev. E. F. Hoban, assistant bishop of Chicago, and it, is hoped, the Rt. Rev. P. F. Rhode, bishop of Green Bay, Wis., formerly of Chicago, will be present at the investiture of the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Thomas P. Bona as domestic prelate, which takes place today at 11 o'clock at the church, St. Mary of Perpetual Help, West 32d street, near Morgan street.

Mgr. Bona is widely known in Chicago because of his administrative position in the Holy Name society and as editor of the Sunday Visitor as well as for his success in parish work. He was at one time assistant to Bishop Rhode at South Chicago.

The Chicago local of the Walther league of the Evangelical Lutheran church, Elmer F. Jacobs, president, will meet today at 3 o'clock in St. Paul's church, Menard and Iowa streets. The league has under its care the maintenance of hospices as one of its important features and plans will be discussed to put a paid secretary in the field because of the extension of the work. Final arrangements will also be made for the international convention of the league, which will be held in Omaha, Neb., beginning next Sunday and continuing to July 20. The Walther league is an international young people's organization of the Evangelical Lutheran synodical conference and has a membership of 40,000. Several hundred are expected to attend the Omaha convention from Chicago.

Miss Winifred Chappell, one of the best known members of the faculty of the Chicago training school for city, home and foreign missions, 4949 Indiana avenue, will go to New York as research secretary of the Methodist federation for social service and will be editor of the social service bulletin.

The Bahai assembly will hold a memorial service today at 3:30 at the temple, which is in process of construction at Sheridan road and Linden avenue, Wilmette. Albert Vail and Dr. Zia M. Bagdadi will speak. There will be no meeting today at the Masonic temple where the assembly usually meets.

IS YOUR BLOOD HUNGRY FOR IRON?

Modern Methods of Cooking and Living Have Made An Alarming Increase in Iron Deficiency in Blood of American Men and Women

NUXATED IRON Helps Make Red Blood

The Kind That Puts Roses Into the Cheeks of Women and Force Strength and Courage Into Veins of Men.

"Is your blood starving for want of iron? Iron is red blood food. If you were to go without eating until you became weak, thin and emaciated, you could do no more serious harm to yourself than when you let your blood literally go hungry for want of iron—iron that gives it strength and power to change food into living tissue," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital.

"Modern methods of cooking and the rapid pace at which people of this country live has made such an alarming increase in iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women that I have often marveled at the large number of people who lack iron in the blood—and who never suspect the cause of their weak, nervous, run-down state. But in my opinion, you can't make strong, sturdy men and women by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron—Nuxated Iron—before they are to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insist in dosing themselves with metallic iron simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron."

Who Should Take Nuxated iron

The Elderly Inactive Man

The Tired Nervous Overworked Housewife

The Run-down Business Woman

The Exhausted Business Man

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have increased their strength and endurance in two weeks' time while taking iron in the proper form.

GEOLOGY

OUR ICE AGE WAS JUST YESTERDAY.

NORTH of Lake Superior, and particularly in the region of Cobalt, Ont., are stones that revolutionized men's ideas about the past. The region is one that has been repeatedly overridden by ice. Scratched rocks, flattened on one or more faces, piles of unrelated stones, jumbled clay, and grooved bedrocks are the usual sight in the Great Lakes region, mented into stone.

Ice leaves its mark. The tracks of pleistocene ice sheets, such as occur in Greenland to this day, are here everywhere legible. But near Cobalt the till is made of stone. The bedrock itself is glacial. Most of the known strata of the world would have to be piled on these Huronian tillites if their true place in time were to be shown. The pleistocene ice sheet melted about 10,000 years ago. Ten thousand years seems a long time to us, because our lives are short.

The true time of the Huronian bedrock stones is no less than 500,000,000 years ago. Geologists, even the old school who believed that the earth was molten not so many ages past, were here convinced. The present climatic conditions of the earth are far older than any one formerly supposed the whole globe to be. The earth's solid crust is forty-five miles thick. Since there has been no appreciable change in climate in this thin shell in half a billion years, how far off must the earth's primitive condition of fire be?

There were still greater surprises in store on this subject, the old school found. Evidences from Scotland, Norway, South Africa, China, India, Australia, and Tasmania showed clearly that glacial conditions existed in Huronian times not only over much of Canada, but in these latter places, as well, right over the equator. Travelers returning from the tillite belts of the far east said that they took the bowlders of yesterday. Glacial rubbish is piled there exactly like tillites in our familiar later day conditions, except that now it is all sorted and cemented into stone.

World-Wide Glaciation in Huronian Times.

Ice fields within the torrid zone amaze us. There is yet one more revelation. The ice that melted in China and the Punjab appears to have come from Antarctica. The great southern continent once was the recipient of a heavy current on its Pacific side. Glaciers formed over it, and pushed out over South Africa, Australia, the East Indies, and most of the Indian ocean, and finally melted on the mainland of Asia itself. Besides these the northern ice sheets were puny indeed.

The earth was cold in Huronian times, colder, in fact, than it now is. But cold weather never lasts long in geology. Carbon deposits are found beneath the tillites and again above them. Limestone beds occur nearby showing that the ice advanced into a warm climate and when it left, genial conditions returned.

POPULAR SCIENCE by S. F. Maxwell

INSECTS

YOU DON'T EAT ME.

A FLY sat high on the outermost twig of a clover plant, his keen eyes seeing everywhere. He was no ordinary sugar lapping housefly, this dipteron, but a bristly robber fly. He was built on the last of a mosquito, save that all his proportions, including his thirst for slaughter, were those of a horsefly. He cocked his head this way and that, he brushed the minutest grains of pollen from the dry spines on his legs, he waved his snakelike abdomen in anticipation of his next meal. Game was not hard to catch. Bees, wasps, bees, grasshoppers, all were acceptable to him. But bees were his most enjoyed dish. Ten feet away a honey bee lit on a black-eyed susan. She was gathering pollen and honey for her hive. A bee is an inoffensive creature. She does not seek other animals to hurt them.

The robber fly saw the bee. He gurgled with his horny beak. His wings beat a dry hum on the air. He bore down on the bee. He rushed at her, all his strong legs spread wide. His eyes glared; he meant to suck her vitals.

The bee saw the robber rush upon her. Escape from him, laden as she was with pollen, was hopeless. As well might a dove attempt to outfly a hawk. She rolled on her back, and raising legs, antennae and abdomen, she awaited his attack.

They rolled together and death was the referee.

The robber bumbled in chagrin not to have taken his quarry by surprise. His method was to swoop, to strike down, to kill before his victim sensed his presence. Now he was taken aback. He grappled an instant with the bee, then broke away and flew to the other side of the flower to size the situation up.

The bee kept on her back. In this one position she had a fighting chance. Like lightning the fly sprang again and grappled savagely with her. She saw his beak, like a poisonous stiletto, reaching for her throat. Now his hairy legs gripped her, the buzzing rattle of his two wings drowned out the high keyed shrill of the four of hers. She pushed him off with all her strength. Together they wrestled, rolling over and over for many seconds amid petals. The fly broke once more and retired to rest and think.

The bee's strength was failing, that he knew. Sometimes these creatures did show fight, he remembered, but he had always killed them. The bee was thinking, too. She could not hold the fly off for long when he came back. She would clutch him to her. Her hug would be his doom.

The fly flew warily around once more and a third time lunged upon the bee. Once more they gripped and rolled. Now with her two fore-pairs of legs she pushed and held his murderous beak away. With her hind legs she pulled, closer, closer, closer; his body was near her now, his hairs were touching her, she felt him against her body. She curled her abdomen. Her sting shot out, she stung the robber through a joint in his mail. His grip relaxed, she strained her venom sphincters, she squeezed her fluid in his body. He was dead. Limply he fell over on the flower, and a gust of wind blew him off.

Such an escape! Not many bees could have so successfully resisted the terrible bee robber. She smoothed her fur and licked herself all over. She did not seek quarrels, but, O hexapods, how she could fight when she was forced!

MICROSCOPY

MILDEW RUINS CLOTH.

THE family went away for a few days and left father to see to the house. He faithfully promised to put the clothes to soak, but he forgot. The result was that some of them mildewed. Mother pointed out the ugly black stains on what had once been snowy white sheets and dresses, and assured him that he was just that much out of pocket, because mildew marks never, never come out.

Mildew on cloth.

Some time after this mother was recounting the misdeed to a neighbor.

"Why, you are fortunate," the other exclaimed. "My husband left a whole load of soapy clothes setting in the washer for a week, and when I took them out everything was simply falling apart."

Mildews are a low form of plant, closely related to molds. They propagate by spores. They possess great vitality once they get a foothold, so that nothing short of soap and boiling will kill them. Mildews prefer warm, damp, dark places to grow. Moist cloth tightly wadded up furnishes an excellent breeding ground for these pests.

BOTANY

Tendrils open—Tendrils closed.

TENDRILS SPREAD LIKE HANDS:

A YOUNG wild cucumber vine lies sprawled upon the ground. Wild cucumbers are arden climbers. This baby's tendrils are reaching everywhere. Some are coiling impotently about grass blades, others are opened expectantly and ready to grasp at passing objects. Stroke one! In less than ten seconds it curls; its tip bends over in the direction of the stroked place. It curves visibly. The tendril bends into a loop, but grasping nothing, it eventually straightens out.

Hook the coiled tendril to a horizontal string. In an hour the tip has coiled tightly. Come back tomorrow morning and see what the plant will have done. The whole tendril will have coiled itself into a helical spring. The plant's instinct teaches it that by coiling its tendril it can raise itself up. Moreover, the spring will take up pulls and stresses much better than a linear growth could do.

Electricians coil wires to make them elastic. Wild cucumbers coiled their tendrils for the same purpose thousands of years before electricity was thought of.

The mechanics of a coiled tendril is interesting. The cells in the cucumber's tendril are arranged in long strands, each making contact with its neighbors above and below. When tissue is touched the cells that have been disturbed contract. The ability to grow smaller under stimulation is a unique property of protoplasm. The contracting cells disturb their neighbors up and down the columns. The tendril bends, loops, and does not cease coiling until all the cells in the disturbed strands have rearranged themselves.

ZOOLOGY

PIGMENT GUARDS FROM LIGHT.

THE rays in sunlight which cause sunburn are not the ones that feel warm to you, nor those which your eyes see. Damage to human skin is caused by the short ultra-violet rays which lie on the invisible part of the spectrum beyond the color violet. Ultra-violet light in concentrated doses is a virulent poison for all living creatures.

Pigment colors are not confined to the human race by any means. Every creature whose life takes it into bright sunshine wears them. Mammals usually have their pigment in their hair. Notice a muskrat, a squirrel, or an ox. The back of each is invariably darker than the belly.

Even the insects that fly by day are protected. Compare a transparent bodied live-all-night-and-die-at-sun-up mayfly with its near relative, the dragon fly. Dragon flies are lovers of the sunshine, and all of them have deep brunette chitinous skins.

Human beings have their pigment located in an inner layer of the epidermis. Some of us possess an even layer of pigment tissue, and so tan in summer. Those who have the youngest Aryan blood do not tan evenly. They freckle. The later Aryans have spent so many ages in cold countries that their pigment tissues are now hopelessly inadequate. When such an Aryan goes to a hot country nature does the next best thing for him. His skin burns red, for red will stop a certain amount of ultra-violet light.

Pigment layer in human skin.

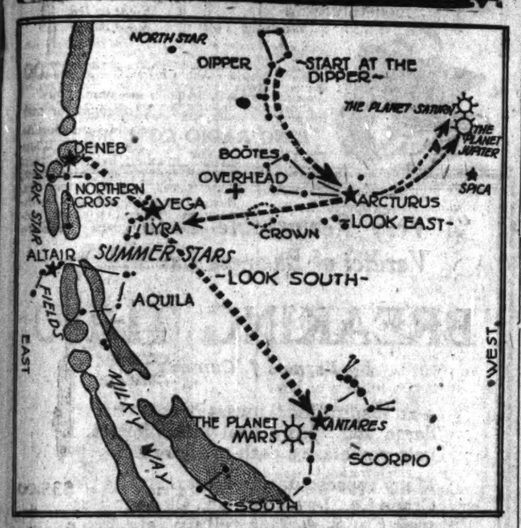
ASTRONOMY



Look into the high heavens.

LEARN THE STARS TONIGHT.

NOW is the time to learn the summer stars. Let us start from the dipper, the best known constellation of all. Run your eye outward along the handle of the dipper and across the sky to a gleaming red first magnitude star. This is Arcturus. Arcturus was once believed to be the brightest star in the northern sky. Exact measurements with the celestial photometer reveal that he is only 96 per cent as bright as Vega, but he seems brighter because our eyes see reds and yellows much better than they do blues and purples.

Vega is a sparkling, blue-white star. Its path across the sky tonight carries it almost overhead. Twelve thousand years ago Vega was the north star; 12,000 years from now it will return to the same position.

Vega is the brightest star in the constellation of Lyra. Lyra lies to the west of the milky way. Another somewhat lesser white star lies in the midst of this starry belt. It is Deneb, the marker of the head of the northern cross. Farther south, and also in the galaxy, is the third member of the summer trio, Altair. Altair has a guard star on either side. He is the rival light in the constellation of Aquila, the Eagle.

There are many dark star fields in the neighborhood of Altair. Stars run into these gigantic cosmic death traps from time to time. The flash of fire as they are destroyed comes to our eyes as novæ, or new stars. Should any amateur wish to search for novas, and earn the honor of attaching his name to one, he can observe in no better area than up and down the milky way from Deneb to Altair.

Scorpio, the evil sign of the astrologers of old, shines tonight in the southern sky. You have a blazing light to guide you. Mars, the brilliant red planet, is in Scorpio, just west of Scorpio's own first magnitude star, Antares. Mars shines many times brighter than Antares, but do not be misled by brightness into notions of relative size. Mars is only a planet, and a small one at that. He is just one of a number circling the sun. Antares is a tremendous sun. Astronomers computing his size are amazed by his magnitude. Our sun is a globe 886,000 miles in diameter. Antares has at least the mass of 3,000 suns. Beside him our sun would seem as dim and paltry as a candle beside a red hot furnace.

Four planets are in full view now; Venus, the lowest in the western sky, shines a brilliant white; Jupiter is in the constellation of Virgo, not far from the white first magnitude star Spica. You cannot miss seeing him. If you have a telescope, look for his moons. Their revolutions will interest you. A little to the west of Jupiter is Saturn. Saturn is surrounded by a ring of moons. A small glass will show him, too.

American Schools Help Persia to Its Feet

By John Clayton.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TEHERAN, Persia.—[Special Correspondence.]—While the United States has shared only once officially in the development of Persia—the ill fated Shuster effort—American influence has been strong in the country for the last twenty years.

One cannot say too much of the work being done by American missionaries throughout the country, especially from the medical and educational standpoints. In most of the large towns American missionary doctors are introducing western methods for the cure and prevention of disease, and in several towns mission schools are offering primary and high school education for Persian boys.

This fall the new American college will open in Teheran. The first class probably will include most of the graduates of the American high school this June, and from this year on the college enrollment would grow rapidly. It is hoped the school will develop into another like that at Beirut, which has done much for the educational advancement of the east.

A Persian Graduation.

During my stay in Teheran a class of twelve boys were graduated from the American high school, and commencement exercises were held in the school hall. As most of the teachers are graduates of small American denominational colleges the scene was much like that at any of our minor colleges in June, but in an oriental setting.

There was a hall filled with admiring parents, pompous officials, politicians who wish to stand well with the Americans, and well wishing friends of school and students. On the platform a row of bright looking youngsters, in black Prince Alberts—the garb of the Persian on all state occasions—black kaftans on their heads, gray ties, and white flowers in the buttonholes.

There was no address or sermon, but every student read an essay—mostly in Persian, but one or two in English. The subjects covered a wide range, mostly economical, and were filled with expressions of high ideals, of political and business honesty—a thing sadly lacking in Persia—and faith in the future of the country.

Not a strong showing in a town of 250,000, but at least a beginning. Thirty years ago the university at Beirut was at a similar stage of development, with a little high school class graduating and preparing to make up the first freshman class of the college. Now Beirut holds place as the finest educational institution in the east.

Native Schools Unique.

The contrast with the native schools is a happy one. There the boys sit cross legged all day long, chanting the Koran, their only textbook, while a mullah, armed with a long stick with which to wake sleepy boys, corrects them in their reading. In the one school the Koran and religious law. In the other modern languages, mathematics, history, science, and other western subjects. The graduates of the one become the black turbanned, rather dirty "learned men," or if they reach a high standard, white turbanned mullahs. The graduates of the other become the successful business and technical men—or perhaps I should say will become such, for they have not advanced far as yet—who may form the material for the regeneration of Persia.

Instructors Are Americans.

The instructors are live, wide awake young Americans who have come to Persia since the war and are beginning their long careers of service under peculiarly inspiring conditions, for it is always happy, though sometimes discouraging, to begin at the beginning and watch a great work develop.

American advisers may be able to reform the finances of Persia, but the mission schools are doing more than political advisers ever can. They are laying the foundations for the regeneration of the nation's ideals. And that, today, is the crying need of Persia.

"Any duty on that?"

"One dollar."

"One dollar? Why it only comes half way to my feet."

"All right, half a dollar."

"What lovely stockings."

"What's the duty?"

"Madam, this isn't duty, this is pleasure. I beg your pardon. I arrest you for smuggling jewelry."

"Jewelry? I have no jewelry."

Best Sellers of the Ages

County Paris, you will remember, says to his page as they approach the tomb of the Capulets:

. . . . . whistle them to me.
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.

Shakespeare was not stage manager for nothing.

Gallop, too, the tale did, into the heart of a world that because it has to be routine and matter-of-fact loves romance more than it loves aught else. It galloped from English into German, French, Italian, Spanish, and other European languages, and then into Japanese, and Anthony Hope, with the turn for phrases that combine whimsicality and prettiness which distinguishes him in print and out, once said to me, "It's amusing to see one's work translated into Japanese—it looks like a lot of pictures of little flowers."

The full title of the little masterpiece that traveled so far and that put breath back into cape-and-sword romance is "The Prisoner of Zenda: Being the History of Three Months in the Life of an English Gentleman," and it was written in the lean years of a young English gentleman who, while waiting for a law practice that was leisurely in coming, was practicing fiction under the name of Anthony Hope. That was in the early nineties and he was approaching thirty. Today he is Sir Anthony Hope Hawkins and approaching sixty. The law practice never kept its appointment with him. Or perhaps he broke it. "Zenda" made that possible, for it was and long remained—and long may it continue to be!—a best seller. For excitement plus charm, for pensive glamour, and for exquisite delicacy of sentiment the book is a masterpiece in little. The word Zenda renewed and defined the geography of romance. The story was the pacemaker, if not forerunner, of a romantic revival that not only enlivened the nineties but, through a natural reaction, was followed by the realistic movement now in its heyday. One of Lady Burlesdon's crisp sarcasms in "Zenda"—"Good families are generally worse than any others"—got into some of the authoritative quotation books, and so into the small change of our language. The portrait of Col. Sapt, emblem of a loyalty that asks no question save how best it may serve, was accounted by specialists in those matters worthy to hang alongside the old Dumas' study of M. de Tréville, captain of the king's musketeers. The pictures Mr. Dana Gibson drew made Mr. Hope's Rudolf Rassendyll and Princess Flavia better known than most of the veritable sovereigns of Europe were or are, and the mellifluous Mr. Sothern, intoning in the play made from the book—

Should a man not come back to the loveliest lady in all the wide world? A thousand Michaels should not keep me from you!

—was a voice that softly persuaded more hearts than Flavia's nigh five and twenty years agone.

And finally, in the grim days of occupation there was scarce a palace from Brussels to Bucharest wherein the invader sat that you would not find in the domestic library of vanished royalty a copy of "Zenda" bearing evidence of numerous readings. The vanished ones were right to like it. It made their kind interesting to themselves—and that was a feat.

"Zenda" came into the world with good company. In fact, '94 was an annus mirabilis in English fiction, for it brought not alone "Zenda" but also "Trilby" and "Salome" and the first "Jungle Book" and "Arms and the Man" and "Tales of Mean Streets" and "The Green Carnation" and "Round the Red Lamp" and Hope's own "Dolly Dialogues." They had best sellers that lasted more than three weeks in those days.

"Zenda" was worthy of its company. Some readers of these little sketches said last week that they were surprised to see it announced for inclusion in this series. Read it with a craftsman's eyes if you doubt its claim. Mark the wealth of incident, the rapidity of movement, the sapient reflections slipping in amid so much exhilarating clamor, and the pure and lofty sentiment. Note especially the lightness of touch in the opening chapters and contrast it with the mounting rush and stroke and counterstroke of the body of the book, and then compare all that with the stateliness of the ceremonial which fills so much of the background of the rich and spacious picture. Consider further the plaintive diminuendo of the close—the terse, crisp one-syllabled English words that still make haunting poetry:

Shall I see her face again—the pale face and the glorious hair? Of that I know nothing; Fate has no hint, my heart no presentiment. I do not know. In this world, perhaps—nay, it is likely—never. And can it be that somewhere, in a manner whereof our flesh-bound minds have no apprehension, she and I will be together again, with nothing to come between us, nothing to forbid our love? That I know not, nor wiser heads than mine. But if it be never—if I can never hold sweet converse again with her, or look upon her face, or know from her her love, why, then, this side the grave, I will live as becomes the man whom she loves; and for the other side I must pray a dreamless sleep.

Among the words of more than one syllable in that I count but four of Latin stem. To work beautifully with means so simple is the token of masterpiece.

The technique of the plotting of the tale, the mechanism of it, is amazing. Incident grows out of incident. What I mean to emphasize is that never once is some paltry deus ex machina trundled on to make or to save a situation. Granted the initial expedient of the marvelous resemblance of King Rudolf the Fifth of Ruritania to his remote English cousin, Rudolf Rassendyll—which is a not incredible case of "throw-back"—and the author makes no unfair demand upon belief, but shrewdly allows his hero to inform you that strange and curious matters are in prospect—

It is perhaps as strange a thing as has ever been in the history of a country that the king's brother and the king's personator, in a time of profound outward peace, near a placid, undisturbed country town, under semblance of amity, should wage a desperate war for the person and life of the king.

And again:

"There seem to me," I observed, "to be two ways by which the king can come out of Zenda alive. One is by treachery in the duke's followers."

"You can leave that out," said Sapt.

"I hope not," I rejoined, "because the other I was about to mention is—by a miracle from Heaven!"

Anthony Hope wrote this capital tale in twenty days—almost a chapter a day. "The idea," he told me fifteen years ago, in London, "just came to me one autumn afternoon, when I was walking back to my chambers in the Temple. That was in November of 1893. If I should say that I put in the odd hours of the rest of that month on it I should be implying that my legal practice at that time was more extensive than it really was. . . . 'Zenda' is merely the ancient mistaken identity theme. The whole story resolves itself into that. In that book the familiar device happens to be raised to a higher power by the figure being made a king."

Though he never received a hint from actual life for the narrative of "Zenda" and had no knowledge of the life or the scenery of any German principality from actual observation when he wrote the book, he did have some vague memory that a description of a little German town which he had read long before was of a little service to him in making his picture of the capital of Ruritania. Otherwise the story had "just come" to him, and its enormous success when it was given to print amazed him past belief. "Incredibly so," he said, "for I had been writing for some time and nothing had happened," and he added, I remember, that "the essential and perfectly obvious difference between the old classic romantic school of Scott and Dumas and the romantic school of our time lies in the use of the much smaller canvas."

Nor is that difference confined to romanticism alone, I think.

play at the Valle theater, entitled "Don," by Filippo Marchese, was a great success. It represents a conflict between an old princely family and a family which bought its title with recently acquired wealth. Love affairs which end in the marriage of a daughter of the bankrupt prince to a son of the newly wealthy brings about a reconciliation.

The author was applauded warmly, but the greatest triumph was achieved by the leading actor, Angelo Musco.

The movies are attracting larger crowds than the theaters as the heat becomes intense. Many of the films are American. After a long absence William S. Hart is again holding large Roman audiences spellbound with some of his western pictures.

'Down with Monarchy,' Germans Cry at Play

By David Darrah.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, July 8.—[By Special Cable.]—Coming at a time of great national unrest and dealwith a similar period in England, Ernst Toller's "Machine Stormers" is proving a great sensation in its production at Reinhardt's Grossen Schauspielhaus. That continental Europeans take their drama seriously is more than amply proved when climaxing shouts such as "Down with monarchy" and "Down with Bavaria" fill the theater. A Socialist speaker at the close of one performance attempted to harangue the crowds on the street, exactly duplicating a scene from the play.

"Machine Stormers," while a sensation, lacks the dramatic interest and artistry of Toller's "Massenmench," which remains Berlin's finest drama. "Machine Stormers" deals with the Luddite rebellion in England, when workers stormed spinning machines because the introduction of machinery was causing unemployment. There is no love interest and few female rôles. As usual with Toller, an inspired poetic youth leads mobs which are tragically unsuccessful.

The Bavarian government announces for the annual Wagner festival a series of new plays by Welt, for which Americans pay five times the German rates. Karl Muck, formerly with the Boston Symphony orchestra, is general music director.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

when I had a little more money in hand I would found a dormitory; then after that, or more probably with it, a decent reading room and a library. After that, if I still had money over that I couldn't use, I would hire a professor and get some text books.

Dear Dead Jane Austen Makes the First Page.

Mr. Leacock has a chapter on the differences between the British and the American press. One very vivid difference is known by a clipping which I have of Augustine Birrell's review of a volume of stories by Jane Austen, just discovered, called "Love and Freindship (yes, that's the right spelling). The stories were written when Jane Austen was about 17 and are, according to the introduction by Gilbert K. Chesterton, rattling burlesques. Mr. Birrell's exuberance over the little book makes us eager for its American publication, which is to come soon. But that is beside the point. The startling thing is that a book can make the news columns. Mr. Birrell's article was given in the London Times a position equivalent to the northeast corner of page one, and had three captions, in lessening degrees of importance, "Elementary Jane," "A Novelist's Early Stories," and "The Inspiration of Laughter."

Yale Seniors Like Dickens Best.

Another college literary questionnaire. This time from Yale. The members of the senior class declared that they like Dickens best, that "The Tale of Two Cities" is their favorite novel, that their second choice is "If Winter Comes." "Crossing the Bar" is their favorite poem and Kipling's "If" is second.

"Unaccustomed as I Am——"

"How to Speak" is a little book that ought to be of much help to all of us who have to do any public speaking—and that means most all of us in this brass band city where we have to have trained vocal organs to be heard above the rattle of the busses and the gasping shrieks of the whistles on the less reticent motor trucks. It is written by Adelaide Patterson, who is professor of public speaking at the Rhode Island College of Education. It tells you how to cultivate your speaking voice and provides charts and diagrams of the insides of the human phonograph and then tells you how to use your voice after you have it cultivated.

There is the usual selection of "pieces" to practice on, though one must admit that they are not quite so usual as "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and "The Boy Stood on the Burning Deck." They include Kipling's "If" and other old favorites.

But, seriously, only the other day a young teacher was asking me whether or not I knew of any one who taught voice placement for the speaking voice. She said that her voice was so tired when the school day was over that she was sure she was not using it correctly. Almost like manna—"How to Speak" arrived.

A Lovely Piece of Writing by a Great and Good Man.

G. R. wants to know whether "Pierre and Luce" is like "Clerambault," which immediately preceded it. "If it is," he says, "I want to know it so that I needn't read it. I'm satiated with that type of Rolland, though I still think that 'Jean Christophe' is the greatest novel of the twentieth century."

ROMAIN ROLLAND.

"Pierre and Luce" has no more resemblance to "Clerambault" that a chocolate cannon has to Big Bertha. It is an intensely idyllic tale of the love of a boy and a girl, heightened by the knowledge that in six months the war will take Pierre. The war is present, but only as an external stimulant to the spiritual joys of the hero and heroine.

Belaureling the Brow of Mr. Broun.

If I were giving prizes for the best titles of the year I should certainly bestow a large and flourishing laurel wreath on the jaunty brow of Heywood Broun for his "Pieces of Hate." It is the best title I have ever seen for a volume of critical essays. It puts the reader in the most receptive mood, it disarms him, it gives him a sense of associating with some one who is fearless in his judgments, modest (he calls his efforts pieces, dismissing with a gesture the more austere and elegant designations of essays or criticisms, or reviews or what not). It suggests the buccaneers of literature. . . . It is, as we gently hinted, a perfect title. The only trouble with Mr. Broun's use of it is that it doesn't in any sense fit his book. He should have been more frugal with a title the like of which he will not find on land or sea again. He should have saved it.

The "Pieces" are all extremely pleasant, usually humorous things about books, prize fighters, college spirit, H. 3rd (being his son) and more college spirit. They are not remarkable, but they are fun—and that makes them worth reading. We read them aloud, laughed at least once in most of them, and decided that it was a shame that we didn't write something of the sort ourselves, which proves that they're much better than we think they are. It is only the poor stuff that doesn't make one think it is easy. The poor stuff creaks in the joints.

Verses—and Some Poetry.

The July number of Poetry is unusually cosmopolitan in its roster of contributors. There is Anna Wickham, who Louis Untermeyer says is writing the most interesting poetry that's being composed in England today by a woman. Her "The Contemplative Quarry" had more than the usual amount of praise and shocked disapproval.

Louis Golding, who is best known to us as the author of "Up from Babylon," a stirring story of the gropings of the lowly born Jew for higher things, has contributed "Full of Laughter."

Alfred Kreymborg, who changes his address as easily as most of us change ribbons in our typewriters, has a poem called "Pianissimo." That was written in the days when he was editing the Broom and being a leader in the group of American intelligensia in Rome. Since then he has quit the magazine business and is, I believe, making a sort of literary grand tour.

The Dutchman Wins—and Deserved To.

The John Newberry medal, for the author who has produced the most distinguished contribution to American literature for children during 1921, went without hesitation to Hendrik Willem Van Loon for his "Story of Mankind."

Woman's Work the World Over

Catherine Curtis is the first woman to enter the field of motion picture production as distinct from production.

Miss Emma R. Steiner, the only woman opera conductor in the country, is the only living kin of Barbara Frietchie.

Stella and Marjorie Rothwell, sisters, will soon open a law office in Boston. Both girls are recent graduates from a law school.

In Japan one can tell at a glance the age of any woman, for the dress worn by the Japanese woman is regulated by her age. How different here!

Nominated as a joke, Miss Susanne W. Salter, to the great surprise of herself and friends, was elected mayor of Norman, Okla.

Miss Irene Marti is England's first woman surveyor, she having just passed the final examination of the College of Estate Management.

Mrs. Mary A. McLane of Mobile, Ala., celebrated her one hundredth birthday by registering and qualifying to vote in the November election.

ART AND ARTISTS

Russian Artist Portrays Other Lands in Work

By Eleanor Jewett.

"Madonna and Child," one of the most interesting of the Spanish primitives in the anonymous loan collection that makes brilliant the great galleries downstairs in the Art institute.

OUT of Russia have come many strange things. Nearly always have they borne the Russian garmark. A something curious and cultivated, primitive though sophisticated, has stamped each product as unmistakably Russian. Leon Bakst, with his stage setting and costumes, barbaric, sensuous, and dramatic; Anisfeld, rich, sumptuous and compelling; these two seen in their paintings at the Art institute.

More recently the curious realism of Nicholas Roerich, portrayed in an extensive exhibit at the institute, and this year the colorful contortions of Natalia Goncharova excelling her more modernistic co-exhibitor Larionov at the Arts club.

Each truly Russian, nothing of another country limiting their claim to be intensely Russian.

Far otherwise is it with the painter whose exhibit opened last week at the institute, Alexandre Evguenievitch Iacovleff, Russian enough in name surely, but, in his paintings, distinctly the son of other lands. China and Greece, Spain and Italy, have taken a hand in his development. Of them all, China seems most apparent in his work. This probably, because the subjects chosen are for the most part of Chinese origin.

The curious childishness of the Russian is found here though. The quality that made Roerich's stage settings unforgettable crops out again in Iacovleff. The fantasy of fairy tales weaves a charm about such pictures for example as "Soochow in Moonlight" or "Boy Seaweed Fisher: Oshima."

But it is to the other canvases that one goes for exquisite realism. The "Chinse Woman" and the "Manchu Woman," "In the Café de la Rotonde" to chose the most realistic of all the group—these paintings show the power of this young Russian remarkably. His quality and texture in both skin and dress, the sharpness of his drawing, the elimination of the superflous, the vividness of treatment, the clarity of insight, the subdued perfection of color, these things stamp Iacovleff with genius.

Going from the first gallery in the east wing of the institute, the gallery where Iacovleff holds forth, into the further rooms, one finds the loan collections promised for the summer. Among them are many old friends. The Winslow Homer water colors are in a gallery by themselves. These are loaned by Martin A. Ryerson and each year make their appearance to the delight of city bound Chicagoans. The water colors are so full of the atmosphere of the open that for a few minutes in their presence one feels himself far from paved streets, paddling swift eastern waters or dipping to the slow swells of the Pacific in tiny native craft among palm fringed islands.

The galleries devoted to the paintings owned by the museum bring us up short before many a familiar canvas. The change of setting appreciably strengthens the appeal of most of these pictures. They look different, arranged in this new fashion. The gifts of the Friends of American Art make a famous showing installed as they are here.

The Cyrus McCormick loan collection is hung again this year, as are the collections of Paul Schulze, Edward B. Butler, and Charles L. Hutchinson. A few paintings from the collection of Cyrus McCormick Jr. strike a new note.

From the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick have been lent several beautiful canvases. The "Pagan Fountain," by Gaston La Touche, is probably one of the most celebrated. It is a lovely harmony of misted gold and shadowed red. The [illegible] of bronze leaves, yellow in the sun, is an entrancing background for the fountain itself. Nymphs and satyrs make sport in the pool, while up through the trees dance other figures, dryads, perhaps, who come, too, to bathe in the crystal waters.

The canvas by Frederick Frieseke, "An Interior," is the customary study in light tones, pale blues, and lavender with touches of pink, so readily associated with this artist's name. It is, however, a lovely thing.

As far apart as the poles in atmosphere is "Stars of the Future," by Roberto Domingo, from Frieseke's "Interior." The Spaniard has chosen to depict the training of young fighters for the bull ring. The baited animal whirls in distress at the tireless maneuverings of his young foes. The canvas is full of action and color and tense with the excitement of the chase.

Other paintings from this collection are "Summer at Malines," by Francesco Luigini; "On the Beach at Sitges," by Arcadio Mas y Fondavila; and "Portrait of a Woman," by Boldini.

The annual summer exhibit of water colors is still to be seen at the Palette and Chisel club. The club's summer camp near Fox lake is now open and many of the members are taking advantage of these pleasant days to paint there.

The Chicago Woman's club scholarship of one year's tuition at the Art institute was won by Andrehe Kaufmann of Austin; Miss Lenore Digman won second place in the competition.

The use of mechanical drawing tools is a new venture in the drawing of dress designs as taught at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts. Carl N. Werntz introduced it as an experiment, and the continued use is regarded in the light of an interesting laboratory idea by the students.

The cities of Benton Harbor and St. Joseph are making elaborate plans for a great International Fine Arts exposition to be held there from May to October in 1924.

In the competition for a memorial tablet held by the Art Students' War Relief association of the Art institute, the commission award and first prize of $150 was given to Josephine Kern, the second prize of $50 went to Helen Orb, and honorable mention to Ruth Sherwood. The tablet will be executed in bronze and marble and will be placed in the outer vestibule of the Ryerson library.

Learn While You Assemble—Anyone Can Do It

You will get pleasure and training by assembling your own Radio Outfit from the Assembio parts we furnish. But if you prefer to receive your outfit fully assembled, we will send it in that form at a slightly higher price.

A twelve-year-old boy can follow our simple directions and put the Assembio together in an hour. Holes are already drilled. Screws, bolts and all necessary tools are included.

Here is what you get: 1 Bakelite Panel; 1 Variable Condenser; 1 Coil—2 windings; 1 Set of Detector Parts; 1 Crystal, mounted; 1 Fixed Telephone Condenser; 1 Pair of Tel-Ohms Head-Telephones; 1 Wooden Base-Board; 1 Condenser Dial and Knob; 9 Binding Posts; Bolts, etc.; 1 Pair Pliers; 1 Screw Driver; and 1 Book of Instructions.

Our Book of Instructions not only tells you how to assemble and operate your own outfit, but it also explains in a simple, easy-to-understand way the basic principles of radio telephony.

When you feel that you have learned all about this crystal set and wish to experiment farther, you have only to add new parts to your Assembio Outfit. Look at it any way you will, the Assembio is the best and most economical outfit for the beginner, inexpensive, yet thoroughly dependable.

We Ship Your Set By Return Mail

Send in your order today with check or money order for $5. Be sure to state whether you desire your outfit unassembled or fully assembled. We will mail you the complete Assembio Outfit at once, prepaid and insured. When the postman delivers it, you pay him the remainder of the purchase price—$14.85 ($19.85 if fully assembled).

Order today. In a few days you can "listen in" on the free programs broadcasted from the local stations.

SHEILA KAYE-SMITH

HER LATEST NOVEL IS

Joanna Godden

THE CRITICS SAY:

"JOANNA GODDEN gives a new argument, and a strong one, to those who call the author the foremost woman novelist of England today."—Boston Herald.

"SHEILA KAYE-SMITH has more than arrived. She is established, for she seems to be able to follow one superlatively good book with another right on its heels."—N. Y. Tribune.

"JOANNA GODDEN is one of the memorable women of fiction, vivid, faulty, human, real through and through."—N. Y. Times.

"SHEILA KAYE-SMITH is a mistress of words and perceptions that rivet into the human heart."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"JOANNA GODDEN is the material of which masterpieces are made. . . . a now broadly humorous, now poignant, story of a woman's growth and completion."—Chicago Evening Post.

"SHEILA KAYE-SMITH is called the greatest living woman novelist in England. There is no particular reason why the word 'woman' should be included."—S. F. Argonaut.

Unprecedented Enthusiasm Shown Over Travel Book

Raymond-Whitcomb "Guide to Summer Travel" Breaks All Records

Travelers who like to solve their own summer travel problems are enthusiastically welcoming the new Raymond-Whitcomb "Guide to Summer Travel" which is truly a record breaking accomplishment in travel history.

Planning Made Easy

The oldest and largest American travel concern has made the preliminary planning of trips easy by supplying essential travel information in convenient form. To the man or woman who is obliged to travel alone or to visit some special place at a particular time it is indeed a boon. To the vacation seeker who desires the most from his outing without monotonous work beforehand it is welcome assistance. To the person who dislikes tedious detail and needless work in hot weather it is certainly a relief. A factor in the popularity of this unique travel book is the certainty which the use of it gives prospective travelers when making their plans. The information as compiled is backed by an experience of well over 40 years in supplying "the Best in Travel" to Americans.

Three Vital Questions

"Where can I go?"
"How long will it take?"
"How much will it cost?"

To these questions are given readable, usable answers, boiled down from the massed literature of more than 1,000 railroads, 100 steamship lines and 5,000 hotels. Resorts are described, routes shown and costs given. The journeys range from day trips to comprehensive tours with prices from a very few dollars to as large an amount as one cares to pay depending on the nature and length of travel.

Must Apply to Raymond-Whitcomb

A limited edition of the "Guide" is in process of distribution. While it lasts it may be obtained upon application which must be in person, by mail, telegraph or telephone to Raymond & Whitcomb Co.'s local office, 112 South Dearborn Street, Tel. State 6396.

The Meals Are Good

Folks who are particular about their meals will enjoy eating here. The food is good, the cooking is well done, and the prices, either table d'hote or a la carte, are distinctly fair.

Of course, the Rogers Park is an apartment hotel, and you can use your well-equipped kitchenette and eat in your own comfortable dining-room. But it's a comfort to know that our restaurant service is so good—it simplifies entertaining, for one thing.

We invite you to visit us, try a meal or two—the Rogers Park is especially convenient for those who drive north, for parking is unrestricted and there's ample room on Pratt Blvd.

So, come any time, and often. We'll be glad to see you.

MINEOLA HOTEL Fox Lake

A Week's Cruise to Duluth & Return

On the Big New Cruising Ship "North American"

$72.50

Meals & Berth Included

A WEEK OF JOYFUL RECREATION AND SIGHTSEEING

Chicago to Duluth and Return Via Lake Michigan, Mackinac Island, Locks at the "Soo," Beautiful St. Mary's River, Portage Canal, Lake Superior, Lake Huron and Georgian Bay (30,000 Islands).

Think of the pleasure on a warm, sultry day of leaving the heat and cares of the city behind you and gliding out into the cool, refreshing waters for a week's cruise through three great lakes and Georgian Bay—over 2,000 miles of beautiful scenery, shoreline, islands, rivers and bays—care-free, you will give yourself up to a spell of enjoyment—you will eat well and sleep well, and after a too quickly ending week you will return home thoroughly refreshed and invigorated. If you enjoy seeing places of interest, the numerous stops and short cruising distance from the shore, during the greater part of the trip, offer sights of wonder and beauty that are sure to please you. You can be quiet and secluded, if desired, or if you enjoy a real good time, there is the continual round of deck games, cards, etc., during the day, and dancing, musicales and other entertainments in the evening. Canopy covered garden on observation deck—Piano and Phonograph on every deck. Combined with all these pleasures, you will have conveniences and comforts on this magnificent steamer equal to those on the best Atlantic liners. Tempting food daintily served by waitresses neatly dressed in white.

The "North American" leaves Chicago every Monday at 2:00 P. M. (Central Time), traveling directly to Mackinac Island, where ample time is allowed to drive around the island and visit the many historical points of interest. Leaving Mackinac Island, she enters the beautiful St. Mary's River, noted for its 50 miles of wonderful scenic features, and stops at Sault Ste. Marie. Here you pass through the big canal and see the immense ships raised and lowered through the locks, next to the largest in the world.

Leaving the "Soo," you enter Lake Superior and head via Portage Canal for Houghton (Hancock), home of the famous copper mines; then on to Duluth. After spending several hours in that city of beautiful parks and homes, the return is made, again through Sault Ste. Marie and into Lake Huron, then into Georgian Bay, passing close to many of the 30,000 Islands and stopping at Parry Sound. From there directly to Mackinac Island and Chicago, arriving home Monday morning—a week's vacation that brings you back rested and feeling fine.

Call or write for pamphlet "A" and full information about this wonderful trip.

BUY A GOOD USED CAR AT YOUR OWN PRICE

Starting Monday, July 10th, for one week, used cars will be sold by this company on the following plan:

Come in and select the car that best suits your requirements, take it out and demonstrate it to your complete satisfaction, then—NAME YOUR OWN PRICE. If, at the end of the week, we have received no higher bid than yours, the car will be sold to you at your figure.

SELECT from $50,000 STOCK

In this enormous sale you will undoubtedly find a car which will give you miles of splendid service on a very reasonable original investment. Our present stock, all of which will be sold during this sale, includes completely rebuilt Coles and other well known makes, and also cars which are just as they were received by us on the trade-in. The following list will give you some idea of the exceptional opportunity this sale affords any one who is looking for genuine values in used cars:

Reo Roadster,
Chandler Touring,
Kissel Sedan,
Haynes Brougham,
Renault Coupe,
Reo Sedan,
Cole Sedan,
Willys Six Tour.,
Cole Coupe,
Cole Roadster,
and Many Others.

Arrangements can be made regarding monthly payments and you can take the car out before making your bid. Business is going to be good, so you had better come in NOW.

FORD AND DODGE CARS

"Sold with a Guarantee."

CASH OR TERMS.

Everyone owes himself or his family the pleasure of a motor car. You can combine business and pleasure in the use of one. Buy one of our DEPENDABLE Bargains; not a luxury, but a safe, SANE investment.

1921 FORD TOURING. AS USUAL, THIS car we offer is in perfect condition; fully equipped with starter, dem. rims, wheel lock, extra tire, tube, and has the appearance of new. $325.

1920 DODGE TOURING. A beautiful car, its original finish being in A-1 condition, which, by no means surpasses its mechanical qualification. A word to the wise is sufficient. $565.

1920 FORD TOURING. One of those cars that has been well cared for. The motor, starter, battery, upholstering, finish, etc., are all in fine condition. $275.

1918 DODGE TOURING. At a glance one can tell that this car is something different, something better. The original finish shines like new. Top and side curtains smooth running as a mouse. Extras are bumper, spotlight, gear-shift lock, special radiator, lock cap, and extra tire and tube. $450.

1918 FORD TOURING. This particular car is the kind of bargain that you can only get at our showroom. In good set of tires, wheel lock, and spotlight; overhauled in our own well equipped shop. $185.

1918 DODGE TOURING. If you are looking for real value in a smooth running, nice appearing car, this is the opportunity of a lifetime. Has new top, good tires, and a spare. A real bargain. $435.

1920 FORD SEDAN. Like all our cars, this one is far above the average insofar as condition and appearance are concerned. Has starter, dem. rims, fine tires, and double Hassler shock absorbers. $445.

1920 DODGE SEDAN. Has been little and carefully used and is in perfect condition; has good set of tires, one extra, spring bumpers both front and rear. Special. $890.

1920 FORD COUPE. One look at this car is sufficient to prove to you that it has been kept in competent hands. Starter, dem. rims, vizor, heater, speedometer, and wheel lock are only a few of the extras it has. $385.

1919 DODGE COUPE. A very desirable, roomy coupe in unusually good condition. Has been overhauled and repainted right in our own shop and is all ready to go. $650.

1921 FORD COUPE. A wonderful car on which the upholstering and finish show little use and careful attention it has had. Fully equipped; starter, dem. rims, extra tire, spring bumper, Perry lock, special lenzes. $450.

1920 DODGE COUPE. If you were acquainted with our business policies and guarantee, to tell you this car has been refinished and rebuilt in our own well equipped shop would be sufficient to justify your immediate action. This three passenger car is deeply upholstered in purple velour, has five wire wheels, and not only looks but will perform like new. See it today. $850.

1920 FORD COUPE. This exceptional car is equipped with five House wire wheels, five good tires, bijfer bumper, spotlight, etc., body finish very good. It is necessary to see this to appreciate its true value. $475.

1917 DODGE ROADSTER. In very good cond. The appearance good, motor fine, starter, generator, speedometer all in good shape. Guaranteed. $325.

1918 FORD ROADSTER. A refinished car in good mech. cond. Top, upholstering, and tires show little sign of wear. $145.

1917 DODGE TOURING. Still has good original finish. Motor, axle, etc., guaranteed perfect. Only $275.

1921 FORD ROADSTER. Cond. perfect; appearance new, starter, dem. rims, wheel lock, etc. Small delivery box on rear. Bargain. $275.

1922 FORD ROADSTER. Driven only 2 months; original finish like new. Real late '22 special. $335.

SPECIAL RACER FORD. With all equipment for speed and comfort. Has Ralph valve in head, light weight, stationary, counterbalanced crank shaft, and 3 to 1 gears in rear end. $395.

We always have a complete stock of Ford and Dodge cars on hand.

WILLS Sainte Claire's Reconditioned Cars

Stearns-Knight, Sport, 1922. Run only about 3,000 miles, equipt with wire wheels, bumpers, wind wings and other extras. It can hardly be told from new. A wonderful looking car at the price cannot afford to pass up this opportunity.

Lexington Phaeton with California top, bumpers, spot light, etc. In addition to being in wonderful mechanical condition, has just come out of paint shop a rich dark blue with ivory stripe.

Franklin Brougham, equipped with wire wheels, cord tires, bumpers, etc. This light, economical car is in A1 mechanical condition and has been finished in a Franklin green; priced right to sell quickly.

Reo 4 pass., with winter top, good tires, and in good mechanical condition, for only $350.

Wills Sainte Claire Phaeton, in A1 mechanical condition; just repainted a rich maroon. These cars are so seldom found for sale they do not last long.

AT THE

Peerless Motor Car Co.

OF ILLINOIS.

PEERLESS — LIMOUSINE, MODEL 56. This is the standard 7 passenger limousine; in excellent condition. It has been well cared for by one of Chicago's most prominent families and is a car that shows the exceptional care and attention that it has always had. It is equipped with 5 excellent cord tires, spring bumpers, motometer, and other extras. This direct branch of the Peerless Motor Car Company will recommend this car in any one who is looking for a high grade limousine for either private, taxi, or livery work. Fully a very fine car at a price that is way below the market value. Special for this sale, $500.

PEERLESS—TOURING, 1918. This is our standard 7 passenger touring car, in most excellent mechanical condition. It is running as smoothly and quietly as a high grade car of this type should. It is painted a beautiful shade of dustproof gray and is equipped with an excellent set of cord tires and one extra. It has considerable of other equipment. If you are looking for a high grade, up to date touring car that is above the average in condition and one that will go out and perform, we would suggest your immediate inspection of this car. Special for this sale, $650.

PEERLESS SEDAN LIMOUSINE, 1918. A beautiful 7 passenger inclosed car that can be used either as a limousine or a sedan. Would make an ideal car for either private or livery work. It is coming into our hands in exceptionally fine condition. The paint, which is a Peerless blue, is very good condition. Mechanically it will go to our and give many miles of very satisfactory service. It is equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, 5 extra, Westinghouse shock absorbers, and many other extras. If you are looking for a high grade car that is above the average in condition, this car will surely meet your requirements. We are offering it at a price that is way below the market value and would suggest your early action to us immediately if you are interested in the purchase of an unsurpassed value in a Peerless car. Special for this sale, $650.

PEERLESS TOURING, 1917. This car we consider will be one of the best bargains in a Peerless Touring car that we have ever offered. It is painted a beautiful shade of green with white wire wheels; extra wire wheel, and a very fine set of cord tires. The equipment is very complete, and if you could see it you would agree that it is a car that has always had first class care and attention. This is the first car of this series we have had to offer for some time and feel that we are very fortunate in being able to get at such an exceptional price. Cars of this series are very scarce and sell rapidly. For this reason if you are looking for a good dependable high grade car that will outperform and outlast anything that you might buy new at the same price, this car will meet your requirements. Special for this sale, $550.

PEERLESS COUPE, 1921. This is our standard 4 passenger coupe and a car that is coming into our hands in such condition that we have not found it necessary to do anything to it, either mechanically, paint, or trim. It is an exceptional car both in appearance and performance. We will carry the standard warranty of the Chicago Branch of the Peerless Motor Car Company and we believe that if you will come and look over this car that you could not invest your money in any automobile that would give you the satisfaction that this car will give you, in point of service and performance, it is worth many times the price we are asking for it. The equipment is very complete, including set of seat covers, bumper, front and rear, motometer, and many other extras. This car is being priced below the market value, so if you would avail yourself of one of the best bargains we have ever offered act quickly. Special for this sale, $1,750.

ELGIN SEDAN, 1921 MODEL. In excellent mechanical condition. Original paint in reasonably good condition. Velour upholstery in very good condition. Equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, good spare, 5 spring bumpers, heater, motometer, etc. A bargain, $1,090.

PAIGE LIGHT 6 PASS. 6 CYL. 1919, 6-39. Entirely rebuilt by us and carries our guarantee. Repainted deep maroon color, five wire wheels in white. Brand new top, upholstery in excellent condition. A smooth running economical little car that is easy riding and easy to drive. Equipped with 5 good tires, built-in lock, front and rear bumpers, and ready to use. Price $675.

KISSEL SEDAN, MODEL "SIX-45"—Refinished in Brewster Green and is in mechanical condition that we know it can be depended upon to give very satisfactory service. It is roomy, full 5 passenger, smooth running, and equipped with 5 good tires, bumper, etc. A Kissel bargain at $425.

PAIGE SPORT, 1921 MODEL 6-44. Lightweight, roomy 7 passenger. Rebuilt by us; carries our guarantee. Repainted mouse gray. Top and and upholstery excellent. Has a very good set of cord tires, 2 bumpers, motometer, lock, extra tire, etc. Identical in appearance to our current "6-44" model. Economical, quiet running, and particularly easy riding. Price $1,350.

PAIGE SPORT, 6-55, LARCHMONT. This car has been rebuilt by us and carries our guarantee. It has been refinished Paige Maroon. Top and upholstery are in excellent condition. Has bumper, motometer, built-in lock, power tire pump, and represents a smart, trim appearance as it is the well known low hung Paige Sport model and is type offered for sale. Will give you the maximum comfort, deep soft cushions, long cantilever rear springs and the smooth running Continental engine. Extremely good value, $1,050.

JORDAN TOURING, 1920 MODEL. We have thoroughly overhauled this car and refinished it in a dull maroon color. Mechanically we believe it will render highly satisfactory service for a long period. Has the dependable Continental Engine and equipped with spring bumper, 5 excellent tires, seat covers, etc. This car looks and runs like new and in appearance satisfies the eye as a new car. If you are interested in a light 5 passenger car that is ridiculously low priced, see this Jordan bargain today. Price $975.

PAIGE SEDAN 7 PASS., 1920, MODEL 6-55. This is a roomy 7 passenger car. The velour upholstery, which is clean, is in very good condition. Has 5 good cord tires, bumper, motometer. It has been completely overhauled in our shops, refinished, and can hardly be told from new. Specially priced at $1,475.

PAIGE 6-66, 1921, "LAKEWOOD" 7 PASS. This is our popular "6-66" Touring model and presents the appearance of a new automobile. Has plenty of reserve power, is easy riding, and amazingly easy to handle. We have refinished it standard blue, renickeled bright parts and thoroughly rebuilt the chassis in our shops. Car carries our guarantee. Equipped with special Bird-Sykes California Winter Inclosure, 5 excellent tires, bumper, Hartford shock absorbers, and Rudge-Whitworth head lamps. This is your opportunity to buy a car that will serve you well the year round. Price $1,575.

PACKARD

LOCOMOBILE TOURING, MODEL 6-38. This car was traded in on one of our new Packard Twin Six cars. It has always been under the care of an extremely competent chauffeur, who was very particular as to its condition. It is in splendid shape and is practically a duplicate of the new Locomobile of today, and we believe it to be equal to new in every respect and will give the ideal car for a long tour this summer, as it is in excellent mechanical condition and very well equipped as to tires, etc. Unusual exceptional unusual running Locomobile can be purchased at a price that is considerably under its real intrinsic value, $650.

MERCER ROADSTER, LATE 1920 MODEL. This fast high powered quality car is built for fast and rough going. Body and wheels are refinished in dark maroon, with fenders and chassis in black enamel. Equipment consists of 6 cord tires, 5 spare, wire wheels, heavily nickeled radiator and headlamps, shock absorbers, motometer, radiator wings, and spotlight. This wonderful Sport Roadster has been fully rebuilt by us and represents remarkable value at our price of $2,250.

STEARNS-KNIGHT TOURING CAR, 1920 MODEL. It is rarely that we are privileged to offer for sale a car in such condition as this one. The former owner had several cars and consequently the mileage has been exceptionally low. We have made a thorough examination of it and made all minor adjustments necessary. It has been refinished in a special shade of Dustproof Gray and puts up the appearance of new throughout; $1,200.

PEERLESS COUPE, LATE 1921 MODEL. This car has hardly been used and is like new throughout. The upholstery is dark green broadcloth which harmonizes perfectly with the green body and wheels. Most completely equipped, with sun visor, motometer, bumper, spare tire, and cover, etc. We believe this to be the equal to new in every respect and our price offers a substantial saving at $2,250.

PACKARD TWIN SIX TOURING, MODEL 2-35. Both the motor and chassis have been thoroughly overhauled by us and the entire car refinished in standard Packard Blue, with cream yellow wheels. The equipment is very complete and includes an extra set of Cord tires. This is the first car of this model we have had available for some time, and we advise to call early inspection, as it is priced exceptionally low at $1,000.

Electric Dishwasher for Every Guest

Above is the newest Edgewater hostelry, the Hotel Judson, now being erected at 5030 Sheridan road, told about in these columns recently. It will cost $1,750,000, and was designed by H. L. Stevens & Co. Its name is a combination of Edward S. Judd's and Harry Guy Ganson's, president of the Judson Hotel company. Mr. Ganson will operate the new hotel, which will open next May.

It will have a completely equipped playground on the roof, with an instructor, where mothers may leave their youngsters while they are shopping or moviegoing. There'll be a fully equipped commissary, so guests may purchase supplies, including cooked foods. All but a few of the ninety apartments of three and four rooms will have kitchenettes. There'll be a separate entrance for baby carriages, with perambulator storage space for every family which needs it.

Every suite will have an electric dish washing machine, and all kitchens will be mechanically ventilated. There'll also be a complete laundry for guests as well as for hotel work. For those who don't care to cook their own meals there'll be a large and elaborate dining room. Four first floor shops will front on Sheridan road. The entrance to the lobby will be through a conservatory.

PLAN $400,000 COMMUNITY CLUB FOR WOODLAWN

15 Organizations Back of Big Project.

BY AL CHASE.

Woodlawn's 100,000 residents are going to have a $400,000 community clubhouse at a point as near the geographical and population center as it is possible to build it. The project is being pushed by a group of fifteen big Woodlawn organizations, business, social, philanthropic, and political, which apparently assures its being carried through to completion when the campaign for funds begins in the fall.

As a result of a survey made some time ago by the Y. M. C. A. it was found that the exact geographical and population center was at University and 64th. The four corners at this point are now improved with the Masonic temple, the Hayes hotel, and two big flat buildings, so a suitable site near by is now being looked for.

A Tank 'n' Everything.

Architects Zimmerman, Saxe & Zimmerman have drawn tentative sketches of a three story structure which call for an auditorium seating 1,000, with a complete stage, suitable for dances, amateur plays, and other community gatherings. There'll be a large swimming tank, a big gymnasium, club, game, and committee rooms; a library and reading room, and other popular features.

"The movement has been under way for some time," said Everett Frain, chairman of the community council, made up of representatives of the various organizations back of the project. "At present most of the heads of the different clubs and associations are away for the summer, so no definite steps can be taken, but we're getting things into shape and by fall probably will start a rapid fire campaign of a few weeks to get things actually started.

Special Appeal to Youngsters.

"We feel sure it will have the support of everyone in Woodlawn, for it'll supply a long felt need in the shape of a community center. We expect to make a special appeal to the young people of Woodlawn. We'll make it a place of recreation and amusement for the boys and girls who want to swim, dance, and have a good time generally; for the Camp-Fire Girls, the Boy Scouts, and various other activities of that sort.

"It'll be maintained like final center; that is, a nominal fee will be charged for the various activities and not one fee covering all, but even then we figure there'll be a deficit of $5,000 or $10,000 a year, and we believe that such a shortage will prove a good thing. It means we can go back to the Woodlawn people who are standing behind us and while asking for additional support explain our work once more and keep their interest alive in the project."

Who's Back of It.

The following organizations are behind the Woodlawn Community clubhouse project: Woodlawn Business Men's association, Lions' club, Kiwanis club, Woodlawn Men's club, Woodlawn Women's club, Sixth Ward League of Women Voters, Woodlawn Study club, Woodlawn Fellowship club, four Parent-Teachers' associations, Woodlawn Improvement association, Woodlawn Property Owners' association, Woodlawn Park club, and the University of Chicago.

The Woodlawn Park club, one of the neighborhood's oldest organizations, lost its clubhouse a year ago by fire and may possibly arrange to have new quarters in the community center.

The district to be served by the new clubhouse is bounded on the north by the Midway, on the west by South Park avenue, 67th street on the south, and on the east by Jackson park. It is planned to cover this territory intensively in the autumn drive for funds, the idea being to have as many medium sized subscriptions as possible rather than a few large ones.

South Wabash Avenue Improvement

George C. Nimmons & Co. have designed the $500,000 twelve story addition to the Central Market Furniture building, at 1414 South Wabash avenue. Work will start at once, with the expectation of completion for the winter market in January. More is told about this in an adjacent column.

SHERIDAN ROAD FACADE TO SHOW BOUL MICH RELIEF

Work will start next week on a $50,000 two story building on the west side of Sheridan road, 300 feet south of Albion street, to be built and managed by Harry Goldstine & Co., who were the brokers in the purchase of the site from H. H. Goodrich, for a reported $50,000.

Architects Ronneberg, Pierce & Hauber have designed a striking facade of colored terra cotta. Along the top will be a bas relief showing Michigan avenue from the Blackstone to the public library. At one end will be shown old Fort Dearborn, and at the other the present and proposed improvements on the site of the old fort.

There'll be three shops on the first floor and three more on the second, each with a kitchenette apartment in the rear for the shop owners. Completion is set for Oct. 1. Bernard Kirschbaum is owner.

Buys Oscar G. Foreman's Highland Park 'Wildwood'

B. K. Goodman, president of B. K. Goodman & Co., mortgage bankers, has bought Wildwood, the Highland Park residence of Oscar G. Foreman, chairman of the board of directors of the Foreman Brothers Banking company. The price is understood to have been around $30,000. It is a nine room colonial residence standing on a three acre tract at Hazel and Linden avenues.

May Build Skyscraper at Madison and Clark

Negotiations are under way, according to the Economist, for the acquisition of the property at 72-76 West Madison and 3-5 North Clark, containing 9,960 square feet, which is expected to result within a few years in the construction of a twenty-one story building. The property belongs to E. W. Morrison, and is in charge of the Chicago Title and Trust Co., trustee.

PLAN $200,000 BANK BUILDING ON ROOSEVELT

Another bank for the west side. Herman Elenbogen, vice president and cashier of the West Side National bank, and S. B. Komalko, insurance agent, have bought 100x110 feet of vacant at the northwest corner of Roosevelt road and Central Park avenue and are having plans drawn for a two story bank and office building, to cost 200,000. Details of the organization of the new bank, to occupy the first floor, will be given out later. The Independent Realty company was broker in buying the site. The buyers will not disclose the name of the architect.

Commerce Body Urges Part of Bubbly Creek Be Closed

The Chicago Association of Commerce, acting on recommendations made by its civic industrial committee, has indorsed the proposal to close 1,000 feet of the west arc of the south fork of the south branch of the Chicago river, running from its terminus at Ashland avenue to a point just north of the proposed line of the new widened Pershing road.

The Pershing Road association has pointed out that unless this useless bit of Bubbly creek is filled in, a bridge costing probably several hundred thousand dollars will have to be built. A bill now in congress declares this portion of the river non-navigable and efforts are being made by Chicagoans to have it passed.

FURNITURE ROW TO GET $500,000 12 STORY ANNEX

Work to Start at Once on New Building.

Chicago's prestige as a great furniture market is to get a healthy boost through the erection of a $500,000 twelve story annex to the Central Market Furniture building at 1414 South Wabash avenue.

Glen E. Dewey, for whom the Central Market Furniture building was built and who has been operating that as an exhibition building ever since, has just completed arrangements with P. J. Quigley, representing the Bucklen estate, for the erection of a building adjoining the present structure on the south.

Name It Dewey Building.

George C. Nimmons & Co. have designed a building to front fifty feet on Wabash and with a depth of 145 feet. It will be called the Dewey building. It will be of steel construction, with terra cotta front and with shops on the lower floors.

"Every need and convenience of the furniture trade and visiting buyers will be provided for," said Mr. Dewey, "among which will be new features of an educational character emphasizing the possible artistic and harmonious effects not only in the design of the individual pieces of furniture, but the grouping of the same in various rooms in which they are intended to be used."

Plan Convention Hall.

The top floor will be devoted to club dining rooms and a large convention hall for the furniture industry.

According to Mr. Dewey the demand for exhibition space in Chicago for housing and displaying the samples of furniture as manufactured in Chicago and outside cities, exceeds the present capacity.

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the Chicago Furniture Market association held on June 23, the project of Mr. Dewey was indorsed.

Chicago by far the largest furniture manufacturing center in the world, still ranks behind Grand Rapids, Mich., as a market. The Michigan city has approximately twenty-eight separate buildings for displaying furniture. Chicago has seven or eight.

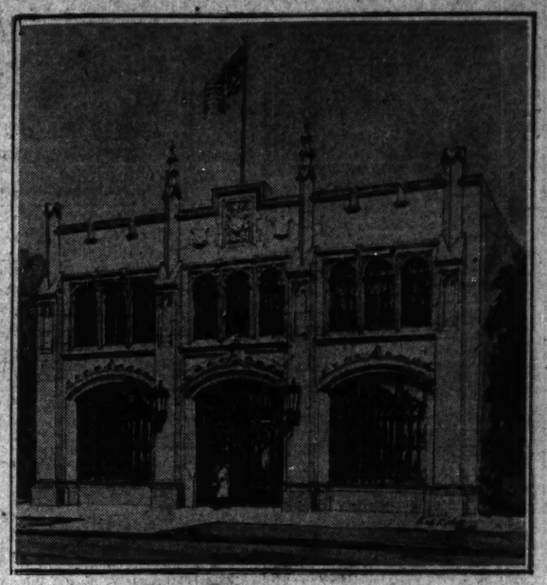
South End Realty Club Is Formed by Real Estate Men

Real estate men in the district south of 63d, between State and the lake, have organized the South End Real Estate club, with a view to calling attention of outside interests to the rapid growth of that section, and also to promote a greater civic interest among the residents. L. J. Carroll has been named president; J. L. Hess, vice president; Oliver Tupes, secretary; George Reinecke, treasurer. The directors are: Peter Foote, Thomas Wall, Charles Ringer, William Bryar, Edward Lenden, Raymond Grattan, Arthur G. Blair and Richard Cramer. Charles Burke is temporary chairman of the publicity committee.

WRIGLEY BUILDING LEASE.

Stanley J. Slack of Slack & Meyers, representing the Produce and Kedney company, is negotiating a lease for 6,000 square feet in the Wrigley building for five years at a total rental reported to be over $50,000.

Does This Look Like a Garage?



Does the above look like a garage? We'll say it doesn't. And as that was the intention of owner and architect—to camouflage it—it's an interesting little story. George Prenzler wanted to put up a garage at 5712-14 Ridge avenue. The neighbors wouldn't listen to it. Mr. Prenzler declared it would be such a high class garage that it would take a Sherlock Holmes to tell what it really was—from the outside.

"Show us!" chorused the neighbors, and Mr. Prenzler hurried to Architect Eric E. Hall and told him his woes.

"That's the robin's raincoat," said Mr. Hall, and a few hours later he gave Mr. Prenzler a sketch of the proposed garage, shown above. One look satisfied the neighborhood, and work will start at once. It'll cost $80,000, is designed in the English Gothic type of architecture, and will be of white terra cotta; will be 50x125, two stories, fireproof, and will handle 125 cars.

GILBERT F. WOODS MADE COLONEL IN OFFICERS' RESERVE CORPS, U. S. A.

Gilbert F. Woods of Gilbert F. Woods & Co., realtors, yesterday was notified by Adjutant General Samuel G. Jones as follows:

"By direction of the President you are appointed in the Officers' Reserve corps, U. S. army, effective this date, in the grade and section shown in the address above. By order of the Secretary of War."

GILBERT F. WOODS

At the same time he received the following letter from L. D. Gasser, secretary, general staff, war department. "My dear Colonel: It is with considerable pleasure that I address you by this title, which I understand is to be tendered you in the mails today by the adjutant general. It may be that you will never be called to active service. However, that matters little so long as you are identified with the service for which you did so much during the world war and should an emergency arise, the war department is sure to have a man who is fully competent to handle the real estate problems which were so badly muddled at the beginning of the last war before you organized the real estate service of the war department.

Col. Woods, who lives at 3937 North Hamlin avenue, was awarded the Distinguished Service medal for "exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service" for his real estate work during the war. The problem of obtaining all real estate needed by the war department, except in the A. E. F., was in Mr. Woods' hands. He held the position of director of real estate service from June 15, 1918, to Feb. 14, 1920.

FILM COUP ENDS FAMOUS PLAYERS THEATER RUMOR

J., L. & S. Get Paramount at New McVicker's.

An interesting angle to the movie war has developed in the announcement that Jones, Linick & Schaefer will show Paramount pictures exclusively at the new McVicker's. This settles the rumor of a Famous Players-Lasky theater and the same time assures a lively battle when McVicker's opens in the fall.

Aaron Jones, when he first heard rumors that Balaban & Katz were negotiating for the Roosevelt, stepped down to Gotham and tied up the Paramount pictures for his new house. It is understood that J., L. & S. are going to concentrate all their movie efforts on the palatial new McVicker's and eventually give up their other two Madison street picture houses.

Mr. Jones recently remarked, as quoted in this department, that the day of the small movie was over. He also added that there wasn't a million street film house that was making money, and as his firm is operating several he ought to know something about the situation. Jones, Linick & Schaefer already have control of two of their loop houses, the Randolph and the Bijou.

In a recent story about the lease of the Randolph by Universal it was stated the rental was said to be $2,500 a week. This would total $780,000 for the five year term. When the lease was filed for record it was found the rental is $9,500 a month, or $570,000 for five years. Anyway, $114,000 a year is a pretty stiff rental to pay for a small house like the Randolph, when comparison is made with figures in some of the larger houses.

The McVicker's Theater company has given a trust deed to the Standard Trust company for $400,000, five years at 7 per cent, secured by the playhouse property on Madison street on which the new McVicker's is now being built.
